A. F. L. Fails To Discipline Lewis, Allies In Labor Split

Hearings on Issue Begin Here Today

Green Informs President Toilers' Plight Worse Since NRA Demise.

By Sidney Olson.

Labor's united front remained united on the surface, if not in fact, last night as the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, in a tense three-hour session, delayed until next week action as to John L. Lewis and 11 rebel unions aligned with his United Mine Workers.

President William Green of the A. F. of L. said the council would not decide finally until next week its course in the Federation dissension provoked by Lewis' insistence on industrial as opposed to craft unions.

Green earlier told President Roosevelt in a White House conference the death of NRA "was followed by a destruction of labor standards on a scale never precedented in our history."

Wages of 15,000 Cut.

He reported to the President code-junking had brought wage-cutting, abandonment of overtime rates, return to child labor and resumption of home work and "the stretch out" throughout industries of the Nation. His figures showed 4,576,501 workers were affected by the breakdown of labor standards that ensued in the ten months after May 27, 1935.

Directly following his visit, the Endicott-Johnson Corporation, of Endicott, N. Y., employing 19,000 workers, announced a 10 per cent reduction for salaried employes, effective August 1. Collapse of the NRA was blamed.

Green, admitting reporters to the council room at 5:30 p. m., after the strenuous session, told them each of the insurgent members of Lewis' group, the Committee for Industrial Organization, would be given a formal hearing before the council, beginning today at 10 a. m. with the United Mine Workers.

However, none of the C. I. O. unions has accepted the invitation to be heard by the council. Several have pleaded illness or unavoidable absence of key officers as excuses for nonattendance. It is known that Lewis and several other insurgent chieftains have no intentions of appearing.

Question Passed Over.

Green said the council had not considered the question, passing it over until early next week, at the conclusion of the "hearings" at which the defendants will not appear. However, the council had met for three hours. Agenda for the meeting showed the C. I. O. matter listed first. Little else, apparently, had been accomplished during the day.

The only action taken was the granting of a charter to the American Newspaper Guild. Before the charter is formally extended, however, Green said representatives of allied trades, such as printing, would be called together in a conference to outline jurisdictional and other matters.

Observers said members had argued the matter more or less violently before deciding to grant the "hearings." For one thing, Green had promised the council would "take up" the matter today. At least 11 members have decided to oust Lewis and his groups at the first opportunity, unofficial polls showed. Veteran labor newsmen said possibly other counsel prevailed and the decision was delayed 90.

Kidnaping a Hoax, Boy, 9, Confesses

A 9-year-old boy, picked up on a highway in nearby Maryland last night, confessed a complete hoax in his original story that he had been kidnaped by a colored man, from whom he subsequently escaped.

The boy—Robert Lawson—was found walking near Glenmont, Md., by Mr. and Mrs. Phil Darling, of Blair, Md., who took him to the police station in Silver Spring.

Police last night were awaiting the arrival of District welfare authorities.

Rockefeller Eats Cake, Drives Over Estate on 97th Birthday

Founder of Standard Oil Companies Receives Congratulations, Predicts He Will Live to Be 100; 'Deeply Touched' by Messages.

By the Associated Press.

Lakewood, N. J., July 8.—John D. Rockefeller, sr., 97 today, cut a big birthday cake, predicted again that he would live to be 100, and then donned a tropical sun helmet to go outdoors despite a temperature of 92 in the shade.

"Although his birthday is one of the two events he annually celebrates—the other is the anniversary of his first job—the aged multimillionaire did not let it interfere with his daily nap after dinner or his daily afternoon automobile ride.

Dressed in a light-colored lightweight suit and wearing the helmet, he was driven about his estate, Golf House. Twenty miles of roads traverse the 500 acres within the walls of the estate and the automobile stayed within the gates.

During the forenoon he replied to messages of congratulations, declaring they were "wonderful and besutiful" and he was "deeply touched."

He arose early, as is his custom, and after breakfast sat in a

Tear Gas Sent To Strike Area; Rand Defiant

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Middletown, Conn., July 8.—Tear gas was shipped into the Remington-Rand strike area tonight as Gov. Wilbur L. Cross cut his vacation short to intervene in the crisis.

Orders went out to more than 100 State and local police officers to club strikers who attempted to molest workers leaving the plant, where a strike has been in progress for more than six weeks.

Meantime, James H. Rand, jr., president of the typewriter manufacturing company, declared he would have no dealings with labor organizations in his plant. Neither, he said, would he recognize the authority of the national labor relations board to take up union complaints against his branch at Buffalo, N. Y.

Hurling defiance at the unions which have either halted or impaired operations at some of his branch plants, Rand said:

"I will continue to operate the plants on an open shop basis. I will close them down completely rather than give in to the union. But I don't believe that will be necessary. Of the eight plants now operating, six of them are producing at 95 per cent capacity, or better."

Rand said he would "absolutely refuse to recognize the authority" of the National Labor Relations Board at Buffalo. "The constitutionality of the act creating the regional labor board has been undermined by the Guffey coal decision," he said.

Even as he spoke, Gov. Cross hurried back to the State capitol in

Noted Actor in Silent Era Succumbs After Illness of Several Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 8.—Thomas Meighan, famed screen actor, died tonight at his Great Neck, Long Island, home.

He had been ill for some time and lapsed into a coma several hours before his death. His wife was with him at the end.

The final illness of the actor began several weeks ago when he was confined to his home, but relatives reported that his condition was not considered dangerous.

His ailment was recurrent and several months ago caused him to make a trip to the West Coast to recuperate after an attack.

Sense of Humor.

Thomas Meighan was Pittsburgh's gift to a movie public which liked its heroes definitely on the strong-arm side.

He was handsome, stood 6 feet 1 inch, carried his roles easily and had a fine sense of humor easily expressed in pantomime in the days before the screen found a voice.

His parents had every hope their son would be a doctor, but the closest he ever got to the medical profession was an occasional role of doctor by the grace of the casting director.

Success attended his efforts on the stage prior to his entry into motion pictures in 1916, but the work which "made" him as an actor for the American public was a film called "The Miracle Man." From the moment of its release it proved a box office smash.

Meighan's career was mapped out for him. He did not falter in taking

Firm Defies D. C. Pinball Ban; Plans Test in Legality Fight

Desiring to make a test case of the illegality of pinball machines, the Pioneer Novelty Distributing Corporation, one of the largest purveyors of the devices in the District, will continue to operate its machines beyond the 48-hour deadline set yesterday.

The decision, announced last night by the novelty company's attorney, Jeff Lichtenberg, is in open defiance of an order issued yesterday by United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, banning all pinball machines which pay off in any manner.

Garnett, in a letter, notified Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown to confiscate all such devices as "evil chattels" found in operation 48 hours after the owners or renters have been notified. Maj. Brown ordered patrolmen of every precinct to give such notices. Police have been permitting the operation of the machines under the theory that pinball games involve a measure of skill.

7,500 of the devices are scattered in the District, in drug stores, confectioneries, cigar stores, restaurants and skill-game centers. Those operated solely for the players' amusement, paying off nothing, are excluded from the confiscation order.

Garnett, in his letter to Brown, said he and his staff, after careful consideration, had reached the conclusion that all pinball games which automatically pay off in slugs, coins, tokens or merchandise are gambling games and in violation of the law.

Hundreds of the operators have purchased their machines outright. Others run them on a percentage basis with distributing corporations. The Pioneer Novelty Co., with offices at 414 H street northeast, leases and sells the pinball devices, but

Banker Asks Gold Increase In U. S. Dollar

Platt Tells Institute Plan Would Balk Credit Inflation.

Holds Devaluation Was Wanton; Sees Threat by France.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 8.—A moderate increase in the gold content of the dollar as a means of preventing runaway credit inflation was advocated here today by Edmund Platt, vice president of the Marine Midland Group, Inc., of New York, and former vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. Platt was a speaker at a round table conference on credit control at the Institute of Public Affairs of the University of Virginia.

Calling attention to the enormous imports of unwanted gold into this country, the speaker declard that "if France is forced to devalue her currency further the fault will be ours."

"Inasmuch as our devaluation was purely wanton and without any real reason," he said, "France would doubtless be justified in meeting our bid for gold and gyping us one better, thereby throwing the whole matter of international financing and settlement of balances into chaos."

No Gold For Poor.

Platt said he was "tempted to say" that all countries really are on the gold standard but that "they are playing the game according to cut-throat rules."

"The American dollar," he said, "is certainly greatly undervalue and we could moderately lower the price of gold without any damage to our own economy. That would require additional legislation, as the idiotic gold act which came into effect in February, 1934, permits a further increase in the price of gold to $41 an ounce, but does not permit reduction below 35."

Contending that we are on the gold standard now for all practical purposes, Platt, added that "it only remains to make it a little more certain, barring further devaluation and making our currency definitely redeemable in gold, in coin as well as in gold bars."

"At the present time we are on a gold standard for the rich only," he said. "The small man who wants to get a few gold coins, whether for a hedge against inflation or because he prefers to have some gold on hand, cannot get it.

"There can be no question whatever, however, about our ability to make our currency fully redeemable at its present tentative valuation at any time. It would have no effect on prices except as it would tend to give everybody more confidence and stimulate business.

Credit Control Doubted.

"I have only to add that in my opinion unless we do add a few more grains to the gold dollar, stopping its undervaluation, stopping gold imports and promoting some exports, in addition to raising reserve requirements and in addition to vigorous efforts to balance our budget * * * we shall have allowed the reservoir to overflow so long that its foundations will be too much weakened for repair and the flood will be upon us"

George V. McLaughlin, president of the Brooklyn Trust Co., speaking at the same round table, questioned whether credit could be controlled. He said that at best this would be extremely difficult.

"Since the element of opinion bulks so large in the creation or maintenance of credit, outside 'control' is not possible in the sense that we can control machinery by the use of wheel and lever," he said. "If we could control public opinion, as I am told is being done in certain European countries at present, we might find the task of controlling credit much easier. But

Cadman Daughter Gives Transfusion

Plattsburg, N. Y., July 8 (AP).—A daughter of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman was called upon today to give blood for a transfusion to strengthen the internationally known churchman in his fight against peritonitis and a ruptured appendix.

Dr. Lyman G. Barton, jr., attending Dr. Cadman, said he did not know the name of the donor, but said she was a daughter of the churchman. Miss Marie Cadman, a daughter, is with the family party at the hospital.

The physician said that the 71-year-old clergyman had suffered a period of weakness this morning but later today had rallied slightly.

"His condition still is very critical," he said.

7 British Fliers Killed in Desert

Cairo, Egypt, July 8 (AP).—Seven officers and men, completing night maneuvers in a Royal Air Force troop plane, died in a desert crash early today.

Six others were injured when the big craft was dashed to the ground near Mersa Matruh, between Cairo and the Libyan frontier.

The plane burned after it crashed, but reports indicated the victims were killed by the impact.

One of the dead was Canadian Signal Corps Lieut. D. E. McIntosh. The others, all Britons, were Capts. F. E. Barford and H. Symonds, Signal Sergt. R. G. Allan, Leading Aircraftsman E. M. Adams and Aircraftsmen A. G. Hassal and J. White.

Murphy Held Ready to Run In Michigan

Farley's Efforts Credited With Inducing Race for Governor.

By Franklyn Waltman.

As Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley yesterday outlined plans for conducting this year's campaign from New York, his party colleagues were cheered by reports that in another day or two Frank Murphy, American High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands, would become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Michigan.

If these reports prove true, the Murphy candidacy will represent the second victory of the national Democratic leaders to give strength to President Roosevelt this year by having popular local figures run for State offices. The first victory was when Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York reversed his decision not to seek re-election.

The Democratic strategists apparently are worried about their situation in Michigan. Not only do they fear Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg when he throws himself into the campaign on behalf of Gov. Alf M. Landon, but they are anxious over the insurgency within their own ranks.

Some weeks ago Chairman Farley flirted with Senator James Couzens in an effort to woo him into indorsing the Roosevelt candidacy. At that time the Farley opinion was that Senator Couzens was unbeatable in Michigan. But the multi-millionaire Senator has remained silent about his preferences for President, although he has indicated he will seek re-election as a Republican.

Campaign Quiet.

Consequently, in recent days Chairman Farley has set his heart on getting Murphy to run as the Democratic candidate for Governor in Michigan—although the chairman is not talking much about it because his efforts have been resented by some Michigan Democrats as interference on his part in their State affairs.

Murphy, a former mayor of Detroit, is a popular figure and is a good orator. He undoubtedly would strengthen the Roosevelt chances in Michigan if he runs on the ticket. He can do this without jeopardizing his post in the Philippines by taking a leave of absence under a recent Congressional act providing for an acting high commissioner in his absence.

Meanwhile Farley, who will take a leave of absence without pay as Postmaster General beginning August 1, explained that Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, will be chairman of the Democratic Speakers Bureau, an appointment anticipated last week.

Farley also announced that a spokesman for the Democratic Party would be sent to the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs on July 17 to represent the party's cause in a discussion of the current political situation.

Michelson Objected.

Charles Michelson, director of publicity for the national committee, previously had refused to assign a Democrat to speak at the university because he did not like the American Liberty League roundtable conducted there last year. The Republicans have delegated former Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, to speak for them.

Farley said he did not know who would be selected to represent the Democrats, but that a representative would be sent. He received yesterday a letter from Dean Charles G. Maphis of the university urging him to name a Democratic spokesman. Farley said that John Dickinson, Assistant Attorney General, may be selected.

The national chairman said he was not prepared to enumerate all of the battery of prominent Democratic speakers who will operate under Rayburn's direction, but that he thought Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Attorney General Homer S. Cummings would be on the stump this fall.

He also expressed the "belief" that Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia,

Attorney Will Seek Release of Mayor

Huntington, Ind., July 8 (AP).—Arthur D. Saylor, attorney for Mayor C. W. H. Bangs, said tonight he will file habeas corpus proceedings tomorrow in an effort to bring about the release of the mayor from the county jail, where he has been held since Monday.

Saylor said he will ask Judge Sumner Kenner, of the Huntington County Circuit Court, to issue the writ and also will ask that he be allowed to see the mayor.

Sheriff O. E. Johnson declined to allow Saylor to visit Mayor Bangs today, contending the order by which the attorney gained admission to the jail yesterday mentioned no other visits.

Mayor Bangs and Max Pinney and J. Clayton Brown, two city employes, went to jail Monday on order of Judge Huber M. DeVoss for violation of an injunction preventing them from extending the municipal electric lines in competition with those of the Northern Indiana Power Co.

$393,000 Is Allocated by U. S. To Aid Drought Areas at Once

Farm, Relief Agencies to Help 5 Millions Facing Hunger.

Federal agricultural and relief bureaus moved in concert yesterday to bring succor to the 5,000,000 persons on farms who are affected directly by the drought, and to check, through a long-range program, its blighting effects.

The Resettlement Administration allocated $393,000 for immediate aid to prevent starvation in North and South Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, Montana and Wyoming. The money came from funds remaining out of last year's appropriation, and which had been saved for such an emergency.

It was distributed as follows: North Dakota, $125,000; South Dakota, $150,000; Kansas, $50,000; Nebraska, $20,000; Montana, $35,000; Wyoming $13,000.

An additional 171 counties in seven States were given emergency drought ratings by Jesse W. Tapp, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the Federal drought relief program. Ninety-seven counties were designated yesterday and the total today was 268, including a number of areas in the Southern States.

The 97 counties designated yesterday were in North and South Dakota, Montana and Wyoming. Those today were in Missouri, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. Four additional counties in South Dakota were included, as were all the remaining counties in North Dakota, placing the entire State in the emergency drought classification.

Employment of destitute farmers in the drought region is progressing swiftly, said Aubrey Williams, acting Works Progress administrator.

Fifty-five thousand men will be put to work within a week or ten days, and half this number will be employed within the next 24 hours, Williams said.

In North Dakota, heart of the drought region, plans call for the employment of 20,000 heads of families at the rate of 2,000 a day, and employment will proceed in other States as follows: South Dakota, 17,-

Damage Estimate Revised Upwards

U. S. May Have to Buy $30,000,000 in Cattle, Says Wallace.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 8.—Sweltering heat, intrenched in the Middle West for days, swept a blazing path eastward tonight as deaths from heat and drownings rose to 112.

It was the sixth consecutive day for temperatures exceeding 100 degrees in the drought-harried Plains States, but despite a general forecast of continued warm and fair, long-awaited rain came to the extreme northwest section of North Dakota and neighboring Montana.

The precipitation amounted to half an inch at Grenora, N. Dak.

Elsewhere in the seared territory and on through to New York State, the hottest weather of the summer prevailed.

Damage Estimates Revised.

Owosso, Mich., had 109 degrees. Other early maximums included 106 degrees at South Bend, Ind., and Kewanee, Ill. Jamestown, N. Dak., sweltered in 105 during the afternoon; Bemidji in the Minnesota northwoods country had 99; Chicago's warmest day of the year brought a 95 peak; Louisville reported 101; Detroit's 103 was a new high for the date; Saginaw, Mich., had 105.5; Pittsburgh's 96 was the warmest of the year, and Poughkeepsie's 96 degrees was the highest in 17 years.

Deaths by States today included:

	Drownings	Heat	Total
Michigan	7	8	15
Illinois	2	12	14
Wisconsin	2	3	5
Ohio	..	2	2
New York	1	..	1
Mississippi	1	..	1
Louisiana	2	..	2
Maine	1	..	1
Minnesota	..	2	2
North Dakota	..	2	2
Totals	24	34	58

News estimates indicating a revision of previous damage totals poured in from the stricken territory. C. A. Russell, agriculture secretary of South Dakota, calculated the crop losses for that State alone would aggregate $140,000,000 at current levels. Previously statistics had set the total for the Nation at $300,000,000.

With conditions daily growing worse, according to crop observers from a dozen or more Midwest States, this total would prove an underestimate, observers predicted.

Cotton Leads Rise.

But the sensitive domestic grain pits were quieter today. After yesterday's wild trading in which 56,000,000 bushels of wheat alone changed ownership, the market eased on reports of extensive rainfall in Canada's parched Western prairies. Wheat prices closed generally 1½ cent lower with July $1.05¾.

In New York, cotton led a continued rise of speculative commodity prices after the Government's first estimate of acreage planted for the new crop was found to be smaller than had been expected. The advance in cotton carried it to around peak prices for the season.

Hamilton Calls The New Deal 'One-Man Rule'

Says It Has Taken More of People's Money Than Any Other Regime.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, July 8.—John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, termed the Roosevelt Administration tonight "a personal government that has appropriated to itself more of other peoples' money than any other administration in American History."

The young Kansas attorney appealed to Wisconsin to elect Landon and Knox next fall to prove "the American system has not failed."

Hamilton spoke at a session of the State Republican convention which heard Charles F. Smith, Wausau attorney, in his keynote speech invite Democrats and Progressives to join in a crusade "in defense of Americanism."

Landon Wires Greetings.

Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Presidential nominee, wired greetings to the Wisconsin Republican Convention tonight in which he said "with the issues so clearly defined and so generally understood at this early stage of the campaign, we have a right to feel confident of the result in November."

"Wisconsin, with its thousands of beautiful homes and high percentage of small-home owners," he said, "is an xample of much that is best in American life today"

"Your decentralized industry, including thousands of small manufacturing plants living and prospering side by side with larger corporations represent an ideal and a balance for which we must strive and to which the Republican Party is committed by its platform."

Hamilton called President Roosevelt's reference to "economic royal-

Heat Fells Two; Mercury Rises To 94 in Capital

Man, Woman Prostrated; Higher Temperatures Promised Today.

Heat and humidity squeezed Washington in a 94-degree grip yesterday and threatened still greater havoc today and tomorrow as the weatherman forecast "fair and warmer."

Although yesterday was the second hottest day of the year locally—the mercury climbed to 96 on June 3—only two prostrations were reported. Isabelle Taylor, 19, of 722 North Carolina avenue southeast, fell in Union Station and suffered head injuries. Police said she was overcome by the heat.

The girl, who collapsed near the ticket window, was taken to the terminal's rest room and treated by the station physician. From there she was removed to Casualty Hospital, where her condition was said to be undertermined.

Webster Bruel, 47, colored laborer, was stricken while working on Naylor road southeast. After receiving treatment at Gallinger Hospital, he was taken to his home, 1408 Alabama avenue southeast.

The 94-degree "high," which was recorded at 4:30 p. m., climaxed the day's steady rise of 27 degrees. Low temperature of the day was 67 at 6 a. m. The mercury stood at 93 degrees at 1:30 p. m., dropped two notches by 3 o'clock, then regained the lost ground and added another degree for good measure.

Meanwhile, Weather Bureau officials announced plans to expand the system of obtaining data on upper air conditions by plane flights. In addition to the 23 stations where high altitude recordings now are made, flights will be scheduled daily at Miami, Fla., Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Salt Lake City, Utah, Okland, Calif., and Fairbanks, Alaska.

Canada is co-operating in the studies and may open a station of its own at Fort Smith, which is half-way between the American and Alaskan boundary lines, officials declared.

Zeppelin Flights Over Britain Are Protested by Legislators

London, July 8 (AP).—Great Britain is taking up with Germany the question of the Zeppelin Hindenburg's flights over English industrial centers.

Vyvyan Adams, Conservative, said in the House of Commons today that twice within a few weeks the Hindenburg, traveling between Germany and the United States, had passed over the Leeds area at low altitudes.

Sir Philip Sassoon replied crossings over England henceforth were to be allowed only in cases caused "by the urgent necessity of navigation."

Such crossings, even then, carry the added condition of strict observance of regulations for the avoidance of prohibited areas.

Sir Phillip said any infringement of these regulations reported by the police would be taken up with the German air ministry.

William James Thorne, Laborite, received no answer when he interjected: "Doesn't Germany know all about our arsenals and dockyards whether these airships fly high or low over them?"

An article appearing in The Aeroplane described how a Royal Air Force pilot [illegible] recent flight narrowly avoided ramming the Hindenburg amidships.

The plane, controlled by an instructor and pupil practicing blind flying, entered a cloud when suddenly the instructor, seeing something large and dark ahead, seized the controls and dived the plane.

Sailor Gets Medal Roosevelt Urged Over 17 Years Ago

Seventeen years ago an Assistant Secretary of the Navy by the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote a letter of commendation to an enlisted man for saving the life of a naval officer and promised him a life-saving medal.

Yesterday the enlisted man, Irvin H. Smith, of Ukiah, Calif., was sent the silver life-saving medal by the Treasury Department. A clerical oversight was the explanation of the delay.

Landon Forces Limit Session To Security Act

Effort to Inject Prohibition, Civil Service Issues Killed.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 8.—Republican majorities tightly bound the Kansas Legislature to Gov. Alf M. Landon's social security recommendations today after crushing a Democratic effort to inject the prohibition issue.

A group of Senate Democrats, peppering the Republican Presidential candidate, sought unsuccessfully to open the special legislative session to immediate social security legislation and prohibition and civil service issues.

All motions were defeated overwhelmingly. The Senate closed a heated morning session by voting 25 to 10 to join the House in limiting the legislative business to the subject for which Landon called the session—approval of amendments to the constitution designed to increase Kansas participation in Federal social security laws.

A long day's work, marked by persistent peppering of the Republican Presidential candidate by a group of Democrats, brought Senate approval of the two proposed amendments.

Similar amendments were in the final parliamentary stages in the House. Differences in language foretold a conference to reconcile the two branches, but Republican leaders looked for adjournment tomorrow night of the session which opened Tuesday.

Lowden Conference Today.

During the argument in the chamber overhead, Landon attended to routine business in the Governor's office. He said goodby to J. Reuben Clark, of Salt Lake City, after talks on Western campaign plans which began last night and continued this morning.

Tomorrow was set aside by the Republican nominee for a conference with former Gov. Frank Lowden of Illinois, on farm problems—and more specifically the farm views he will express in his July 23 acceptance speech.

Senator Daniel McCarthy (Democrat), raised the prohibition question by demanding consideration of a bill defining intoxicants.

He contended that Kansas voted by 90,000 in 1934 to retain prohibition and said that despite requests that Landon make recommendations on the alcoholic content of intoxicants, "we have received none."

Hamilton Criticized.

John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, was named by Senator E. H. Benson, another Democrat, for having kept the 1935 Legislature from passing a dry bill "because he wanted to run Alf Landon for President."

"John realized if the bill passed it would ruin Alf in the East," Benson said.

But Democratic Senator Joe McDonald opposed McCarthy, saying "Kansas is a Utopia the way it is."

"The drys have their dry law," McDonald explained, "and the wets have all of the liquor they can drink. Of course, the tax is paid to Missouri."

"Horse play" was the Republican size-up of the McCarthy amendment voiced by Senator Clyde W. Coffman. The majority, without much more debate than that, voted the prohibition issue out, 29 to 8.

McDonald sought to open the session to immediate social security legislation and to an appropriation bill "to make the civil service effective in Kansas."

Measure Beaten, 27 to 9.

"The governor declared in a speech at Lincoln, Nebr., that he favored putting Federal Government employes under civil service," McDonald said. "We have civil service laws in Kansas but they are not observed on the grounds there are no funds for carrying out their provisions. Let's give nim the money and let him start at home."

Another Democrat, Senator A. G. Nelson, termed McDonald's civil service proposal "not worth considering." Republicans waited until the roll was called and beat it, 27 to 9.

(In a telegram to the Republican National Convention, Landon said that in carrying out the platform pledge to the "restoration, improvement and extension" of the merit system, he believed that all positions below the rank of assistant secretary in the major departments, and the entire postal establishment should be included.)

Called Publicity Move.

The motion to vote social security bills prior to a constitutional amendment was made by Senator J. G. Logan, Democrat.

A Republican, Senator Hale P. Skovgard, assailed the move as a "pin-head exhibition designed for political effect."

"Some of you are after publicity," he said just before the Logan motion was defeated, 26 to 12.

The House quickly approved one of two proposed social security amendments to the constitution. It provided for State participation and supervision of aid to the aged, infirm and dependent—a task now in the hands of counties.

Ship Delays Sailing For Va. Democrats

New York, July 8 (AP).—The Furness liner—Queen of Bermuda—delayed sailing two hours today to accommodate approximately 80 members of Young Democratic Clubs of Virginia bound for Bermuda on the Third Congressional District convention cruise.

The party arrived by special train and immediately boarded the ship, which will arrive at Bermuda Friday morning. It will return to New York Monday.

Harold F. Snead, president, said the trip would be devoted largely to entertainment, but that business sessions Thursday would include an address by Harold M. Radcliffe, Commonwealth's attorney of Henrico County.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

SMILING broadly, President Roosevelt leaned back in his chair and announced to his press conference that he proposed to explode a few stories being put in circulation about the drought situation. He seemed to be very pleased over what he was about to do.

WALTMAN.

In the first place, asserted the President, the drought would not result in a national food shortage. Secondly, even if it did, it would not result from wheat acreage reduction under the AAA. Republicans have made that charge—and it is a nasty charge to accuse a Federal Administration of policies which result in a food shortage.

As a matter of fact, asserted the President, glancing at a memorandum in his hand, not only was the wheat acreage for this year's crop 10 per cent higher than last year but it was 10 per cent higher than the 1928-32 average. Mr. Roosevelt again leaned back to see how that impressed his press conference.

The press conference seemed very impressed—that is, all but the silvery haired James L. Wright, of the Buffalo Evening News, who apparently possesses a memory which prompts him to ask questions. How much was paid to wheat growers for reducing acreage this year under AAA contracts? asked Mr. Wright. Mr. Roosevelt did not understand the question. It was repeated. Oh, yes, the AAA benefit payments! The President did not know the sum.

But it was an intriguing question, and inquiry has brought the answer from the press division of the AAA. It seems that the AAA has paid approximately $40,000,000 to wheat growers to reduce their acreage for this year's crop by 5 per cent of the 1928-32 average. But instead of the wheat acreage being 5 per cent less than the 1928-32 average—for which the AAA paid out $40,000,000—the acreage actually is 10 per cent greater.

This $40,000,000 was paid chiefly to growers of winter wheat who did their planting last fall and are now harvesting their crops. It was a commitment made by the AAA before that legislation was invalidated by the Supreme Court, and the money was specially appropriated by Congress to reward the farmers who had, as it was said at the time, performed their contracts—that is to say, had held their wheat acreage down to 95 per cent of the 1928-32 average.

Now it is possible that the wheat growers who received that money strictly complied with their contracts—held their planting down to 95 per cent of the 1928-32 average—but it is also clear that if they did, then a large number of non-contract signers must have greatly increased their acreage above that average in order that the total 1936 acreage might be 10 per cent above the five-year base average.

And it is perhaps a fortunate thing for this country that they did so. Otherwise, due to the drought, there might have been a wheat shortage in this country. It is estimated that this year's wheat crop will be approximately 600,000,000 bushels, despite the drought. The average annual domestic consumption is about 625,000,000 bushels. There is a carry-over of about 125,000,000 bushels of wheat—that is, grain grown in previous years. So it appears that the country will have sufficient wheat to meet its demands with a carry-over at the end of this year of about 100,000,000 bushels—the lowest in many decades.

But had the wheat farmers as a whole planted no more wheat than they did in the average 1928-32 year, all of the carry-over would have been absorbed and still there would not have been enough to satisfy the normal domestic consumption.

Out of this incident several pertinent conclusions might be drawn. One is that if the AAA acreage reduction program had worked perfectly it would have so depleted the Nation's wheat stocks that the working man would have had to pay more for his bread and perhaps could not get all he and his family wanted.

Under the AAA program Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and his AAA aids were gambling with nature. They had undertaken to predict what nature would do. And they were gambling with the food supplies of 125,000,000 people. Mr. Wallace perhaps remembers that more than two years ago he was told that if the AAA stood and he persisted in enforcing it, he would be lucky if in some future day of drought he were not shot by the populace for destroying the country's food supply.

Perhaps it might be said that the Supreme Court saved Mr. Wallace from that fate by invalidating the AAA and it saved the country from suffering. Instead of so bitterly condemning the high tribunal it would seem that it should have the laudation and secret prayers of the Roosevelt Administration for saving it from its mistakes.

This might be said, if this incident of wheat acreage were not also evidence that the AAA program rapidly was breaking down before the Supreme Court put the final knife to it. This year's winter wheat crop was planted last fall—several months before the Supreme Court in January of this year invalidated AAA. Winter wheat is the major part of the wheat crop.

Thus, months before the AAA legally was killed the chief wheat suppliers of the Nation had kicked over the traces and had planted far in excess of the quota prescribed by the AAA. In Kansas, the chief wheat producing State in the country, a new record was reached in wheat planting when 14,300,000 acres were seeded.

Had yields per acre this year been good—with no drought—the country undoubtedly would have had a bumper wheat crop and a rapidly declining price and that, without doubt, would have been the rock on which the AAA would have smashed. The Supreme Court, at least, took that burden off the back of the New Deal.

And the Kansas planter who refused to be bound by the AAA quotas this year finds that with the drought in the spring wheat belt creating a high price, he will make far more money than he would have had he bound himself to the AAA quota. And his brethren—possibly he, too—also participated in the $40,000,000 Treasury distribution.

Mr. Roosevelt found himself on the horns of a dilemma—either he must confess to pursuing a policy which threatened the National food supply, or he had to confess to throwing away $40,000,000 of public funds for an objective which was not realized, thus confessing also to the breakdown of the AAA. He chose the latter as the lesser of two evils—and that confession should be good for the New Deal soul.

Borah Petition Formally Filed In Senate Race

By the Associated Press.

Boise, Idaho, July 8.—Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, became a candidate today for re-election to a sixth term.

Nominating petitions for the August 11 primary were filed with the Secretary of State by the 71-year-old statesman's attorney.

In a statement Monday, Borah said he would not bolt the Republican ticket and pledged allegiance to the platform he helped frame at Cleveland.

The Senator did not issue a formal announcement today.

"The filing speaks for itself," he said.

Townsendite His Foe.

Bryon Defenbach, a former State treasurer who has the support of Iraho Townsend forces, will oppose Borah for the Republican nomination.

Gov. C. Ben Ross, regarded in both major political camps as one of the most powerful campaigners in the State's history, has announced for the Democratic nomination for Borah's seat. Ross has two opponents in the primary—Leslie Aker, Boise attorney and Eugene Scott, Twin Falls labor leader.

Before Borah formulates his strategy to meet a Democratic candidate next November, he must overcome some obstacles within his own party.

Defenbach to Run.

Even if Borah wins the Republican primary nomination, he still will face Defenbach in the general election, because the Townsend organization has called a nominating convention and will nominate Defenbach and two Congressmen to run on a Townsend ticket—if they are defeated in their respective Republican and Democratic promary races.

During Borah's 30 years in the Senate only four men have opposed him at the polls.

Prior to 1918, United States Senators were selected by the State Senate.

In 1918 Borah polled 63,587 votes against 31,018 received by Franklin Moore, a Democrat; in 1924 Borah received 99,846 while Frank Martin, his Democratic opponent, got 25,199 and a Socialist, Eugene F. Gary, garnered 555.

The last time Borah was re-elected he received 94,938 and Joseph M. Taylor, a Democrat, 36,162.

U. S. Fails to Regain Polish Seized Cash

Berlin, July 8 (AP).—American authorities said tonight their efforts in three cases to recover currency confiscated from American travelers in Poland had been unavailing.

Both the United States Legation in Warsaw and the consul general here made the efforts.

The consulate today warned travelers that United States currency may be taken from them when they leave Poland, and said it had received various complaints.

(Poland has new and stringent regulations against the transfer of foreign exchange, promulgated with the object of keeping capital in the country.)

One woman missionary returning from the Far East reached Berlin penniless, it was stated.

Mrs. Hazel Engeseth, of Long Beach, Calif., traveling from Tokyo, said Polish authorities at the western frontier confiscated $40, permitting her to retain $100 after demanding a receipt from authorities on the eastern border, where she entered the country.

President Assigns Three To Antietam Group

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed three members of a commission created by Congress to arrange for the celebration in September, 1937, of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Antietam.

The President appointed Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), Virginia; Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Baltimore, and Park W. T. Loy, Hagerstown, Md. Hhe commission also will include two Senators selected by the Vice President and two members of the House selected by the Speaker.

of New York—a Progressive Republican—and Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator but recently a critic of some New Deal measures, would be "for the President" and would participate in the speaking campaign.

"Guess you can't use Chester C. Davis since his appointment to the Federal Reserve Board except before banking groups?" asserted one of the correspondents at the press conference.

"That's about all," replied Farley.

"How about Rexford Tugwell—will you put him on the stump?" was another question.

This question seemed to stump Farley. He looked perplexed for a moment and started to chuckle. Finally, he said he did not know and added that he thought it would be better to wait until the list of speakers was completed.

But he said he thought American Ambassador Claude Bowers and other members of the Diplomatic Corps would lend a hand in the campaign speaking, along with Democratic Senators and members of the Administration.

Asked whether he intended to concentrate this year an unusually heavy battery of prominent speakers on Kansas—the home of Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee—Farley said he did not have such plans. He said "We'll take Kansas in our stride," but added that no speaker would be sent into a State without the approval of the local party leaders and that if the Kansas leaders wanted heavy artillery he would try to supply it.

Indeed, Farley, in a genial and at times confidential mood, indicated that he would try to make most of the campaign "in our stride." He said he stuck by his statement that he would "not concede a single State to the Republican nominee."

"But John Hamilton (Republican national chairman) predicts Landon will carry 42 States," objected one correspondent.

"Look up Hamilton's prediction three days before the 1930 election for Governor in Kansas," he shot back. It developed that Hamilton predicted an overwhelming victory for the Republican gubernatorial candidate, but the Democrat, the present Assistant Secretary of War, Harry H. Woodring, won.

"Can we put alongside of that Hamilton prediction your prediction that Joe Louis would smother Schmeling in the recent fight?" Farley was asked.

"That was not a political prediction," he replied.

"But you were a qualified boxing commissioner for years."

"Oh, all right," said Farley. "Put that one down but put down the predictions I made about the 1932 campaign—indeed the predictions about President Roosevelt's election which I made back in 1930."

And so the conference went, without much news developing. Farley termed as "assinine" the Hamilton prediction that the Republicans had a chance in North Carolina, Virginia and Florida. He said he had not seen the party balance sheet since the Philadelphia convention but knew there was sufficient money around to pay current expenses. He said that he still thought the Democratic campaign would not cost more than $2,000,000 this year.

The chairman explained that within the next two weeks virtually the entire national headquarters would be removed from Washington to New York. A skeleton staff will be kept here and the women's division, but all other units will go to the Biltmore Hotel in New York. It subsequently was learned that even such auxiliary agencies as those conducted by Stanley High will go to New York. No branch headquarters would be opened in the West, Farley explained.

Reserve Board Appoints Three New Directors

Two Named for Chicago, One at San Francisco; Wood Among Trio.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board last night announced appointment of three class "C" directors, and the designation of a chairman of the board of directors for one of the three reserve institutions to which the appointments were made.

Class "C" directors, constituting one-third of the reserve banks' directorate, are appointed by the board in Washington. They must be residents for at least two years in the district for which they are appointed and persons of "tested banking experience."

The board announced that Robert E. Wood, of Sears-Roebuck, had been named a class "C" director of the reserve bank at Chicago for the unexpired portion of the term ending December 31, 1938. He also was named deputy chairman for the remainder of this calendar year.

Frank J. Lewis was named a class "C" director of the Chicago bank for the unexpired portion of the term ending December 31, 1937.

Ashley O. Stewart, was appointed a class "C" director of the Reserve Bank at San Francisco for the unexpired portion of the term ending December 31, 1938, and also was designated as deputy chairman of the board for the remainder of this calendar year.

In addition, the board named Walton N. Moore, at present a class "C" director and deputy chairman, as chairman of the board of the Federal Reserve Bank at San Francisco, and as Federal Reserve agent there, for the remainder of this calendar year.

Free Trolley Rides Offered to Public On Repaired Cars

The Capital Transit Co. is giving free rides on its reconditioned one-man street cars in an effort to convince the public of their efficiency and comfort.

Officers and members of various citizens associations particularly have been invited to inspect the cars recently purchased from Providence, R. I., and renovated here. The cars are open for inspection, however, and free, short rides are available to anyone interested.

Last night a car was on exhibit at Fourteenth street and Colorado avenue, and tonight cars may be inspected at Eleventh and Monroe streets and the Eckington car barn at Fourth and T streets northeast. Tomorrow night cars will be at Fifteenth and H streets northeast and at the Lincoln Park barn at East Capitol and Fourteenth streets.

A hearing has been scheduled for next Monday by the Public Utilities Commission on the application of the company to increase the number of one-man cars in operation.

Maryland Prison Inquiry Unit Meets

The recently appointed Investigating committee of the Maryland Commission on Prison Labor, headed by W. Raymond Moody, of Chestertown, Md., met yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel to draft a preliminary report which will be presented to the commission July 24.

The investigating committee was formed to analyze the recent report of the Prison Industrial Reorganization Administration on idleness in Maryland prisons, now in the hands of President Roosevelt and Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Those at yesterday's luncheon meeting, in addition to Chairman Moody were, Robert E. Vining, of Baltimore; chairman of the State Commission; Harold E. Donmede, Maryland superintendent of prisons; Delano Ames, chairman of Gov. Nice's parole commission; Howard B. Gill, secretary of the Association of States Signatory to the Prison Labor Compact; Daniel B. Chambers, jr., of Baltimore, and Michael J. Lane of North Beach, Md.

Arsenal Explosion Kills 5 in Britain

London, July 8 (AP).—An explosion snuffed out an ordnance experiment and killed five persons in Great Britain's vast Royal Arsenal at Woolwich.

The victims, one of them Lieut. Comdr. P. A. M. Long, an officer in the armament supply department of the admiralty, either were conducting or watching a test in the research department of the arsenal, which employs 7,500 men.

But the munitions storehouses and factories are spread over such an area—some 600 acres—that hundreds of other arsenal workers knew nothing of the explosion until they quit the shops to go home for the night.

The cause and the extent of damage were not made public by the war department. Officials did, however, emphasize the blast was purely accidental and there was no question of sabotage.

The building in which the five were working was destroyed, but no other part of the arsenal was damaged.

Hamilton Attacks Roosevelt

ists" of "a harried and driven candidate."

"Who are these economic royalists?" Hamilton demanded

"We are not told.

"They are no more identified than those mythical great bankers who, according to the President, told him our national debt could safely go to $70,000,000,000."

The President put the phrase "economic royalists" into the 1936 political dispute with his acceptance speech at Philadelphia on June 27.

In that speech the President said: "Out of this modern civilization, economic royalists have carved new dynasties. * * * Our allegiance to American institutions requires the overthrow of this kind of power."

Hamilton's reply tonight came in criticizing Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's recent radio report on Federal finances. Hamilton said the report "failed to convey the entire truth," and said the voters would demand specific information on the the national deficit. Then he added:

"Nor will the electorate's insistence be diverted by the setting up of straw men, whether by President Roosevelt or others.

"It knows well how to appraise the import of a charge made by a harried and driven candidate that all his opponents are economic royalists.

"The Nation would be more impressed by the President's declaration of war against these assumed economic despots, who gamble with other people's money, if it were not sick of wars and much more interested in the very practical task that has been under way for month—the task of stopping the encroaching despotism of a personal government that has appropriated to itself more of other peoples' money than any other administration in American history."

Hamilton directed another of his convention address shots at his rival campaign manager, James A. Farley, Democratic National committeeman.

"Until today," said Hamilton, "I was unable to decide whether the recent uncertainty of Mr. Farley's governmental position was due to a belief that he was a liability * * * or whether it resulted from the conviction that the party's hold on power was so precarious that it must have. Mr. Farley's undoubted talents concentrated on its own affairs, unhampered by the trying task of drafting new issues of postage stamps.

Hamilton told his Wisconsin audience that the American electorate is "determined to eliminate gambling in securities and commodties" and "gambling in Government" as well. He continued:

"But it has determined that progress toward both these ends can be made more effectively through a President who, as Governor of Kansas, was able to bring results through the enforcement of existing law, than under a President who as Governor of New York witnessed the greatest speculative orgy, within the borders of his own State, that has ever been seen, and who watched millions of people sucked into the vortex, and yet lifted neither a restraining finger nor uttered a warning word.

"There is no other explanation for such reticence by Gov. Roosevelt than that he found it politically unadvisable to attack speculation when it was popular."

Map Fight for House.

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—The chief goal of Republicans in the Congressional battles will be to win back 180 seats in Congress captured by Democrats in 1932 and 1934, Earl Venable, executive secretary of the House Congressional committee's fall campaign said today.

He said Chicago offices for the committee's drive, occupying space in Republican national headquarters, would be opened about July 15. The Atlantic seaboard campaign will be directed, Venable said, by Representative Robert L. Bacon, of Old Westbury, Long Island, former "Bull Mooser" who represents New York's first district.

"All predictions will have to come from the chairman, Representative Chester C. Bolton, of Ohio," Venable said, "but I can say this: I have never seen such a revival of party enthusiasm as there is this year."

A prediction that Minnesota would go Republican this fall was made today in a statement issued at national headquarters by Roy E. Dunn, St. Paul, national committeeman from Minnesota.

Drought Relief Topic of Parley By Virginians

Program Calls for 2,000 Loans, Jobs and Minimum Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., July 8.—The Virginia drought relief committee drew up a program here today calling for 2,000 emergency feed and seed loans, agricultural work relief programs and efforts to obtain minimum prices for seed and feed and minimum freight rates as a means of relieving conditions in 14 southwest Virginia counties.

The loans, as recommended by the committee, averaging $110, would be supplied by the Resettlement Administration. The work relief projects, to be developed under the Soil Conservation Service, would include production and distribution of agricultural lime, prevention of erosion and improvement of pastures.

The committee announced its purpose as that of making the program one of rehabilitation and agricultural improvement rather than direct relief.

6,000 in Need of Jobs.

It estimated 6,000 persons were in need of employment as a result of the drought in the southwest, and expressed the hope the relief measures would be of such a nature as to keep them in close touch with agriculture in their own communities.

Chairman S. T. Adair, of Richmond; Secretary H. H. Gordon and Lyman Carrier, of the Soil Conservation Service, left for Washington after the meeting to confer with Federal authorities tomorrow.

Emergency Fund Sought.

The committee said its plan was to seek an emergency appropriatoin, after which the Soil Conservation Service would take the problem up with the Public Welfare Service, the Rural Rehabilitation Administration, the WPA, the State extension service and the State department of agriculture. The extension service and the Department of Agriculture will furnish technical guidance.

Counties more seriously affected by the drought include Lee, Scott, Wise, Russell, Washington, Smyth, Tazewell, Dickenson, Buchanan, Bland, Wythe, Pulaski, Grayson and Carroll.

The committee said there was a possibility that Giles, Floyd and Craig counties might be included in the relief program.

Meighan Dies

advantage of the popularity his role had brought.

Consistently he appeared in Hollywood-made films which made the silver tinkle across the counters of American movie theater ticket sellers.

An actor-director partnership with Cecil B. De Mille, exponent of lavish stage settings, profited him not a little, for he rapidly was becoming an idol not only of the women movie patrons, but of the men as well.

In that era of movies, the days of the silent pictures, when the picture was blotted out frequently by subtitles, Meighan made his stake with such films as "The Fighting Hope," "M'Liss," "The Heart of Wetona," "The Prince Chap," "The City of Silent Men," "A Prince There Was," "The Bachelor Daddy' and a number of others.

Film Successes.

The advent of the sound movie proved no deterrent to Meighan. Among sound films in which he appeared after he had reached the peak of his career as a star and had begun to take character roles were "The Argyle Case," "Cheaters at Play," "Young Sinners" and "Peck's Bad Boy."

Born April 9, 1879, in Pittsburgh, Pa., Meighan was graduated from the local high school and St. Mary's College. He obtained a toehold for a stage career as an extra in his home town in "Miss Nell," with Henrietta Crosman. There followed a season with Grace George in New York and two seasons of "stock" in Pittsburgh.

David Warfield engaged him for three seasons, and later he played the lead for a long run, both in the United States and in England in "The College Widow." The years 1908 to 1916 found him shuttling back and forth between New York and London to fill stage engagements in "The Family," "The Return of Peter Grimm," "Broadway Jones" and "On Trial."

$10,000 a Week.

At one time Meighan was reputed to draw one of the more fabulous salaries in Hollywood, $10,000 a week. That figure, published in 1925, was heralded as a new high mark for the movie industry. Of late years his screen work had been spasmodic. He was idle for almost two years, from 1929 to 1931, before returning to Hollywood to face the cameras, and another long period of inactivity followed before he made his last film, "Peck's Bad Boy," in 1934.

In July, 1935, Meighan underwent a serious operation for the removal of a bronchial tube obstruction which formed after an attack of pneumonia the previous January. He subsequently made a trip to California for what was described as a rest.

He is survived by his widow, who before their marriage was Frances Ring, stage actress. She is a sister of the famous actress, Blanche Ring.

Banker Giannini Named Head of United Artists

Hollywood, Calif., July 8 (AP).—Dr. A. H. Giannini, widely known banker, has been elected president and chairman of the board of United Artists Corporation, a motion picture distributing organization, an official announcement from United Artists studio said today.

With it was a statement from Dr. Giannini declaring he would remain a director of the Bank of America, but would resign as chairman of the general executive committee.

Present at the board meeting today were Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Samuel Goldwyn and Murray Silverstone.

000; Montana, 6,000; Wyoming, 700, and Minnesota, 7,500.

"Our program was ready when the need arose," Williams said. "Water conservation projects—digging wells, building dams and creating artificial lakes—as well as farm-to-market roads, have been sponsored by local interests and from this reservoir of approved projects it was possible to launch this operation with minimum of delay.

"To bring relief to these people as swiftly as possible, we are taking every short cut the law allows to get these projects in operation. We know the projects are good, for they had been carefully prepared before the drought withered the fields of these States."

Declaring an about-face on the Administration's soil conservation program, Acting Agricultural Adjustment Administrator J. B. Hutson announced that farmers who have planted soil-building crops with the intention of turning them into the ground will be advised to use them for fodder in the drought regions. Soil will still benefit, Hutson said, but not to the same extent had the crop been turned under. There will be no decrease in the rate the Federal Government will pay under the soil conservation program, he said.

At the same time Hutson issued an apology for the soil program and declared that, despite contrary assertions, the program had resulted in an increase of livestock feed production. Reports indicate 70,000,000 acres were planted in wheat this year, he said.

The estimated supply of corn on farms on April 1, he said, was 776,112,000 bushels, compared with an average of 757,030,000 from 1928 to 1932. Oats stocks were estimated at 494,666,000 bushels, compared with an average of 389,052,000 for the five-year period.

"The 1936 program," Hutson said, "is designed to provide for an abundant production of food and feed.

"The program is flexible enough to be adapted to meet emergency conditions, and yet, through payments, to provide a measure of crop income insurance to co-operating farmers."

Hutson declared his organization was considering a long-range program to make the population self-sustaining in the Northwest drought region, where crops have been poor for the last six years. The program will entail a return of the land to grass and grazing, and fewer people can be supported, he said. Plans are still under consideration, and no announcement will be made at any time soon, he indicated.

"Showers Possible."

Even as the Government rushed its program to relieve drought suffering, the Weather Bureau issued its regular prediction here, but little hope was held out for the real drought remedy—a drenching rain.

"Scattered showers possible over the Dakotas, Northwest Minnesota and Northwest Nebraska today," the report read. "Somewhat cooler tonight over western and southern North Dakota and northwestern Minnesota."

There was no rain indicated except light scattered showers in western Tennessee and Kentucky.

closing $2.70 to $3.05 a bale higher than the opening. Rubber, cottonseed oil and silk futures made moderate gains.

At Green Mountain Falls, Colo., Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace announced "it may be necessary to purchase as much as $30,000,000 of drought cattle" with Federal funds.

Gov. R. L. Cochran, of Nebraska, telegraphed an appeal for aid against drought and the grasshopper pest in his State to Wallace, and warned that the cattle-buying program would have to be stepped up from its original limits if 200 more cars of poisoned bran—the weapon against the insects—were not allotted.

Forest fires in South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana roared through tinder-dry wooded areas. Several thousand firefighters were kept on the jump.

Not all was gloom in the farm belt, however. At Omaha, Nebr., the Federal Land Bank reported farm sales were the highest in June in any one month of the bank's history, totaling 74 in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming. The transactoins totaled $452,000.

Prices Fluctuate.

Drought had the grain markets in turmoil again but a conflict between "bulls" and "bears," each with a different idea of values, resulted in wide wheat price fluctuations.

Breaking of the drought in parts of Canada by rains described as torrential in some sections was the factor that caused heavy selling of wheat and results in lower United States prices.

After advancing almost 3 cents a bushel early, Chicago wheat reacted and closed unchanged to nearly 2 cents lower than the previous finish. Bears, who thought prices should be lower, gained the ascendency as heavy profit-taking burdened the pit. Their efforts to beat prices down, however, kept the market activity at fever pitch almost constantly.

All wheat deliveries closed around $1.05 a bushel.

Corn Soars to Limit.

Corn, on the other hands, shot up the 4-cent limit allowed for one day, and nearby deliveries reacted only slightly from the peak. July and September corn closed about 3 cents higher for the day, the former at 81½@82 cents. Brokers' wires running into the market were laden with reports that drought had forced the young corn crop to a crisis.

Best grades of hard wheat sold as high as $1.14 a bushel on the cash market, and No. 1 white corn got up to 97 cents, highest since May, 1935, and best at this time of year since 1929. Soy beans sold up to $1.12 a bushel.

The effect of the drought on the livestock trade was more noticeable than at any time since the situation became acute. Hog and cattle receipts were larger than was expected and shipments from the dry territories increased. Hog prices broke 15 to 40 cents and cattle were 25 cents lower.

Flames Sweep Hills.

Sheridan, Wyo., July 8 (AP).—High winds sent "crown" fires racing into the Big Horn Mountains timberland near the Montana-Wyoming boundary today.

Forest Ranger Y. David said the "crown" blaze—foresters' description of a fire that burns through the dry tree tops—was the worst in the area since 1931. He estimated it had consumed approximately 3,000 acres of timber and grasslands.

Except for the Big Horn blaze, the forest fire picture in Montana and Wyoming was much more optimistic.

Fires in the Newcastle and Sundance areas of Wyoming were believed controlled after winds died and gave fighters a chance to "dig in" and hold the flames to the burned-over regions.

All fire in Montana forests apparently were out or under control.

Rains Help Fighters.

Rains came to the aid of fighters assigned to a blaze on the edge of Shoshone National Forest, 15 miles northwest of Cody. A small fire, soon subdued, was reported near Buffalo.

Three fires ignited by lightning in the Helena National Forest reserve in Montana were extinguished quickly. Fire burned over several hundred acres 2 miles southwest of Forsythe.

Sheriff Guy Tullock, of Lewistown, said fire burned over a 3-mile area in the Judith Mountains.

Maryland Crops Menaced.

Baltimore, July 8 (AP).—Hot, dry weather today threatened to wipe out much of the benefit Maryland crops received from last week's rains.

In reviewing the results of the recent precipitation, the Weather Bureau said "a good soaking rain" was still needed. There was no immediate prospect of such a rain, however, since the forecast was for continued fair and warm weather.

The bureau's synopsis recounted that the rye and wheat harvests had been completed, except possibly in some far western parts of the State, and threshing was well under way.

Early potato digging continued, the early pea harvest was largely over in western Maryland, corn cultivation went on, and the early tomatoes were maturing and ripening as were early apples, peaches and pears.

Commodity Prices Up.

New York, July 8 (AP).—A spurt of as high as $3 a bale in cotton helped keep speculative commodity prices generally moving upward today.

Bulls switched to cotton futures for a whirl after the Government's first estimate of acreage planted for the new crop turned out to be smaller than most traders had expected in view of recent private figures.

With grain prices mixed after the spectacular advance in previous sessions, the cotton market became the focus of interest in Wall Street commodity circles.

Jumping about $2 a bale following a brief recess while the report came in from Washington, the market later extended the advance to close $2.70 to $3.05 a bale higher, around peak prices for the season.

The move brought 13-cent cotton back to the board for the first time since September, 1934, as the July contract changed hands above that level.

Other Commodities Rise.

Dun & Bradstreet reported a rise of 10 cents in its weekly index of wholesale food prices, the sharpest advance since April, 1933. For the week ended yesterday the index stood at $2.76, compared with $2.54 early in June, and $2.58 a year ago.

Aside from grains and flour, items contributing to the rise included hams, bacon, butter, cheese, coffee, beans, eggs and cottonseed oil.

Rain Falls in Canada.

Winnipeg, July 8 (AP).—Cooling rain brought a new lease of life to wheat crops in scattered areas in three prairie provinces today.

Extent of the two-day downfall varied from light drizzles to fairly heavy precipitation. Reports referred to it as "scattered, but generous."

Father Ducey Chosen Prior At St. Anselm

Is First Native American to Head Institution; Studied Abroad.

The Very Rev. William Michael Ducey, O. S. B., a member of the Benedictine Foundation at Catholic University, has been named head of St. Anselm's Priory with the title of Prior, it was announced yesterday.

Father Ducey was born in Grand Rapids, Mich., educated in the parochial schools of that city and at the preparatory seminary at Grand Rapids. He made his philosophical and theological studies at Mount St. Marys Seminary in Cincinnati, Ohio, where the Very Rev. Francis Augustine Walsh, O. S. B., at present regent of the seminary of Catholic University, was professor of philosophy and vice president of the seminary. Father Ducey has now become the religious superior of his former teacher.

Ordained in Grand Rapids by the late Bishop Edward D. Kelley, Father Ducey celebrated his first mass in his native city on July 11, 1921.

After a few years of parochial duties in the Diocese of Grand Rapids, Father Ducey asked for a release from his diocese. He then came to Washington and associated himself with the monks of the Benedictine Foundation and to study at the Catholic University. He spent one semester at the university and then left for Fort Augustus, Scotland, to make his novitiate at the abbey to which St. Anselm's is attached and where novitiates of those aspiring to the order have been made up to the present.

Returning to the United States, Father Ducey took a master's degree in the field of history in the graduate school of Arts and Sciences at Catholic University in June, 1931.

The new prior is widely known in the United States and Europe because of the unusual international radio broadcasts which he has been instrumental in arranging.

Father Ducey succeeds the Very Rev. Adrian Weld-Blundell, prior of St. Anselm's since 1926 and builder of the present priory. Father Weld-Blundell, now living in retirement in England because of ill-health and age, was well known in Washington.

The first prior to St. Anselm's was the Very Rev. Wulstan Knowles, who was head of the local foundation from 1924 to 1926. At present he is the Abbot of Fort Augustus Abbey in Scotland. It was during his recent visit to the two American priories under his general supervision, Portsmouth Priory, Portsmouth, R. I., and St. Anselm's Priory in Washington, that he announced to the local community the appointment of the new prior. This took place on June 22, the feast of St. Alban, the first English martyr, but was not made public until yesterday.

In addition to becoming third prior of St. Anselm's, Father Ducey becomes the first native American to be named head of his Benedictine Foundation. This community is unique among monastic orders in that it was founded originally as an institution for a study of the liturgy of the church and its preservation and execution in meticulous detail, as well as an institution for scholarly research.

CombustionEngine Is Blamed for Ills

New York, July 8 (AP).—Sailing for a vacation in England, William Alexander Julian, Treasurer of the United States, observed today.

"What's wrong with the world today is the internal combustion engine?"

He explained:

"The Nation has been put on wheels. Everything is mobilized. Through the internal combustion engine the number of human beings who have been thrown out of employment is beyond the counting.

"What are we going to do about it? Well, all I can say is that we had better keep our heads as best we can."

As a parting admonition, he said: "I'd like also to remind young men that 90 per cent of the taxes collected today in this world are collected to pay off wars in the past, in the present and for the future."

With Julian were Mrs. Julian and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. Sailing next week, Roper will join the party in London.

Suspect Is Freed In Castle Murder

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—Edward Lynch, 31, held as a fugitive from criminal prosecution in Denver, Colo., was cleared tonight of any connection with the slaying of Mrs. Florence Thompson Castle here June 29.

First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley said he was convinced Lynch, alias Ernest Lavergne, knew nothing about the death of the 24-year-old entertainer, beaten with a brick as she slept beside her son, Jimmy, 7.

Taken to talk with Lynch, the boy said he was not the man he awakened to find in his mother's darkened hotel room.

Lynch was arraigned today before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker and held in $10,000 bond when he offered to return to Denver to face a charge of robbing an employe of the Bailey-Underhill Co., of $5,163 last September 7. His hearing was continued until Friday.

A former convict, Lynch was a friend of J. W. Bolin, one of Mrs. Castle's earlier husbands, now serving a sentence in the Colorado State Prison at Canon City.

He was arrested by Department of Justice agents today on the South Side.

Orville M. Gold Killed in Crash; Army Musician

Wife Critically Injured as Auto Is Wrecked by Train in Ontario.

Orville M. Gold, retired member of the Army Band, was instantly killed yesterday and his wife, Mrs. Lottie Gold, an employe of the General Accounting Office, was injured critically when their automobile was struck by a fast passenger train near Espanola, Ontario, it was learned here last night.

The couple was on a vacation trip to the home of their daughter. They left their apartment at 1425 Rhode Island avenue northwest Wednesday. Gold was dead when dragged from the wrecked machine, and Mrs. Gold is in Espanola Hospital with slight chance to recover, according to physicians.

Gold, a World War veteran, recently received his bonus bonds and had purchased a new automobile to make the trip. A short time before they left, Mrs. Gold gave the key to her apartment to Hattie Womack, the janitor's wife, telling her:

"Some day I am going to leave this apartment and never return. I want you to take this key and don't let anyone in our apartment except my daughter."

Gold was born July 12, 1883, in Gaston, N. C. He enlisted in the Army in 1904. For 30 years he served in the Army Band, retiring last May 31.

Mrs. Gold, a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, has been employed at the General Accounting Office for more than 20 years. She is a reconciliation clerk in the research division.

Washingtonian Killed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 8.—One Washingtonian was killed and three others injured in a three-car smashup 12 miles north of here on Richmond-Washington highway about 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The dead man is Norman Bragg, 29, of 608 Tenth street southeast. He died of chest injuries in Mary Washington Hospital at 5 o'clock after being admitted at 2:30.

Mitchell Howard, of 600 B street southwest, Washington, is in serious condition, with eye injuries, a possible fracture of the skull and other fractures about the body. Those slightly hurt are Mrs. Nellie O'Neill, 608 Tenth street southwest, and Walter Smith, of the same address. The latter two were given first aid treatment. Smith was dismissed from the hospital late this afternoon.

The accident, according to State Patrolman R. A. Sims, occurred when a car driven by Willard G. Duffey, of Washington, and a truck driven by Lother Sanford, of Denmark, S. C., en route north, were in a sideswipe collision. The car being driven south by Walter Smith, of Washington, containing those injured, careened over an embankment and wrecked. Charges of carelessness and reckless driving were placed against all three drivers early this afternoon by Patrolman Sims.

Owen Marriage Plans 'Indefinite'

The secretary of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, United State Minister to Denmark, said last night at New York that plans for Mrs. Owen's marriage to Boerge Rohde, captain in King Christian's bodyguard, were indefinite, it was reported by the United Press.

"Neither the time nor the place of the marriage has been decided definitely," the secretary said. "That will be decided after Capt. Rohde arrives from Europe and he and Mrs. Owen confer."

It had been reported the marriage would be performed tomorrow at the Long Island home of Mrs. Robert Lehman, Mrs. Owen's daughter.

10,000 Britons Honor Chamberlain's Father

By the Associated Press.

London, July 8.—A vast centenary audience, gathered in Albert Hall, paid homage tonight to a 50foot floodlit picture of the late Joseph Chamberlain, Britain's great statesman of empire.

Political observers attached considerable significance to the birth centenary celebrations in view of Stanley Baldwin's reported desire that Neville Chamberlain, second son of Joseph, succeed him as prime minister.

Neville Chamberlain now is chancellor of the exchequer.

Close to 10,000 Conservatives and Imperialists gathered for tonight's program in London's largest auditorium, avowedly designed to glorify the Chamberlain family's political creed.

Rockefeller's Health Rules Are Derided by 'Oldster' of 105

'They Ain't Bad for a Youngster in His Nineties, But for the Second 100 Years They Just Won't Do,' Is Veteran's Comment.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Petersburg, Fla., July 8.—Charles W. Eldridge, just turned 105, neglected his rowboat and fishing pole today to scoff at the rules of health laid down by John D. Rockefeller, sr.

"The young feller asked for it," chuckled Eldridge, observing that this was Rockefeller's ninety-seventh birthday. "I see by the papers he comes out with ten rules of health, and they ain't bad for a youngster in his nineties.

"But for the second hundred years they just won't do."

Eldridge, commander of the G. A. R. post here and manager of the Three-Quarter Century Club Ball Team, said the younger generation is long on making rules but short on experience.

"Take rule No. 5 in Young Rockefeller's list," Eldridge snorted. "Don't allow yourself to get annoyed, it says. That's poppycock. I've been annoyed most all of my 105 years, and two or three times it saved my life.

"Once I got so mad at a couple of doctors who said I was done for that I jumped out of bed for the first time in three months. I was 92 then and grass has been growing on them doctors' graves for ten years."

Eldridge's fits of temperament on the ball field are well known to the sports writers who report the spring workout at the Boston Bees and New York Yankees training camps here.

Twice last season he marched his team of oldsters off the field when sound news cameramen invaded the diamond for closeups, but was coaxed back.

"Darn fol de rol," he muttered.

"I wasn't ever sick a day until I was past 90," he confided.

Eldridge was born in Edinburg, Scotland, June 29, 1831. He married three times and is thrice a widower.

His ballot has been cast for 22 Presidential candidates. A Republican, he said, Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, would get his vote.

sun house on one of the spacious lawns. It was here that he said:

"I know I will live to be 100, just as I said several years ago."

He demonstrated his health by eating part of the birthday cake as well as defying the heat outdoors. The cake climaxed a meal consisting of hot boullion, fresh lamb and vegetables raised on the estate and acidophilous milk.

At the table with him were Mrs. E. Parmalee Prentice, of New York, a daughter; Miss Madeline Prentice, a granddaughter; Laurence S. Rockefeller, a grandson; Mrs. Fannie A. Evans, a cousin and for many years hostess at his three estates; Miss Katherine L. Hinsdale, a friend of the retired oil man and of Mrs. Evans, and two friends of Laurance Rockefeller.

No gifts were exchanged between Rockefeller and the staff of Golf House, as was once done.

Needy Hungry, Pennsylvanians War Over Fund

500,000 Without Food Orders as Rival Parties Battle in State Senate.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 8 (AP).—More than 500,000 on Pennsylvania's relief rolls went without food orders and cash today for the third successive day.

New Dealers and Republicans in the State Senate, battling over the amount needed for the next six months, were uncomprising.

The Democratic Governor, George H. Earle, demanded $55,000,000. The senate, controlled by organization Republicans, offered $35,000,000, but not a cent more, although the capitol heard talk this offer might be increased eventually to $45,000,000.

Pleads for Action.

Above the din of partisan controversy, Karl de Schweinitz, director of the Emergency Relief Board, pleaded for action. He wrote to John J. McClure, old-time Republican chairman of the senate finance committee:

"The State emergency relief board was unable to grant any relief yesterday to any needy person or family in the State. The same condition holds today. We shall not be able to send either checks or orders for food, milk or any other form of relief to the unemployed. Our relief roll is now 173,700 families, representing 567,709 persons.

"As I indicated in my letter of yesterday," he went on, "our estimate of $54,294,000 is contingent on the ability of the WPA to absorb upward of 30,000 families from our present relief rolls. To reduce this appropriation to $35,000,000 would mean that over and above any present reduction which we are contemplating, 67,000 families would be refused further assistance."

Some saw a gleam of hope in the Democratic House, where a proposal went forward for the State to sell notes based on expected revenues for $65,000,000. Leaders pointed out part of these notes could be sold quickly.

The Senate, preparing to push the revenue measures and expecting the tax anticipation bill, decided to meet at 12:01 a. m. Friday to deal with the emergency. It takes three days to pass a bill.

City Hall Invaded.

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—An invasion of the City Hall today by a crowd of several hundred relief clients was followed quickly by two developments easing the threatening crisis in the care of the needy here.

The city council bowed to State authorities who have demanded that local governments assume a share of the relief burden, effective July 1, by passing an ordinance levying a special tax of 30 cents a $100 of valuation on all property.

City Relief Commissioner Leo M. Lyons mailed out July 1 food orders—held up for more than a week in a tangle of administrative procedure—to 40,000 families, and announced orders for 43,000 more would follow shortly.

The council levy, expected to yield $500,000 a month toward the full city relief bill of $3,000,000, will be augmented by $1,100,000 monthly from the State's sales tax.

It was adopted by a 39-to-8 vote after a stormy session, during which Mayor Edward J. Kelly was forced to order policemen to clear the galleries of demonstrating relief clients.

"We want cash relief," "we demand bread and meat," the intruders shouted, while temporarily aldermen gave up trying to debate the measure and the mayor pounded in vain for order.

Other demonstrators milled about the building and outside. Finally police, taking the galleries, section by section, removed the noisemakers.

Scranton Jail Breaker Adds Insult to Injury

Scranton, Pa., July 8 (AP).—Lackawanna County officials reluctantly admitted today that John Kutch, 20, not only escaped from the county prison a couple of days ago, but applied for a marriage license an hour later next door to the sheriff's office.

Under the three-day "wait-and-think" law, Kutch could get his license tomorrow. Officials said they were not presuming he will return for it. His intended bride was named as Mary Paserp, 21. He was jailed for not supporting her child.

Lee Builds Up 44,329 Lead In Oklahoma

Gore Fourth in Primary; Three House Democrats Appear Nominated.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, July 8.—Youthful Josh Lee added to a substantial lead in the Democratic senatorial race tonight while E. W. Marland, Oklahoma's New Deal Governor, was hard pressed by Gomer Smith, National Townsend Plan Vice President, for second place on the run-off primary ballot.

Returns from 3,353 of the 3,411 precincts gave Lee, former public speaking instructor at the University of Oklahoma, 164,303 votes. Marland had 119,974 and Smith 115,924.

Outdistanced and in fourth position, conceding defeat, was white-haired Thomas P. Gore, the blind senator who served Oklahoma 19 years in the upper house of Congress.

Gore to Capital Soon.

"I'm just like a boy out of college," said the veteran senator. "I've go to strike out again." He said he would return to Washington soon.

Marland campaigned on his social security program, which carried in yesterday's first primary. He also advocated a "support-the-President-platform."

If he retains his lead he will meet Lee July 28 in the run-off primary.

Lee, granted a leave from the university two years ago to campaign successfully for Congress, linked a support-the-President program with a "farm-for-every-farmer" plea.

Smith, backed by Townsendites and various farmer and labor organizations, declared he saw no need for a third party when Dr. Francis E. Townsend was being approached to join the Lemke-Coughlin third party movement.

In the Republican senatorial primary, Herbert K. Hyde, prosecutor of the Charles F. Urschel kidnapers while United States district attorney here, held a long lead over Horace McKeever, Enid attorney.

Disney Appears Nominated.

Three of Oklahoma's eight Democratic Congressmen seeking reelection appeared nominated without the necessity of entering the run-off primary.

They were: Representative Wesley Disney, of Tulsa; Jed Johnson, of Anadarko, and Sam Massingale, of Cordell. Incomplete returns showed their votes totaled more than those of the combined opponents.

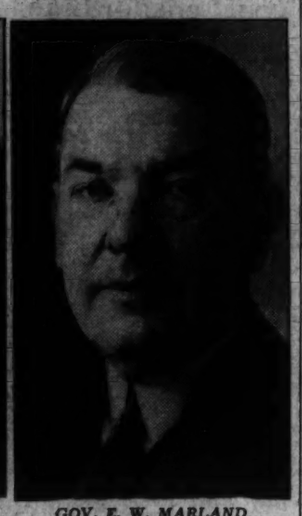
Will Rogers, former school teacher, apparently held a same margin over his 15 opponents to obtain the Democratic Congressman-at-large nomination without a run-off.

Representative Jack Nichols and Wilburn Cartwright needed only a few more favorable returns to assure them of nomination. Percy L. Gassaway, cowboy Congressman, seemed assured of a place on the run-off ballot in his district, as did Representative Phil Ferguson, Woodward rancher.

The Marland-advocated $15 old-age pension plan and its accompanying sales tax measure to finance it, apparently had safe majorities. A third initiated measure—a $500,000 conservation commission appropriation—seemed certain to be defeated.

In Race for Senate Seat

REPRESENTATIVE JOSH LEE.



GOV. E. W. MARLAND.

Representative Lee, former professor of public speaking at University of Oklahoma, was assured a place in the run-off election for Democratic nomination for United States Senate seat now held by Senator Gore, of Oklahoma. Gov. Marland was leading for second.

Tear Gas Sent to Strike Area

Hartford from his New Hampshire summer home. He was apprised of the Middletown situation by Philip Hewes, his executive secretary, and State Police Commissioner Anthony Sunderland.

Hewes told the Governor in a telephone conversation that Mayor Leo B. Santangelo of Middletown would demand National Guard troops be called into the strike area if further violence occurs.

Said Mayor Santangelo:

"It's not so much a question of winning or losing the strike, as maintaining law and order in Middletown. Stonings and attacks on the homes of workers will not be tolerated."

A conference of interested parties will be held at the State Capitol with Gov. Cross when he returns, it was understood.

As more than 100 State and local police stood guard late today, workers in the plant left for their homes, while a mob of strikers congregated in a nearby lot, remained ominously quiet as compared with yesterday, when they stoned a bus load of nonstrikers, seriously injuring two of them, and battled police for half an hour.

The workers did not escape entirely unscatched, however. Three private automobiles were stoned and damaged as they left the plant grounds.

Rand said a night shift will start at the local plant Thursday.

The company president said he would decline to meet with union officials at his Norwood (Ohio) plant. "There is," he said, "no further use of discussing closed shop with me. We had a formal discussion a few days before the strike was called at Syracuse, N. Y., and I'm not backing down an inch from the dicision I announced at that time."

Violence at the plants, Rand said, "has strengthened my determination not to give in from my original stand."

Women in Strike Fray.

Camden, N. J., July 8 (AP).—Women battled hand to hand in a strike outbreak near the RCA plant late today and clothing was torn from two of them.

One man was arrested as he left the plant. Police said he was carrying a fountain-pen type tear gas gun, which he said he needed for protection.

Union officials said six foremen at the plant were discharged today after they refused to instruct newly employed workers in their duties.

Police Judge Lewis Liberman sentenced one man arrested in a strike altercation to 30 days and fined another $25 on charges of inciting to riot. He fined a woman $25 on an assault and battery charge. Several others arrested in connection with the strike received suspended sentences on minor charges.

The strike was called June 22 by the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America after negotiation with the board for a week on demands for wage increases and a closed shop.

Ft. Stevens Battle Services Saturday

Annual exercises commemorating the Battle of Fort Stevens will be held on the battlefield site Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock by the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Scheduled speakers are John Claggett Proctor, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A., retired; Potomac G. A. R. Commander John M. Kline and Assistant Adjt. Gen. of the Potomac G. A. R., E. D. Godfrey.

Tulane Names Menuet.

Nw Orleans, July 8 (AP).—R. L. Menuet, professor of mathematics at Tulane University, was appointed acting president of the university today by the school's board of administrators. Dr. Douglas S. Anderson, who became acting president upon the death of the late Dr. A. B. Dinwiddle, resigned as acting president recently.

Edward Hinkel, Capital Firm's President, Dies

Head of Rug Company Was Native of District, Bank Adviser.

Edwin Philip Hinkel, prominent Washington businessman and president of E. P. Hinkel & Co., carpet and rug merchants, died yesterday of a heart attack in Garfield Hospital after a brief illness. He lived at 1604 Varnum street and was 60 yeas old.

Born and educated in Washington, he was the son of John Peter Hinkel, for years treasurer of the Metropolis Building and Loan Association, and Anna Sadler Hinkel. His father fled to this country from his native Germany to avoid conscription and then enlisted in the Union Army for duration of the Civil War.

As a boy, Hinkel left public school to enter the rug-cleaning business of the late Serge Peterson. Starting as an office boy, he worked his way steadily upward until he was able to buy the company from his employer at the age of 30.

Entered New Field.

Subsequently he changed the name of the concern and branched out into the wholesale merchandising of rugs and carpets.

He became one of the leading contractors in this field in the South, supplying the needs of scores of Government buildings, hotels and theaters in this and other cities.

Hinkel also was president of Ross & Wells, Inc., electrical contractors, and was a member of the advisory boards of several local banks, notably the Hamilton National Bank. He was a member of the Cosmopolitan Club and many business and civic organizations.

Wife, Four Sons Survive.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Ellen Dolan Hinkel, whom he married in 1904, and four sons, John V., of the editorial staff of the New York Times; Edwin P., a member of his father's firm; Paul D., in the rug business in High Point, N. C., and Thomas S. Hinkel, a student at Harvard Law School.

Two brothers and four sisters also survive, Charles A. and Fred P. Hinkel, both of the Hinkel Carpet Co.; Mrs. Emma C. Wells, Mrs. Wilbur Zepp and Miss Anna A. Hinkel, all of Washington, and Mrs. J. Fred Meyer, of Columbus, Ohio.

Funeral services will be held at his residence Saturday, at 10 a. m., the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, rector of the Church of the Reformation, officiating. Burial will be at the Abbey Mausoleum, near Arlington, Va.

Methodists Drive To Extend Missions

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—The board of Bishops, the World Service Commisison and other leaders of the Methodist Episcopal Church today launched "the world is my parish" movement, described as a special effort to continue through four years for the extension of the missionary and benevolence enterprises of the denomination.

Under the plan, the church hopes to enroll 500,000 persons who will subscribe $1 a month to the benevolence and missionary program. The goal for the first year is $6,000,000—for the four-year period the goal is 1,000,000 donors for a total of $12,000,000 a year.

Mrs. Roosevelt Inspects Camp For Idle Girls

First Lady Believes Project Will Be as Useful as CCC Groups.

By the Associated Press.

Suffern, N. Y., July 8.—In tennis shoes and short-sleeved dress, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt toured a camp for unemployed girls today and then expressed a belief that the half hundred similar projects planned by the WPA for other parts of the country "may be as useful as the CCC camps are for boys."

Apparently referring to recent charges that the camp was a hotbed of communism, Mrs. Roosevelt added:

"There will be criticism, of course. Everything that is new is bound not always to do the right thing. Moreover, we are dealing with different types of human beings who don't always do what is expected of them. There may be things that should be changed, but basically I think the idea is good."

After her inspection of Camp Jane Addams at Bear Mountain, operated by the National Youth Administration, the President's wife declared she had found "absolutely no sign of any communistic teachings."

Her attention had been called to a demand for an investigation made by the Rockland County American Legion, which charged at its recent convention that the camp was permeated with communistic propaganda.

A newspaper photograph of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, the Republican Presidential nominee, was posted in one of the camp halls. Mrs. Roosevelt smiled when she saw it.

Boys Club Opens Theater on Wheels

A 30-minute program of musical acts and stunts was presented in Judiciary Square by members of the Police Boys Club yesterday, opening the Rambling Theater's summer season of park entertainments.

The youngsters, aboard their "theater on wheels," presented an amusing program before an audience of several hundred. The acts were directed by Morris Fox, director of the club, and sponsored by the Community Center Department and Office of National Capital Parks.

Similar programs will be presented each Wednesday afternoon during July and August. The Rambling Theater will travel from park to park throughout the city. Groups to be featured in future presentations will be the Y. W. C. A., District Playground Department, Christ Child Society, Stay-at-Homes, Neighborhood House, Friendship House and the Jewish Community Center.

Puerto Ricans Ask U. S. End Plot Case

San Juan, P. R., July 8 (U.P.).—Presidents of two Puerto Rican political parties jointly cabled President Roosevelt tonight, urging he drop prosecution of Albizu Campos, belligerent revolutionary, and eight others charged with conspiracy to overthrow the government by force and create an independent state.

Antonio Barcelo, head of the Liberal party, and Rafael Martinez Nadal, of the Union Republican party, signed the cable, asserting that the trial, scheduled to start July 14, would jeopardize public tranquility.

Special prosecutors from the United States have already arrived here, and witnesses have been ordered to appear for the trial, which followed investigation of Campos' army of youth which refuses to recognize American jurisdiction in the island.

Y. W. C. A. Opens Pool on E Street

The Y. W. C. A. swimming pool at 614 E street northwest yesterday was opened to children of the city's center for the summer.

Reopening was made possible by contributions totaling $477.50, of which $327.50 was given this year, while the rest is in a balance from a similar fund raised last year.

The pool will be open for two months, three days each week for boys and three for girls.

Mrs. Heald Dies In Yonkers Home

Mrs. Edward C. Heald, formerly of Washington, died yesterday at her home in Yonkers, N. Y. She had been ill for about three months.

Mrs. Heald, who before her marriage was Marcia Flagg Butler, was the daughter of Charles Henry Butler and the late Mrs. Butler, of this city. She was educated at Miss Porter's School, at Farmington, Conn.

She was active in social and civic affairs in Yonkers and was a contributor to Westchester County periodicals.

Surviving are her husband, Edward C. Heald; her father, Charles Henry Butler; a son, Bradley Heald; two daughters, Marcia and Caroline Cresswell Heald, and three brothers, Dr. Ethan Flagg Butler, Col. Charles Marshall Butler and Henry Franklin Butler. A sister-in-law, Katherine B. Heald, of 1729 G street northwest, is a local music teacher.

Funeral services will be held Friday at Mrs. Heald's home in Yonkers.

Photographic Society Plans Trip Saturday

The Washington Photographic Society will hold a field trip Saturday, starting at 2:30 p. m. from the Constitution avenue entrance of the National Museum. All persons interested in taking pictures with the group are invited to attend, the president, W. N. Moreland, announced yesterday.

The trip Saturday will take the place of the indoor meeting planned for the first part of July. Later in the month the indoor session will be held.

WHAT TO DO FOR ECZEMA ITCHING AND BURNING

Wash the affected parts with Resinol Soap and warm water to soften scales and crusts. Resinol Soap is suggested because it contains no excess of free alkali, and is especially suited to tender skin. Dry by patting with a soft cloth—do not rub.

Doctors recommend an oily ointment because it penetrates the outer layers of the skin more effectively. Resinol Ointment meets this requirement, and does even more. For over 40 years it has been—and still is—successfully used to relieve quickly the itching and burning of eczema. It contains soothing ingredients that aid healing.

Use Resinol Ointment today and enjoy comfort tomorrow. Get a jar, also a cake of Resinol Soap, at any drug store. For free sample, write to Resinol, Dept. 1, Baltimore, Md.

Peiping Sees Japan's Troops Parade Might

Tokyo's String of Mongol Arms Missions Reported Almost Completed.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, China, July 8 (AP).—Rumbling tanks, armored cars and hundreds of motorized Japanese troops startled Peiping's placid and historical legation quarter today.

Flags flew, bugles sounded and great quantities of war materials were paraded through the international district.

It was the first time the huge caterpillars had been seen in the legation quarter. No other country has such equipment here.

Half a dozen Japanese generals appeared in the demonstration, intended, apparently, to show Chinese and foreigners Japan is prepared to deal with anybody who resists her mainland military.

Reports from Ninghsia Province, coincidentally, indicated Japan had all but completed a string of radio-equipped military missions dominating the 2,000-mile length of inner Mongolia from west of the Manchukuo border.

The advices said such a mission just had established itself among the potent Alashan League of Inner Mongolia in far western Suiyuan and eastern Ninghsia provinces.

Some observers suggested the next Japanese move would be to drive out Suiyuan's Chinese governor, Fu Tso-Yi, who represents the last outpost of Chinese authority in Inner Mongolia, and has refused stubbornly to respond to Japanese advances.

From Hong Kong, Japanese sources reported 12 southwest army aviators from Kwangsi Province had deserted to the central government. Canton (Southwest) officials were reported rationing gasoline to prevent further desertions.

Mother of President In Maine on Vacation

Lubec, Me., July 8 (AP).—Bearing a huge Chinese lily, Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President, arrived late today by motor from Rockland.

The lily, gift of a Boston friend, will be planted in her summer garden at Campobello, N. B., she said.

Study of Taxation Problems Planned by Montgomery Unit

County Farm Bureau Will Sponsor Inquiry Into All Phases of Situation; Report Expected by Close of Year.

The Montgomery County Farm Bureau is sponsoring a study of the tax problems in Montgomery County as part of similar studies being conducted in several other counties of this State, it was announced yesterday by J. W. Jones, president.

The following phases of the tax situation will be included in the investigation, Jones said:

1. Inequalities of assessments among farm properties, and between farm and urban properties. The basis of determining such inequalities will be soil types and productivity of farm land, records of property transfers (their assessed and sale values during the past several years), and records of building permits for the past several years.

2. Possibilities of decreasing certain county governmental costs by reorganization, efficiency and economy.

3. The possible need and effect of a reassessment carried out according to law, and the relationship of such to the future county tax rate and bonded indebtedness.

4. A comparison of certain county expenditures, including capital outlay, in rural districts, with the tax assessment and liability against farm property.

The Department of Agricultural Economics at the University of Maryland has been requested to make this study and much of the information has already been assembled. A report is expected by the end of the year.

The recently organized Montgomery County Beer Dealers Association, at its monthly meeting at Silver Spring yesterday, voted to ask the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board to take immediate steps to prevent the delivery of beer from the District into Maryland. The association claims that in spite of the fact that it is against the law to bring more than a quart of alcoholic beverage a month into the State, the practice is being violated daily.

Reed and Albert Buehler were appointed to contact various employment agencies in Washington and select one from which the members of the association could obtain their employes. Definite improvement in the appearance of the beer places was reported in the organization's clean-up drive. Plans were made for an outing Tuesday at the place of business of David S. Tuohey, Cabin John. The association will invite the Beer Distributors Association of the county and the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board to participate in the outing. Beer and steamed crabs will be served.

Montgomery County police were asked to start a drive to curb speeding on Georgia avenue, through Silver Spring, by the Silver Spring Business Men's Association at a meeting in the Brooke Tea House. The association also is seeking to have the speed limit lowered from 25 to 20 miles an hour to reduce the number of accidents at the B. & O. underpass at the southern end of the town.

A move to obtain a modern ambulance for the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department Rescue Squad also has been started. A committee composed of Fred L. Lutes, chairman; Capt. Frank L. Hewitt, Dr. Howell Forsyth and Dr. Ralph D. Smith was appointed to study the feasibility of purchasing the apparatus.

Another committee consisting of George Day, chairman; Garland Wolfe and Charles S. Miner was named to plan for proper observance of national holidays.

Development of a tract of land near Chevy Chase Lake as part of Rock Creek Park was urged at a meeting of the citizens' committee of North Chevy Chase.

The citizens, led by Mason B. Leming, chairman of the committee, propose asking the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Montgomery County Commissioners to provide the park. Support of the Montgomery County Civic Federation will be sought.

The auxiliary to the Takoma Park American Legion Post has elected its delegates and alternates to the State convention, to be held in Baltimore August 28 and 29.

They are: Delegates, Mrs. Elizabeth Day, Mrs. Mary Shields, Mrs. Anna Shadle and Mrs. Helen Bateman; alternates, Mrs. Grace Thompson, Mrs. Violet Gale, Mrs. Lulu Yates and Miss Frances Beacock.

A farewell party was tendered Mayor Henry T. McCuen last night at his home on Harvard avenue by residents of Glen Echo. During the evening Mr. McCuen was presented with a traveling case. Mr. McCuen leaves tonight for a trip to the West Coast.

Two absolute divorces were granted yesterday in the Montgomery County Circuit Court.

Mrs. Evelyn C. Carr, 43, Bethesda, Md., was granted a final decree from William R. Carr, of Baltimore. Mrs. Carr charged her husband deserted her on February 15, 1928.

Arthur B. Davis, 38, of Rockville, Md., was granted a final decree from Mrs. Irene C. Davis, whose last known address was New York, N. Y. Mr. Davis charged desertion on September 3, 1924.

The official board of the Rockville Baptist Church will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m., it was announced yesterday by the pastor, the Rev. Herbert O. Cooper.

Sodium Bromide Held Beneficial to Epileptics

Portland, Oreg., July 8 (AP).—Sodium bromide—a common drug which escaped attention in the past—is being used successfully in the treatment of epilepsy, Dr. Lewis J. Pollock, research specialist in nervous and mental diseases, told the Pacific Northwest Medical Society today.

Dr. Pollock, whose laboratory is at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., said use of sodium bromide in more than 100 cases resulted in complete stoppage of seizures in 60 per cent of the cases. He said treatments must continue four or five years.

U. S. Will Arbitrate Peru, Ecuador Line

Guayaquil, Ecuador, July 8 (AP). The dispute between Ecuador and Peru over the location of their joint boundary will be submitted to President Roosevelt for arbitration this fall, the foreign office announced today.

The protocol for arbitration, it was stated, was signed yesterday in Lima, Peru.

The protocol provides:

1. Arbitration according to law.

2. Peru and Ecuador each to name three delegates who will meet in Washington September 30, 1936.

3. Peru and Ecuador to maintain the status quo along the boundary until President Roosevelt decides the exact line.

The delegates will be: For Ecuador, Homero Viteri LaFronte, Alejandro Ponce Borja and Jose Vicente Trujillo; for Peru, Francisco Tudela, Arturo Garcia Salazar and Victor Andres Belaunde.

Accord Nears With Germany, Vienna Believes

Hope for Lessening of Tension Aroused by Hungary Talks.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, July 8.—Continued conversations tonight aroused greater hopes for relieving German-Austrian tension than have been apparent for many months.

Vice Chancellor Eduard Baar-Baarenfeld departed on an official visit to Premier Julius Goemboes, of Hungary. Observers regarded the trip as an important foreign policy step.

They pointed out a signatory to the Rome pact between Austria, Italy and Hungary cannot undertake a change in foreign policy without the consent of the other two. They believed also that Italy's approval of a possible Austro-German rapprochment was obtained previously.

However, a chancellery official warned that ngotiations along that line had made slow progress, and said complete satisfaction of Austrian demands was not in sight.

The German legation denied knowledge of a report that the 1,000 mark visa requirement for German visitors to Austria was about to be lifted.

Gains Support.

Chancelor Kurt Schuschnigg's long cherished dream for an economic federation in the Danubian basin received support from a Rumanian quarter.

Jon Christu, chief of the economic department of the Rumanian foreign office, said in a statement Rumania was prepared to study the possibility of economic co-operation in the valley.

He stressed the Little Entente agreement for economic co-operation still was in effect, but added the entente was ready to talk with Rome pact states.

A sort of revival of the old Austro-Hungarian empire, for business purposes only, has been urged of late by an increasing number of statesmen and economic specialists.

This, however, was a black day for Austrian monarchists.

First, news of Austro-German peace preliminaries considerably weakened hopes of early restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy through the young Archduke Otto.

Blum Interview.

Second, news came from Belgrade which some interpreted as meaning that France had assured Yugoslavia of her support against restoration.

The Belgrade newspaper Pravda published an interview with Leon Blum, the French premier, which was interpreted in Yugoslavian political circles as a positive answer to Yugoslavia's recent inquiry whether the French, in the case of restoration in Austria, would come to Belgrade's assistance.

"Yugoslavia has no reason to be disquieted, because we highly value our friendship with that country," Blum was quoted as having said.

"The French government is aware of the serious situation in middle Europe, especially Austria.

"We are trying our utmost to find a solution agreeable to all nations concerned, because this will be the only way to prevent war in Europe."

Snead's Death Due To Natural Causes

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of death due to natural causes yesterday after an autopsy in the death of James P. Snead, 37, of 1521 Vermont avenue northwest.

Snead, a laundry truck driver, died in Emergency Hospital yesterday after he had been taken there June 14 when a back injury, suffered May 26, failed to respond to treatment.

According to police, Snead fell down a flight of steps while collecting laundry in the 3200 block Seventeenth street northwest.

A. J. Luchs Dead; Artist - Teacher

Arthur J. Luchs, water-color artist and teacher, died late yesterday at his home, 2844 Connecticut avenue, after a brief illness.

A veteran of the World War, Mr. Luchs was noted for the seascapes and landscapes he drew in New England. He was widely known in the District for his skill.

Surviving Mr. Luchs, who was 42, are his father, Joseph Luchs, and three brothers, Sylvan, Morton and Wallace Luchs.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m at the home. Burial will be in Washington Hebrew Congreation Cemetery.

Blum Is Defied By Communists In Strike Threat

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 8.—Communists defied Premier Leon Blum's government tonight to make good its promise to use force if necessary to prevent new factory occupations by striking workers.

Deputy Maurice Thorez, the party's leader, said Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro, who made the promise to appease the Senate's radical Socialist faction, was "not well inspired in letting it be believed that force can be employed against the working class."

Salengro's plan to bring labor peace to a strike-plagued France thereby drew a threat of a Communist split from support of the Blum Cabinet.

Demand Evacuation.

However, in addressing the Senate Salengro promised "persuasive measures" only in the event evacuation appeals by labor unions and the government failed to dislodge the strikers.

Simultaneously, employers in northern France where 2,400 workers are still on strike, followed up the government's promise to prevent occupation of factories by a demand it use means to evacuate their plants.

Political circles expressed the belief Salengro's promise to use force, if necessary, helped the Blum government to avoid a threatened overthrow in the conservative Senate.

Arms Plan Approved.

In the meantime, the Leftist government's project to nationalize France's arms industries was approved by the army committee of the Chamber of Deputies tonight.

The measure reportedly will create a preliminary outlay of 800,000,000 francs (about $53,000,000) for experimental expropriation of factories serving the nation's land forces.

Defense Minister Edouard Daladier, authoritative sources declared, told the committee that the plants producing army equipment would be nationalized first because naval and aviation factories are more occupied with production for civilian use and therefore harder to place under government supervision.

Tap Dancing Class To Start Tomorrow

A children's class in tap dancing, under the direction of Miss Amalie Preiche, with Mrs. Elsie Harvey Weaver as pianist, will meet for the first time at Francis Scott Key School tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Mrs. A. L. Irving, in charge of community activities at the school, announces that if there is a demand an advanced class in tap dancing will be given at 3 p. m. for adults.

Marylander Faces Trial Here Today On Kidnap Charge

A 22-year-old Thurmont, Md., youth will be tried in the District Supreme Court today on a charge of violating the Lindbergh kidnap law. Jesse Miller, the youth, is alleged to have sent a letter to Mr. and Mrs. Stephen McK. Farrand, of 3011 Gates road, Chevy Chase, threatening their 14-month-old child.

On receipt of the letter, which demanded that $5,000 be sent to Miller's brother, Orville, Farrand turned it over to agents of the Department of Justice, where he is employed as a special assistant.

Agents questioned Orville, who was working on a WPA recreation project near Frederick, Md., but released him when they were satisfied he had nothing to do with the case.

A few days later they nabbed Jesse as he was sleeping in a Thurmont cemetery. He was brought to jail here in Washington but has refused to make any statement, even to his attorney.

Conviction would carry with it a possible $5,000 fine and 20 years imprisonment.

Son of Alfonso Files N. Y. Suit For Annulment

Spanish Prince Says Wife Failed to Help Guard His Health.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 8.—The romance that led the former Prince of the Asturias to renounce all hope of a castle in Spain tonight cooled on the Supreme Court calendar.

Suit for an annulment was started by the count, who accused his pretty wife of refusing to live with him in America and of failing to keep a promise to help him safeguard his delicate health. The count, like many other members of European royalty, is afflicted with hereditary haemophilia.

The Countess said at her home in Havana a few days ago that she would file suit for a divorce. She said she was "dizzy from all this" and expressed a wish to be "plain Edelmira Sampedro" again.

The marriage, which was frowned upon by the Count's father, former King Alfonso, was marked by recurring rumors of discord.

Attorneys for the 29-year-old Count, who is employed by a Park avenue automobile agency, said it would be "conclusively shown" at the proper time that "the Count was imposed upon by the Countess."

He was represented as being "keenly disappointed" over the outcome in view of the "tremendous sacrifices" he made to marry the girl.

The Countess was at his bedside when he was seriously ill in Havana early this year, and friends said she became annoyed because she believed the Count was not paying proper attention to her suggestions.

Mallory Denies He Made Love To Ex-Actress

Oil Man Scoffs at Charges of Miss Crawford's Former Husband.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., July 8.—Lewis E. Mallory, 3d, wound up his defense against James Edgar, jr.'s $300,000 love theft suit today with a blanket denial that he ever made love to the woman who was his accuser's wife—Kathryn Crawford, former actress.

Chuckling, the curly haired Bradford (Pa.) oil man testified about a conversation in which he said Edgar, Detroit sugar heir, told him he intended to set up a trust fund for the former Mrs. Edgar with the heart balm money he hoped to win from Mallory.

A ten-hour session in a sweltering courtroom saw the defense complete its case and the beginning of Edgar's rebuttal testimony.

Circuit Judge Worth W. Trammell indicated he wished to get the case to the jury by tomorrow night because his wife undergoes a major operation Friday.

Mallory, on the witness stand, ridiculed Edgar's testimony he saw a bedroom love scene between the oil heir and Miss Crawford when she still was Mrs. Edgar.

Mallory's final witness was Earl Burns, head houseman at the Deauville Hotel, where witnesses for Edgar testified earlier they had seen indiscretions committed by Mallory and the then Mrs. Edgar.

Taking the stand a few minutes after he had arrived here following a hurried train trip from Columbus, Ga., Burns testified Edgar had him show where Mallory's room was located and that Miss Crawford was ill in the hospital at the time.

By plane from Detroit, Edgar summoned Mrs. Martha Whale, nurse at Jennings Hospital, who testified the Edgars were "very affectionate" when the former Mrs. Edgar underwent an appendectomy last September.

Also by plane from New York came Anto Kloos, Deauville head waiter. He testified he saw Miss Crawford in bed with Mallory in the latter's room three times. He said he peered through a window.

Wilford V. Black Dies Unexpectedly

Wilford Van Horn Black, 45, of 1601 Argoane place northwest, died of a heart attack yesterday while on a business visit to the office of Dr. Clarence Cook, 1627 Sixteenth street northwest.

Black, employed by the Columbia Co., brokers, with offices in the Southern Building, called on Dr. Cook on a personal matter. He left the office and then returned complaining of being ill and asked to rest a while.

Community Fete Slated Tomorrow

The first of four July festival programs sponsored by the summer festival committee of the Community Center Department and the Office of National Capital Parks will be tomorrow night, when at 8 o'clock Marine Band makes its first appearance this season at the Washington Monument in a festival concert. The Arts Club will present an original Greek drama, "Phaeton, Son of Phoebus," with a cast of more than 100 players, dancers and singers.

The Marine Band, conducted by Second Leader, William F. Santlemann, will be heard in Massenet's "Overture to Phedre;" Jarnefelt's "Praeludium;" Saint-Saens' "Tone Poem, Phaeton;" Gillet's "Passepied," and Schumann's "Romance and Finale" from the Fourth Symphony.

The Marian Chase Dancers, the chorus of Greek gods and godesses and members of the cast, composed largely of Arts Club players assisted by the Georgetown Odeon Players of the Community Center Department, will present the episodes in the tragedy of Phaeton. Leading players will be Appleton Lawrence, Benjamin Smart Maurice Jarvis, Forney Reese, Maud Howell Smith, Charlotte Patterson, Nancy Ordway, Jack Perry and Jack Wilson.

The Deserted Village.

President Roosevelt's decision to discontinue all work on the Quoddy tidal-power project and the Florida ship canal is the proper course under the circumstances. Congress having explicitly refused funds for continuation of these undertakings, the logical executive action is to close them down completely.

One issue remains, however. It is the disposition of the workers' quarters and other expensive preliminary construction undertaken on the bland executive assumption that these two ambitious projects, started out of WPA funds, would automatically be continued by the rubber-stamp of a subservient legislature. Reports say that the University of Florida may be able to utilize some of the buildings laid down for the ship canal project, but that the Quoddy problem is more difficult because of the inaccessibility of the site. In other words, a factor which from the beginning made this undertaking of very dubious value now operates to prevent salvaging anything from the preliminary waste.

Lieut. Col. Fleming, Army engineer in charge at Quoddy, has already ordered the abandonment of certain parts of the little town where 1,200 persons, most of them now to be dismissed, are housed. Presumably the village will gradually decay and become a grass-grown monument to an outstanding example of slipshod and irresponsible government.

Many a rural community has some ambitious uncompleted mansion, which stands as a forlorn reminder of the megalomania of a local resident. The deserted village of Quoddy, perhaps destined to be known as "Roosevelt's Folly," differs from these private blunders chiefly in its magnitude, and in the fact that "other peoples' money," as the President would say, was impounded for its abortive construction.

For Future Reference.

In voting unanimously to end all sanctions against Italy on July 15, the League of Nations co-ordination committee coupled this retreat with a gesture whose ultimate significance time alone can reveal.

On the recommendation of the French and English representatives it was voted that the League members should continue to report to Geneva on the working of the present sanctions until June 30, and should furnish the secretariat with a memorandum giving their experiences with sanctions and such conclusions as they see fit to draw.

This action may mean little and it may mean much. Everything depends on whether the League members decide to divest the Geneva organization of the responsibilities for preserving peace prescribed in the Covenant. In that case a complete record of how sanctions were enforced, and what effect they had, would simply be of historical interest.

But there is the stronger possibility that the members of the League, despite the recent failure of sanctions to achieve what they were intended to achieve, have enough faith in that instrument to plan to use it in the future under an unmodified Covenant. In that case the record of what the League nations did during these past nine months would prove invaluable for purposes of guidance.

In any case the action taken by the coordination committee, as well as the rebuke administered to Poland for lifting sanctions before the time set, shows that the League's retreat is an orderly one to a new position.

The Oklahoma Vote.

The elimination of Senator Gore in Oklahoma's preliminary primary election is susceptible of two political interpretations. The veteran Senator has on numerous occasions been a sharp and effective critic of various New Deal measures. To the extent that his defeat can be attributed to this insurgency, the Administration would seem to be justified in contentment over a result which it took no steps to avert.

On the other hand, Senator Gore's substantial vote as an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination will serve to modify any Administration exuberance over the outcome. If the Gore votes are taken to represent Oklahoma Democrats who are dissatisfied with the New Deal to the point of repudiating it, the Republicans can for the first time feel that they have the semblance of a chance in this Southwestern State.

Such hopes will not be lessened by the character of the Republican senatorial nominee, Mr. Herbert K. Hyde, who, as former United States District Attorney, is well and favorably known throughout the State. On the other hand, Representative Lee, who seems likely to triumph in the run-off election on July 28, would undoubtedly prove a very strong Democratic candidate. Mr. Lee, a former University of Oklahoma professor, is somewhat unjustly described as a humorist and teacher of elocution. He has more stature than these attributes alone would indicate.

Whatever the outcome in Oklahoma, there will be widespread regret at the turn of events which deprives the Senate of Mr. Gore's further services. The blind Senator has always been an independent and courageous legislator, never hesitating to oppose his party on matters of conviction, whether the issue was the entry of the United States into the war or the desirability of the current work relief program. He has been true to his slogan that it is better to be guided "by the fixed star of principle rather than by the shooting stars of expediency."

Diplomats Or Politicians?

American diplomats divide into two classes—the political appointees and the career men—and never, it would seem, was the distinction between them more invidious than now.

International relations are today in a precarious state. War clouds are gathering over many an horizon. Circumstances obviously demand that those whose business it is to serve as the eyes and ears of this Nation, and as the accredited spokesmen of the United States in foreign lands, should be vigilantly at their posts.

As it happens, this is exactly what the career diplomats as a class are doing. They are outside and above politics and it makes no difference to them whether the Administration is Democratic or Republican, whether the incumbent President is re-elected or not. They represent the Nation and only the Nation.

Not so the political diplomats. In their eyes, and presumably in the eyes of the Administration, no duty is greater than the duty to party and the party's candidate. However important it may be that they remain at the seats of the governments to which they are accredited, it appears to be even more important that they return home and enter the arena of politics.

The facts are startling. Mr. William C. Bullitt, the Ambassador to Russia, is not now at Moscow but in this country. Dr. William E. Dodd, the Ambassador to Germany, has also left his post. So has Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Minister to Denmark, who is soon to become Kammerjunkerinde Boerge Rohde and therefore, according to Danish law, a subject of King Christian X.

Other political diplomats now back home for the campaign are Mr. Lawrence A. Steinhardt, Minister to Sweden; John Cudahy, Ambassador to Poland; Grenville T. Emmet, Minister to the Netherlands; Dave Hennen Morris, Ambassador to Belgium; John Flournoy Montgomery, Minister to Hungary. Others may join them before the campaign really gets under way and John W. Bingham, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, has just returned to London after mending a few fences on this side.

With Breckinridge Long back from Rome before his successor, former Undersecretary William Phillips, has departed, the United States is now unrepresented by an envoy of the top rank at Moscow, Berlin, Rome, Warsaw, The Hague, Copenhagen, Budapest, Brussels and Stockholm. From this alone it might be thought that all Europe is in a state of secure and blissful tranquillity.

To be sure, this exodus from abroad of the political diplomats is not a new phenomenon. It has occurred with unfailing regularity every quadrennium. But this neither excuses nor justifies it. If a thoroughly competent foreign service is ever to be built up by the United States, and a good start in this direction has been made, that service will have to be divorced from politics as it is not now for those of ambassadorial and ministerial rank.

A Fifth Radical Party.

After months of hesitation, the conservative element of the Socialist Party in New York State has declared itself a "People's Party," apparently with a leaning toward President Roosevelt as its candidate in November. So ends a chapter which began in Albany last winter when Norman Thomas and his left-wing supporters captured control of the State organization from Louis Waldman and other more moderate colleagues. The rift grew wider at the national convention, when the conservative delegates from New York were refused seats. At that time Mr. Waldman talked of a bolt and now he has made good his words.

The new party will not necessarily be confined to New York, for the rejected delegates at Cleveland were not without sympathy from other Socialist groups outside their State. In effect, then, and assuming that the new People's Party will not coalesce with the Democrats, still another radical political group has appeared on the American scene. It is somewhat amusing to consider that it is the fifth of its kind, the other four being the Socialist Party, Mr. Lemke's Union Party, old Daniel DeLeon's Socialist Labor Party and the Communists, themselves subject to severe internal differences. The situation is somewhat reminiscent of the pre-Hitlerite German jest, asserting that when three or more Germans were gathered together it meant a new political party.

The various radical groups, dissipating their strength by internal dissensions based largely on obscure points of dogma, would do well to remember the moral underlying this forgotten German epigram. The prevalence of "splinter" parties in that country, deafening people by their clamor and rendering strong government impossible, greatly helped in paving the way for the downfall of democracy and ultimate Nazi triumph. Disintegrating tendencies in Socialist groups, assisted by the uncompromising individualism of most Socialist leaders, of itself explains why successful Socialist governments are so rare.

The League And Danzig.

For more than three years the political minorities in Danzig have been engaged in a desperate struggle for survival. Now it begins to look as though only a miracle can save them.

During these three years the Nazis have sought by fair means and foul to transform the Free City into a servile appendage of the Third Reich. For months Danzig has been in the grip of something akin to a reign of terror directed against Socialists, Catholics, Communists, Nationalists and others who have refused to bow the knee to the Fuehrer. If these groups have not been wiped out, if the Nazis have not yet succeeded in making Danzig a miniature totalitarian state, this has been due to the small measure of protection provided the minorities by the League and the circumstance that the liberal Danzig constitution has been under the protection of the Geneva organization.

Of late the tide has definitely been turning against the Nazis in Danzig. Their criminally wasteful financial policies, their numerous acts of brutality, have alienated large sections of the population of that Germanic city. Last year despite strenuous efforts the Danzig Nazis failed to secure two-thirds of the seats in the Diet and thus were unable to amend the constitution to suit themselves. Since then, as Danzig's economic crisis has steadily grown worse, their popularity has waned further.

This has irritated the Berlin authorities, since the possibility exists that some day the anti-Nazi minority may become a majority in the Free City and thus make a laughing stock of the claim that all Germans favor Hitler.

The international situation is such, however, that a frontal attack on Danzig's autonomy is out of the question. Hence the Nazis have apparently decided to achieve their aim by indirection, by defying the League and setting up in the Free City a purely Nazi regime whatever the League may say. It is reported that all opposition parties will be declared illegal. Once possessed of a two-thirds majority the Nazis would undoubtedly amend the constitution and Danzig would from then on become in fact if not in name an integral part of the Third Reich.

Such action would present the League with a very direct challenge to its authority. What it could do to prevent a Nazi coup is by no means clear. All depends on Poland. If Warsaw takes a strong stand, if it insists that the Danzig constitution be maintained, the Nazi ambitions may yet be frustrated. But Warsaw's position is by no means clear. In the meantime the prospect for continuation of the present status of Danzig is by no means bright.

Floating Through The Air.

Last week two styles of floating through the air with the greatest of ease broke into prominent print. The national balloon race was held in Colorado and the Soaring Society of America called its annual meet at Elmira, N. Y.

The balloonists had a rather dull time of it. Of the six entries, one never left the ground after its bag was ripped by a gust of wind and four others got no farther than 100 miles from the starting point at Denver. The American record is 1,172 miles, so that even the winner this year, with a total accomplishment of a bare 385 miles, must have wondered why he had ever entered the contest. Doubtless the question has occurred to others as well.

The answer is that a practical knowledge of the behavior of a gas cell in the air is considered a fundamental in the training of dirigible pilots. With interest in airships greatly stimulated by the success of the Hindenburg, ballooning has taken on a new significance. It is hoped that the United States will give a good performance in the international race for the James Gordon Bennett Trophy in Poland this summer, for the country needs stirring in its lighter-than-air studies.

Where the balloons dawdled, the gliders at Elmira performed exceptionally well. A world's record of 37 miles for a round trip flight was established; the very good distance of 135 miles was flown in direct flight; and a glider looped 93 times. Except for the first, however, these records will seem low this summer when Germany, whose Wasserkuppe is the mecca of all gliders, uses its prerogative as Olympic host to show the world a sport in which it particularly excels.

But quality, not quantity, holds the appeal in gliding. Though motorized airmen scoff at sailplanes, landhuggers generally thrill to the idea of climbing, hawk-like, on a thermal current to coast noiselessly through the blue in the wake of a convenient cumulus. The Daedalus strain is not yet dead.

I'll See You Boys After November.

The Futility Of War.

To the Editor to The Post—Sir: Twenty years ago we fought to save democracy for the people; today we must fight to save the people for democracy. We are all acquainted with the devastation, the strife and the economic and social results of every war. We have seen the morals, not only of our own people but of the world, suffer because of the social unrest which is stimulated by these conflicts.

Alliances, treaties, ententes, proposals of peace and plans of international justice go on trying in vain to make men realize the futility of war. I cannot believe the peoples of the world want war, and yet leaders throughout these so-called civilized nations are instigating friction. There are some who profess the philosophy that these alliances and means to prevent war are in vain for the reason that it is inherent for man to fight. This, I believe, cannot be true.

During the past year or so we have witnessed aggression in Africa; we have seen it in Outer Mongolia and North China and recently, through the repudiation of the Locarno Pact, we have had it threatened at least on the continent of Europe. Each nation seems willing to offer peace and friendship, but how can such proposals be accepted conscientiously when in every country there are huge war machines being perfected constantly because of fear from other nations?

If the people of the world are desirous of peace, then it must be true that underlying interests instrumental in negotiating war are ultimately receiving profits from these inhuman conflicts engaged in by humans. The quicker they are weeded out the better for society, but until this is done let us carry on the crusade and not falter or be led astray through fallacious reasoning or sophistical propaganda.

The Drought.

MERCURY AT 119 DEGREES HIGH AS DROUGHT SPREADS MISERY; U. S. ADVISES LIVESTOCK SALE.

Two of these columns give an account of the Indians using their ancient rites to pray for rain, which was granted.

One cannot help but wonder at the drought condition of our land, but it ceases to be a wonder when we recall that at the beginning of this Administration thousands of cattle, as well as tons of grain, were destroyed. And at the same time we had people literally starving, yet the Government was "hell bent" to increase prices by curtailment of production, even paying farmers not to cultivate their land.

It is not to be wondered that we now have the drought, but the sad part is that those poor unfortunate people in the affected sections must now suffer. They abided by the will of the Government and failed to cultivate their lands.

This Administration is supposed to be a God-fearing one, but I am thinking that, as an American citizen (who is not privileged to vote), our Government needs to go back, pray God for forgiveness for destroying the products of His soil, and, like the Indians pray for release from this drought.

In reality, the Indians are showing more faith in God (even though many of them do not know our God) than our American Government, which, on taking office, pledges loyalty on an open Bible.

God forgive such an Administration and grant that our Honorable President may yet awake to his responsibilities as a leader of a people founded on faith in God.

Education Today.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If our children are becoming educated these days it is rather in spite of schools than because of them. Laws and "loyalty oaths" and "pressure patriotism" directed by narrow-minded bigots and fanatics have robbed the school of its chief educational tool—the right for free and untrammeled search for truth, the right of free discussion and intellectual freedom. Students are taught, not how to think, but what to think. The former is education; the latter is propaganda.

Such laws as the infamous "Red rider" that is disgracing the Nation's Capital and making the District of Columbia schools a laughing-stock all over the country have caused District teachers to avoid all study, discussion, or even mention of any kind of government. Many of them are afraid to mention Thomas Jefferson because of his "radical" and "revolutionary" ideas.

The assumption of the patrioteers is that all education is within the four walls of a building. The fact that pupils who have never gone to grammar school or high school can read newspapers and there learn the truth and read discussions on all sides of important social problems, can see in the movies, hear over the radio, from the pulpit, in magazines and in forum discussions the ideas tabooed in classrooms, seems to escape the cunning of the would-be murderers of thought. This last consideration is one of the hopeful features of the situation.

Study of human history shows that people eventually get their eyes open and then organize to overthrow the suppressors. Even if a new third political party does not win this time, the large vote of protest will warn the party in power that it, too, will be swept out. As Aristotle once said: "Nothing human is permanent"—no, not even injustice.

Mole-hill Morality.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is always graft in Government and the more Government there is the more graft there is. There is no escaping it and it can be limited only by limiting Government. Every political period is characterized by a dominant graft form; that is, by the way the participants in Government obtain their profit, and the graft form of a particular period is adopted because it is the most expedient method of profit under particular conditions. In one age it was church property, in another it was commerce, in another exploration, and so it goes.

Because of the feeling of insecurity arising from our wealth-destroying depression, the Government job has become the means by which participants in Government achieve their ends and that is why today we see so many hundreds of bureaus and so many thousands of jobs. The citizen who would denounce mere dishonesty and frown on other graft forms thinks nothing of this greatest graft in all history going on right before his eyes. People are always appalled by the quality of graft and never by the quantity.

Anglo-Saxon mole-hill morality is unsuited to these times and must make way for an intellectual morality that will look at the result and the quantity and not merely at the quality.

And Another Democrat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All this talk about the strong oppressing the weak and the seeing the blind and the running the halt is sheer demagoguery. Coming as it does from those born with gold spoons in their mouths and holding onto their vast inherited fortunes and grabbing every dollar's salary and every dollar's expense account they can, it sounds to me like 100 per cent "baloney" for ballots.

Personally, I think we need a change in the White House and in Congress more than we did four years ago.

Life Is Real.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not my intention to be critical of anyone who receives the courtesy of having his material printed in the columns of your fine paper. Yet it may not be out of place, should I venture an attempt to allay the spirit of that letter appearing in your issue of July 6, entitled "Another McKinley."

Without endeavoring to stretch the scope of my imagination, it would appear to me that this author is of the l'Allegro descendants of Samuel Johnson. Should we profit by the experiences of such great men as Johnson, we would early in life become aware of the subterfuge mantled in the tawdry raiment of pleasure. But would anyone, after careful reflection, insinuate that the office of the President or Vice President of these United States is one to be utilized for the purpose of satiating one's love of pleasure?

Surely my friend has read somewhere, at some time, that dynamically constructed poem that cries aloud in its obvious meaning:

Life is real, life is earnest
And the grave is not it's goal

I cannot imagine anyone believing that any man would seek after the Presidency for any other purpose than service; service to his people, service to his country and service to his faith, which is but another conception of the meaning of religion.

The Cab Driver's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Keech, Public Utilities Commissioner, has announced that at the next session of Congress he will again attempt to have a regulation enacted giving the P. U. C. authority to reduce the number of taxicabs operating in this city to 2,000. He also is "squawking" because he failed to get such authority this year.

He should cheer up. The worst is yet to come. He never will get any such authority. Because no one in the cab business wants him to have it.

The rental cab operators, originators of the zone system, have always been opposed to regulation by the P. U. C. The operators and drivers who want to operate on rates based on cost of operation—for whom I have often acted as spokesman—got about all the P. U. C. regulations they wanted last year when the P. U. C. "legalized" the zone racket, which it had so often condemned.

Therefore, about the only thing anyone in the "call" business wants the P. U. C. to do is to get out of it and stay out.

At the present time there is no faction in the industry—as far as I can ascertain—which wants any more of the type of regulation (?) that the P. U. C. is capable of administering. That is, none of them want to be regulated out of business or for the benefit of the Capital Transit monopoly.

"Strike Up The Band!"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mme. Roland's famous utterance in the days of Terror finds its echo in these times of high-pressure labor organization and high-pressure opposition thereto: O Organization, what economic crimes are committed in thy name!

Has Mr. John L. Lewis found it a fact that the operators absorbed the increased cost of a successful strike for higher wages in the coal fields? And does he suppose that Mr. Irvin and Mr. Grace will pare dividends in the event of a victory for organized labor in steel?

The beetle-browed champion of industrial unionism knows that such was not and will not be the case. The innocent bystander—the consumer—is always caught in the cross-fire and will once again be sacrificed. Five thousand added to the cost of the county bridge fabrication—a thousand more on a culvert contract—and a penny increase per pound of barbed wire. Strike up the band! The moguls of both industry and labor have captured another citadel.

The Post Impressionist

Domestic Persuasion.

Post Office, Thursday.

THE Major is upset again. He has been distinctly annoyed by a member of the Women's Division of one of the big-time National Committees: Mrs. Margaret Allman, State Welfare Director of Ohio, no less. And, as usual when upset, he writes us about it. As if we were responsible either for anything Mrs. Allman may say or for the welfare of Ohio—or as if, being responsible, we'd do anything about it!

The Major accuses Mrs. Allman of dragging marriage into the field of politics.

And he thinks that's a bad thing, not only for marriage but even for politics.

He sends us a clipping—without telling us the newspaper from which he has clipped it.

It runs thus:

"COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 5.—Mrs. Margaret Allman, Ohio's State Welfare Director, has issued a nation-wide appeal to women whose husbands differ from them in politics, urging them to start at once converting their spouses to the wives' political point of view.

"'It is the duty of every party-member,' she says, 'to get as many voters to the polls as possible, and home is the best place for the women to start getting out this vote. Women married to husbands whose politics differ from theirs ought to begin a process of proselyting right away . . . Given a pleasant home, it should be far easier to convert a husband than it is to convert a stranger.'"

The Major writes:

"I want to be absolutely nonpartisan about this issue. I want it understood at the outset that it makes no difference to me whether Mrs. Allman wants Democratic wives to convert Republican husbands or Republican wives to convert Democratic husbands. The ethics are the same in either case; the principle is just as bad one way or the other. If there is anything that can soar above party loyalty it's the loyalty that a man and wife owe to each other—and yet that is the loyalty Mrs. Allman's advice, however innocently given, would break down.

"I am surprised at her. I am shocked.

"As short a while ago as 30 years nobody would have thought of such a thing in secret as this which is being shouted from the housetops," the Major continues. "In the days when women didn't have the franchise, they looked upon it as a sacred right—their husbands'—and so did the men. And consequently a woman wouldn't any more have expected a man to take on her political opinions than, for instance, she would have expected him to wear her clothes.

"She wouldn't any more have held different political opinions from her husband than she would have held different opinions of right and wrong. She considered his politics a matter of principle and conscience which was beyond argument and beyond compromise.

"Yet," continues the Major, "right here in supposedly enlightened 1936, Mrs. Allman openly advocates the wife's converting her husband to her political opinions and says it should be easy if they have a pleasant home. How long does she think any home is going to stay pleasant after a wife starts her attempts at conversion?

* * *

"I ask you!

"I won't," says the Major, "say anything about a lady who'd try to drag marriage into politics—for I hope I am a gentleman. But I do contend that, if the dragging ever succeeded, it would pretty soon be the ruin of the husband, the ruin of the home, and, what's worst of all, the ruin of politics.

"It would be the ruin of the husband because you know very well he couldn't look his fellow man in the face after he'd let his wife wheedle him out of his conscientious opinions. He wouldn't be a husband anymore—he wouldn't be a man.

* * *

"It would be the ruin of the home—the home which is the very foundation of our whole social system—because the home depends upon harmony, and everybody is perfectly aware that where politics come in harmony goes out.

* * *

"And it would be the ruin of politics because it would mean the surrender of principle for a pusillanimous doctrine of peace at any price.

"In fact," the Major declares, "the only thing in favor of Mrs. Allman's advice is that it's impracticable:

"'Easier to convert a husband than a stranger?'

"I'll bet Mrs. Allman hasn't been married very long.

"Man and wife," the Major concludes, with his characteristic high-handedness, "are one—and they ought to vote as one. But if any conversion is necessary, why should the husband be the convert? Why, I'd like to know, shouldn't the convert be the wife?"

Wagers On Landon.

Something should be done right away to spread the available supply of Republicans who wish to wager on their man Landon in the November election. Obviously, there are not enough to go around, even at the rate of one Republican for each Democrat, but one hears, nevertheless, of greedy individualists hogging as many as six or ten. This is going to mean that many deserving Democrats will be unable to get their money up, and that would be contrary to the Democratic policy of busting up concentrations of wealth and power. After all, in the present circumstances, a Republican with money to bet on Mr. Landon represents just that much profit, and the problem of distribution is becoming more serious day by day.

Democrats in the East and in Detroit enjoy a great advantage over their partners in the South. Marvelously fat and wealthy Republicans abound in these parts, and some game hogs have been going through the golf clubs and suburban estates during the week-end slaughtering more than they need.

Your correspondent has obtained his Republican and is well content, as the Republican is a very rich man. He is, in fact, too large for your correspondent to handle alone, and persons who have been unable to catch their own are invited to apply for shares of him. He is rather skittish, demanding 3 to 1 at last reports, and it may be better to let him ripen a month or two unless subtle taunts can bring down his price.

Of course, even at 3 to 1, your correspondent's Republican is an attractive proposition, for the money will yield 33 1-3 per cent in a short term and the savings banks are paying only 2 per cent a year and turning away trade. There is a question whether the law should step in and regulate the price, because odds of 8 to 5 or 6 to 5 seem scandalous, and the winnings, when collected, will smack of profiteering.

* * * *

One night in Cleveland your correspondent caught a magnificent Republican in the person of an escaped Kansan residing in New York, who has gone primitive under the spell of the convention and the strains of "Oh, Susanna!" and was joining out as an assistant campaign manager. Your correspondent needled him slightly, and in two minutes the ex-Kansan with a strange look in his eyes, was offering even money up to $500 on his man. But stealing is stealing, and your correspondent let him go, although it was a hard job to spirit him past a group of unscrupulous Democrats around the hotel entrance who were trying to draw beads on him as he went by.

Your correspondent also caught a lady Kansan from Pelham, N. Y., that night in Cleveland and made a small wager at 2 to 1—a price approved by all fish and game commissions as the absolute sporting limit, but let her get away, too, when she added a kicker to her bet. The lady Kansan said the bet was on, but then said "provided I get a job doing campaign work for the Republican party, because my household allowance does not provide any betting margin."

This proviso seemed to raise the odds from 2 to something like 100.

* * * *

It is to be hoped that greedy Democrats will not crowd around and make a nuisance of themselves, but it seems only fair to intimate that Mr. Teddy Roosevelt, jr., has been arching his neck and tossing his mane lately in a desire to bet a little on his man Landon.

He is an unmitigated Republican, so, probably, with a little needling he can be induced to offer a price of 6 to 5. The unmitigated kind seem to have neither judgment nor self-control when they are needled.

This needling of the Republicans is a practice which will bear looking into. It seems hardly sporting as practiced by certain greedy Democrats, the most ruthless of whom, so far as your correspondent knows, is an acquaintance of Stamford, Conn., out of Union City, Tenn.

He is absolutely unscrupulous. True, he resides in a Republican preserve, close by Greenwich, Conn., and they often get in his hair, but, nevertheless, his method seems inhuman.

He stalks Republicans at cocktail parties and insidiously guides the conversation around to the campaign. He is a great judge of Republicans, and at the psychological moment he says, "Do you really think your man Landon has a chance, or are you just clowning to amuse the company?"

That drives them wild.

"Do you want to bet?" they holler.

"Oh, I might," he says, "but you seem very confident. What price?"

* * * *

In this manner he has needled many wagers at 6 to 5 and quite a few at even money—a foul imposition on the tenderest emotions of the Republicans.

He has absolutely no qualms about it.

"Somebody has got to take them," he says. "I would gladly share my Republicans with any deserving Democrats, but no good hunter believes in wasting ammunition, and why should I lay more price than I have to? And, anyway, I have to live among them. They were simply hell around here for 12 long years of Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Bishop Cannon."

Socialist Newspaper In Danzig Suspended

Free City of Danzig, July 8 (AP).—Danzig police today ordered suspension of the Socialist newspaper Volkstimme for five months for publishing material "calcultaed to disturb Danzig relations with Germany and Poland."

The paper has carried a joint demand of anti-Nazi parties for new elections, on the ground Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, president of the Nazi-dominated senate, misrepresented the Free City when he told the League of Nations Council he spoke for 400,000 Danzigers.

Dr. Greiser demanded the League let Danzig attend to its own affairs.

British Foreign Policy

England Seen Stumbling Through World Politics With No Restatement of Her Philosophy Due Until After the Coronation.

By David Wills.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

WITH ALMOST the full strength of its party majority the British government has killed its sanctions policy against Italy. In the debates on June 18 and 23 government spokesmen said the other League members had not been equal to the British in zeal, that sanctions did not work fast enough, that America would not promise to stop exports of oil and therefore had ruined the oil sanction. Further, they submitted that Italy had won anyhow and revenge was useless. In full chorus the government declared that to go further meant war, a thing which the government would never offer to the British people. Abyssinia, and the prestige of the League were not worth the risk of sinking a single British ship.

The opposition did not lose the issue without bitter protest. Faulty operation of sanctions was attributed not to any fault in League mechanism, but to the shuffling indecision of the British government aided and abetted by the French. America did not ruin the oil sanction, they urged; on the contrary America's willingness to assist was alienated by the insincerity of the Hoare-Laval pact. To continue with sanctions would not be revenge, they said, but would be vindication of the League principles of international law and justice, without which chaos rules. And, they concluded, even if continued sanctions led to an attack from Mussolini, as was probable, we must defend the League with force rather than choose the easier way of shirking now, only to find a greater war later.

The opposition lost its case. And what now? The British government says, "Reform the League, remove automatic obligations to restrain aggression." The French government, relieved of the onerous obligation of having for principle's sake to support further sanctions against Italy, says, "Reform the League, make sanctions more automatic than ever; for next time the enemy will be Germany. And for German aggression against France, Austria, or Russia, we must have immediate British support."

Lloyd George And Baldwin Give Hitler His Cue.

THE FORLORNNESS of this hope is evidenced by the agreement between Baldwin and Lloyd George, bitterly opposed in everything else, that they would never ask Britain to fight for Austria. The tip for Hitler is clear. He is more convinced than ever that Britain will not oppose him; that the prize comes to him who takes. It is anticipated in London that his political power will quietly spread over central Europe and the Balkans, for Germany under Schacht has learned to make profit out of her debts; to make the purchaser who cannot pay more powerful than him who can pay cash. It is anticipated that Mussolini's countermove to prevent Germany from securing the Austrian plum will be to support restoration of the Hapsburgs. But it seems that Germany and Jugoslavia are already agreed that the latter will then attack Austria, and, whether consciously or not, provide the opportunity for a Nazi coup in Austria. In the long run, it is the British opinion that Austria can only be kept away from Germany by force of arms, yet the British, although they do not want Austria and Germany to unite, are not prepared to fight over the question.

It may explain the present surrender to Italy, but it does not seem sufficient to describe British foreign policy as merely anti-German and anti-Socialist. Indeed, the greatest political puzzle of the day is to find out just what our foreign policy is, so diverse are the ends we are pursuing. There are signs of friendliness to Germany in our willingness to sign a western European pact which will leave free outlet for Hitler in the East, in our refusal to defend Austria, the key to German dominance over central Europe, in our naval pact.

We have shown ourselves ready to submit to almost any terms Mussolini may dictate in order to have his friendship, yet we are preparing a Mediterranean pact so that we may have allies just in case he attacks us in the Mediterranean; and to keep him friendly we have decided to maintain in the Mediterranean a larger fleet, useful only against Italy.

Russia To Be Alienated At Montreux Conference.

THE MONTREUX conference to consider rearmament of the Dardanelles opened with orchids to Turkey for her honorable pursuit of rearmament by legal methods instead of brute force; and before the orchids are withered Turkey will have her fortifications. How can we refuse one who asks so politely for what others have obtained without the asking? Yet at this conference we are going out of our way to pick a quarrel with Russia, the one power we might be able to rely upon against either Hitler or Mussolini, or both. And although we may need Russian assistance, we refuse to support her against German attack in east Europe.

And again, in the Far East we are pursuing a double policy of tacit co-operation with Japan, as in the Manchurian affair, while we give the Chinese cause to believe in our willingness to assist against Japan. What is more, we build up Singapore and its supporting bases as a line to defend our interests when the Japanese, in the logical course of time, come to menace Hongkong.

The trouble in Palestine could have developed at no more dangerous time. Our mandate over Palestine has the appearance of benevolence, but it is based upon the rigtht of conquest from the Turks. In return for Arab assistance during the war we promised to promote national independence for the Arab; and in return for Jewish assistance we promised to develop a national home for Jews in Palestine, a territory occupied by Arabs. The two promises are incompatible and cannot be redeemed in terms of racial nationality.

If we persevere with settlement of the Jews we antagonize the Arabs still further; if we suppress Arab revolt, as we are doing at present with machine guns, and drive the Arabs out of Palestine, we create a focus of disaffection for all the Arab kingdoms which surround Palestine and provide one more danger point on the line of imperial communications to the Far East.

The Italians are aware of this and have been sympathetic to the Arab revolt, as they have to discontent with British authority in Egypt. And if, in spite of the probably greater moral obligation to develop the Jewish national home, we stop Jewish immigration, we provide one more instance to encourage those who want to blackmail the British to secure colonial concessions.

Change Of Government Would Not Clear Future.

IT SEEMS clear that we stand to lose more than anyone else through a vacuous foreign policy; yet there is no immediate prospect of clarifying that policy through a change of government.

The situation may be illustrated by the set-up for the by-election at Derby, where a successor has to be chosen to Jimmy Thomas, resigned for giving away budget secrets. The Labor candidate, Philip Noel-Baker, is a stalwart League of Nations supporter, fundamentally opposed to the government's surrender to Italy; but the Labor Party has no chance of winning an election fought solely on domestic policies. Derby is a fairly rich constituency, making a lot of money out of re-armament, hoping to make more; the Liberals, who remain distinct in many other constituencies and form a marginal and decisive vote, in Derby have mostly divided between Labor and Conservative, and the Conservative element was strong enough to return Thomas to all the national governments in the face of opposition from Thomas' old party, who called him traitor for joining with the national government.

Yet although the seat cannot be won for the opposition without a popular front to fight on foreign policy, the Labor executives are refusing the assistance of Liberal Lloyd George and Conservative Lord Cecil, and of many non-Labor men who are eager to sink temporary differences in order to defeat the present government. The difference between the immediate policies of Liberals and Labor is negligible, yet co-operation is impossible, thanks to the narrow-minded conservatism of the Labor executive committee. Without a drastic revolution in domestic politics, Derby will not be the occasion for a Baldwin defeat.

But if our foreign policy is not to be clarified by a new government, how long will it take for the present government to make up its mind? Not till after the coronation. Not that the coronation is any mystic date, but simply that it is seductively distant, and may be occasion for a display of patriotism which will give new life to the government, without forcing it to decide anything. The foreigner may protest that the outside world cannot wait for the coronation, that the issues are urgent, that the most important thing in European politics is that the British policy should be effective and clear. But you cannot persuade the Englishman. If he can wait until the coronation, so can the foreigner.

Imaginary Interviews.

Modern Minute Man—Move over! You're having company.

1776—Who are you?

Modern M. M.—I'm a Minute Man.

1776—Welcome! I'm always glad to see a man willing to lay down his life for his country.

Modern M. M. (a little upset at this)—What's that again, please?

1776—I say it's always good to meet a man ready to die for a cause. Congratulations!

Modern M. M.—Did you say something about dying? Now look, what I mean is . . .

1776—I know how you must have suffered. I'll bet your feet are all bloody from days of tramping across the fields in your bare feet. You want to be careful of gangrene.

Modern M. M. (pretty uneasy now)—My feet are all right. I didn't do much walking. I rode.

1776 (in amazement)—Rode! You were lucky to have a horse.

Modern M. M.—I didn't have no horse; I came by auto.

1776—What's an auto?

Modern M. M. (pointing)—That's it out there. It's automatic . . . does a mile a minute . . . I sort of thought it helped make me a Minute Man.

* * * *

1776 (very incredulous)—How did you get a thing as wonderful as that?

Modern M. M.—Oh, everybody has 'em. They only cost around $1,000.

Modern M. M.—Sure.

1776 (scratching his head)—I don't understand it, but never mind; just bandage up your wounds, grab a crust of bread, getcher gun and come with me. We ain't got much chance of coming back alive, but . . .

1776—Get back? Don't be silly. Now don't shoot until you see the whites of their eyes.

Modern M. M.—The whites of whose eyes?

1776—Why, the enemy's eyes, of course.

Modern M. M.—Look, mister, you don't mind if I change my mind about being a Minute Man, do you?

1776—No, but why?

Modern M. M.—Well, it's like this . . . I promised the wife and kids I'd take 'em on a two-weeks auto trip . . . I've got to get back to town to put a little bet on a horse . . . there's a musical show I wanna see tonight . . . I'm playing golf tomorrow afternoon . . . and I have to be back in town by 5 to get my relief check!

1776—Awah! Awah!

Edmund Burke

By William Lyon Phelps.

Irish Orator.

On this day, July 9, the great Irish orator, writer and statesman Edmund Burke died in 1797.

He was born in Dublin, educated at Trinity College and entered the Middle Temple in London in 1750. In 1765 he entered Parliament, and perhaps no member of it will be longer remembered.

* * * *

He was a great apostle of freedom, a public friend of the American colonies and a powerful supporter of Catholic emancipation in Ireland. His love of individual liberty and his bold defense of it cost him his seat in Parliament, but thanks to the excellent British custom of open constituencies, which permits the country to keep the best men in office, he was re-elected from another locality. Gladstone, for example, in the century following, remained in the House of Commons 60 consecutive years, although occasionally defeated.

Although Burke defended the American colonies, he attacked the French Revolution for its excesses.

It has been well said that his political career was devoted to five "great, just and honorable causes." These were the overthrow of the control of the House by the ministers of George III, the emancipation of the American colonies, the emancipation of Irish Catholics and what it implied; the emancipation of India from misgovernment, and opposition to the atheism and excesses of the French Revolution.

* * * *

Burke was a philosophical statesman, and his speeches and writings are an imperishable part of literature.

Dr. Johnson, whose respect for Burke was very great, said a fine thing about him: "Burke, Sir, is such a man that if you met him for the first time in the street where you were stopped by a drove of oxen, and you and he stepped aside to take shelter but for five minutes, he'd talk to you in such a manner that, when you parted, you would say, this is an extraordinary man."

A. F. L. Delays Rebel Censure

in hope Lewis will make overtures to the council which would give it an avenue out of its dilemma—so that it could meet the coming battle to unionize the steel industry with labor's ranks united.

Challenge Statement.

Green, whose gold tie pin, shaped like a question mark, symbolized the perplexity in which his council sat, answered sharply Lewis' statement of the night before that "the federation never had a plan to organize the steel industry."

The federation president recited instructions he said were given the executive council in 1934 and 1935 conventions to unionize steel workers.

He then recalled that dissension within the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers had prevented an organization campaign in late 1934 and 1935. He said the drive was just about to get under way, organizers would shortly have been sent in, and that funds had been raised when the Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization moved in, denounced the Federation plan "abusively," and secured the support of Amalgamated for itself.

He admitted funds raised by the A. F. of L. were not so great as the $500,000 "Lewis says he's got," but said that a sum much in excess of that would have been raised by all the unions connected with the A. F. of L.

Cites Aid in 1927.

Green added that the Federation had raised more than $500,000, not counting food, clothes and shoes, for the miners in 1927 "when they were down and out."

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper said yesterday at a press conference that, in his opinion, unionization of the steel workers would not cause serious trouble.

The Lewis group faces three charges, it was shown:

1. Creation of the C. I. O. despite the A. F. of L.'s known craft union policy, as against industrial unionism, under the former of which craftsmen of each kind in an automobile plant, as an instance, would belong to a union of his fellow-machinists. In contrast to this, Lewis' industrial union theory seeks combination of all workers in an industry in one big union.

2. Furnishing assistance to the Radio and Electrical Workers Union, an organization refused an A. F. of L. charter.

3. Promoting organization campaigns in steel, auto and rubber industries without regard to craft union claims in those industries.

U. S. Inquiry Proceeds.

Crack Federal sleuths are getting information "as fast as they can" on alleged monopolistic practices and collusive bidding in the steel industry, Attorney General Homer Cummings announced last night.

The Department of Justice has been investigating such practices since June 15 by order of President Roosevelt. The Federal Trade Commission had told the President that violations of the anti-trust laws could be reasonably suspected. Cummings, after conferring with Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson, said he would make a statement within a week on the inquiry. He added that the Department is also studying the new law preventing transportation of strikebreakers across State lines. Although the measure was designed to protect picketers, many States have anti-picketing laws.

During the day the strike committee in charge of the six weeks' strike of 5,000 workers at the Wheeling Steel Corporation's plant in Portsmouth, Ohio, rejected a tentative agreement and ordered the strike resumed.

The Green report to the White House, based on a national survey, said an increase in working time for more than 4,000,000 workers had averaged 8.7 hours per week. Green said the President "manifested great interest" in the survey and promised to take it with him for study on his vacation.

The lengthening of working hours per day, which Green charged in the report had followed the death of NRA, has deprived 839,123 workers of possible re-employment, he said.

In Pittsburgh, Pa., according to the Associated Press, Philip Murray, chairman of the C. I. O.'s drive to unionize the steel workers, charged last night that "a system of espionage is being practiced by the moguls of steel."

He said additional policemen hired by steel companies to watch over employes meant "the furtherance of gunman domination of the industry." He said Bethlehem Steel Corporation has given employment to 130 additional policemen at its Johnstown, Pa., plant in the last ten days.

A. F. of L. Ultimatum Rejected.

New York, July 8 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor executive board's ultimatum demanding withdrawal of the cap and millinery department of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers Union from John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization was rejected today by the department's executive board.

It voted $5,000 as an initial contribution to the C. I. O. campaign to organize the steel industry.

The union is one of the 12 which received the A. F. of L. ultimatum, but in the reply, sent tonight to the A. F. of L. executive council in Washington, it was pointed out that only the cap and millinery department, and not the men's hatters, is affiliated with the C. I. O.

More Gold in Dollar

as long as the spirit of independence dominates American life, you will find it very difficult to control credit volume."

Dr. W. Randolph Burgess, vice president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, said that the Reserve System can do little more than influence credit. Calling attention to the fact that the monetary position of this country is similar to that which existed in the early 1920s. Burgess declared that "the outstanding feature is the economic strength of this country in the midst of a disordered world." There are only two things which can be done about the present situation, he said.

"One," he declared, "is to try to manage the gold which comes to us in such a way that it will do the least possible damage and the other is to aid when we can act effectively in the restoration of more stable world conditions abroad. As long as there is no effective international monetary mechanism, based on a more stable economy, we are likely to be a magnet for the world's gold supply. But of course such a mechanism must be based on a more stable world economy than exists today."

Urges Good Will.

In continuing discussion of international affairs at the institute last night, Dr. Mary E. Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College, made a plea for continuation of attempts to establish good will among nations. Her subject was "Taking Account of International Stock." She listed some of the failures of the League of Nations, but added:

"It is impossible to put into a catagory the disasters from which the world has been saved by the League. 'It might have done more.' Yes, it might; one reason why it has not come directly home to us in the United States. A society of nations, to be really effective, must be a society of all the nations."

"However modest we may be, we cannot ignore the fact that our size, our situation, our potential wealth, our Constitution—made up as we are, of all the nations, mean that we, the United States of America, cannot be discounted. Again, however simon-pure our motives, the fact remains that other nations never know what the United States will do.

"To mobilize and make articulate the will to work together is one of the most practical things that can be done for international understanding."

Dr. Woolley pointed to the work of the peoples' mandate to governments to end war as a valuable service in this direction.

Speaking on "the future of the League of Nations," Dr. Charles G. Fenwick, associate editor of the International Law Journal and professor of history at Bryn Mawr College, said:

"The truth is that the great experiment of 1919 has failed to meet the demands put upon it, not because the principles upon which it was based are not the right principles, but because the principles have not been pushed far enough. Law can be an agency of peace only if it undertakes to promote justice as well as to prevent violence.

"The framers of the Covenant of the League of Nations put too much stress upon the prevention of violence, upon the maintenance of territorial boundaries and the existing status quo. They did not sufficiently realize that the League, if it was to be successful, must give equal attention to removing the causes of war and promoting those conditions of justice which are necessary to make law tolerable to those whom it attempts to control.

"A stable peace, a peace based upon justice, calls for building up a fund of common international interests which shall be to each nation a strong motive for observing the law; it calls for a lowering of the economic barriers that have been raised so high of recent years; it calls for an open-door policy in the markets of the world, from greater equality of access to the raw materials of industry, for a fairer distribution of the opportunities of trade and commerce in the undeveloped parts of the world.

"The issue confronting us seems to me to be not whether the goal of a lasting peace, a peace of stability based upon justice, is ultimately attainable, for it must be attained if our civilization is to survive. The issue is rather whether we shall have the wisdom to move towards that goal now, in the immediate future, without waiting for another devastating war to teach us the necessity of doing so."

Business Group Proposes Curb In Housing Aid

Advisers to Roper Would Restrict Assistance to Emergencies.

By the Associated Press.

In a report to Secretary Roper, the Business Advisory Council recommended yesterday that Federal financial assistance in low-cost housing projects be restricted to emergencies.

The council also proposed combination of all Federal housing activities into a single agency and under a single act.

The group of 52 businessmen found that one-quarter of the non-farm families in the United States, with annual incomes of less than $1,200, were unable to provide themselves with proper housing.

Rental Subsidy Proposed.

It suggested that a "rental subsidy for every family housed" in this group be developed through contributions by cities, counties and States in "appropriate combination."

"Federal contribution," the report said, "if absolutely essential, should be on an emergency basis."

The advisory council asserted that "practically all housing and slum clearance plans so far presented have been rendered ineffective through disagreement and criticism with respect to details."

"Indecision," Charge.

Because the problem is new "in terms of national thinking," the group asserted there had been "much cloudy thinking and obvious indecision."

The report asserted that "public responsibility for housing conditions * * * should be on a localized basis," and recommended that the Bureau of Standards, Commerce Department agency, should serve as a clearing house on studies to reduce cost and improve qualities.

Son Surrenders To Ellis Parker

Mt. Holly, N. J., July 8 (AP).—Ellis Parker, jr., a fugitive since April 23 in the Paul H. Wendel kidnaping case, surrendered to his father tonight and was released in $500 bail.

Parker, sr., chief of Burlington County detectives, who was indicted with his son, had likewise been held in $500 bail, but Gov. Harold G. Hoffman yesterday refused his extradition to New York to face trial in Brooklyn.

Accompanied by Detective G. Clinton Zeller, of his father's staff, and State Trooper Thomas Forkin, young Parker went to Vincentown, where Justice of the Peace William H. Grady fixed bail.

Then he apparently disappeared again, but later appeared on a Mount Holly street with his wife. He refused to amplify a typewritten statement which he had left with his father and which the elder Parker made public. The couple returned to their home with Mrs. Parker's father.

Camden Gets Complaint On Mystery Vibrations

Camden, N. J., July 8 (AP).—A group of householders complained to City Commissioner Frank J. Hartman they're tired of having the "shakes."

Mysterious vibrations, they said, have been rattling windows, shaking beds and knocking pictures and mirrors off the walls for the last seven weeks.

Hartman, director of public works, said the new Delaware River Bridge transit line, seven blocks away, may have something to do with it.

Bus Lines Reduce Washington Fares

An additional reduction in bus fares between Washington, Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore was announced by several Eastern lines yesterday, under authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Companies asserting themselves as reducing rates included the Safeway Trails, Short Line Buses, Inc., and Quaker City Bus Lines.

The fare between Washington and New York will be cut from $3.75 to $3.50, and the Washington-New York round trip will be reduced from $6.75 to $6.30. It was said the reductions were made to meet competition from railroads, due to the recent establishment of the 2-cent per mile fare.

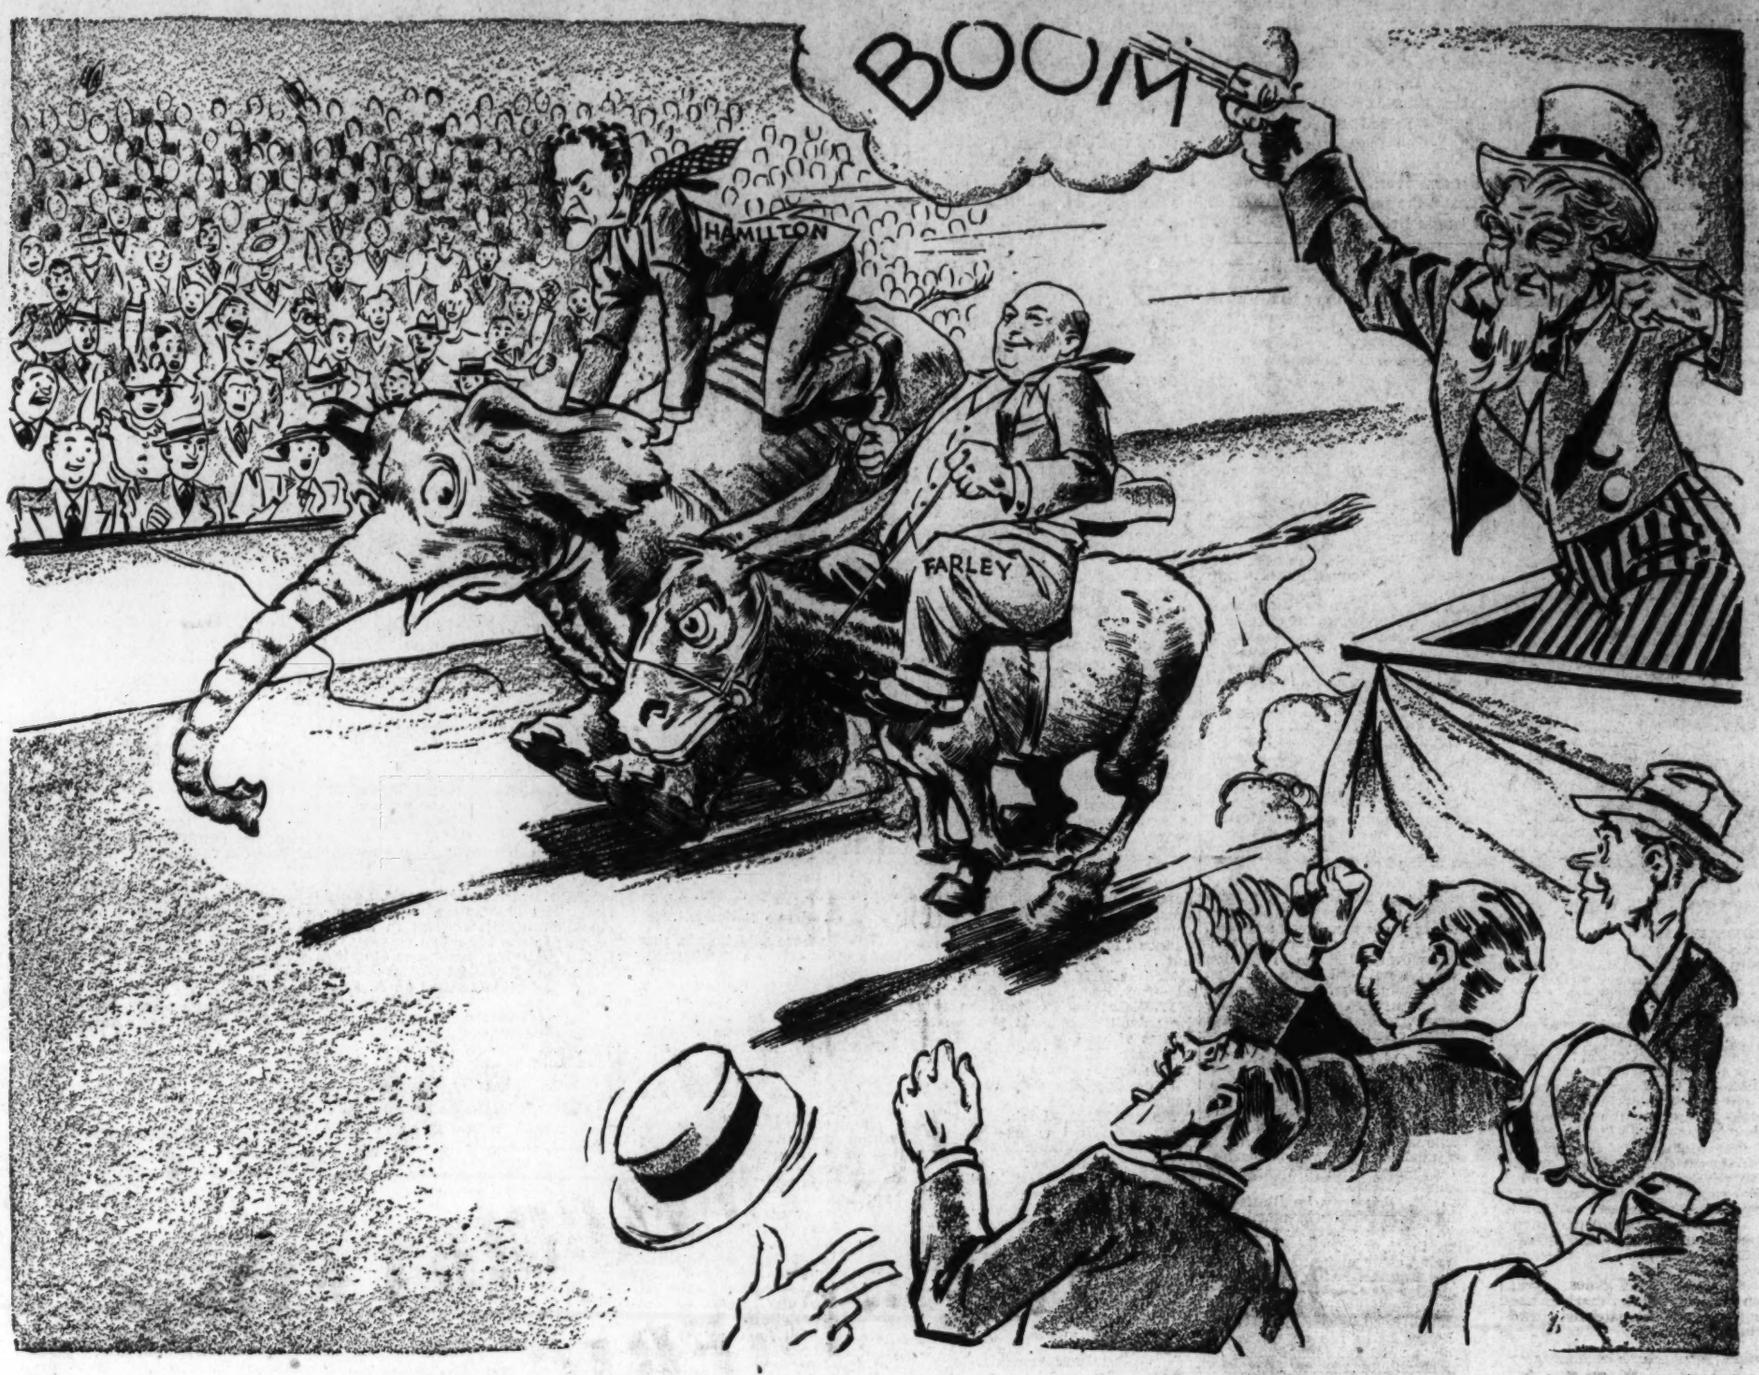
"THEY'RE OFF . . ."

. . . the Greatest Political Race of the Century!



With the tumult and the shouting of the two major party conventions at Cleveland and Philadelphia at an end, the starting gun boomed out for the greatest political race of the century . . . the most exciting, certainly, since the bitter Bryan-McKinley battle of 1896.

Today, no one knows . . . despite the prophecies of many . . . just how that race will end. But . . . and for the first time in history . . . it is possible to know how the two contestants stand with the voters of the Nation at various stages in the race.

This Sunday, for instance, we will know which is leading . . . the Elephant or the Donkey . . . as they flash by the first-quarter pole in the four-month campaign between now and November. For, on Sunday, will be released in 72 leading newspapers all over the country the results of the first AMERICA SPEAKS poll on Landon versus Roosevelt.

Ever since February, 1934, AMERICA SPEAKS has measured the popularity of the President with the voters of the Nation in regular, monthly polls. But during that period, his standing with the electorate has been on a basis of Roosevelt against an unnamed G. O. P. opponent.

In June, the AMERICA SPEAKS poll indicated that if the election were held at that time, President Roosevelt would win with the support of 55.8 per cent of the popular vote, carrying majorities in 37 States with 407 electoral votes. 44.2 per cent of the popular vote went to the G. O. P. in this June poll, carrying 9 States and 89 electoral votes. Two States . . . Illinois and Colorado, with 35 electoral votes . . . were doubtful, on-the-line.

But how has the nomination of Gov. Landon of Kansas affected these figures? Is he a vote-puller? Is he, also, popular with the people? Is he popular enough to pull strength into the G. O. P. column? And what will the reaction of the fence-sitters to Landon be . . . those voters who have hesitated, until now, to cast their AMERICA SPEAKS ballots for either party, until the selection of a Republican standard-bearer?

These are the questions that Sunday's AMERICA SPEAKS poll . . . published exclusively, in Washington, in The Washington Post . . . will answer. It is safe to say that thousands of Washingtonians will arise earlier than is their usual custom, this coming Sunday morning . . . to get the answers to these questions from voters of the Nation.

And four other Landon-Roosevelt polls, once a month, between now and November, will keep you abreast the relative positions of the Elephant and the Donkey in the 1936 Presidential race. Follow the shifting fortunes of the two candidates throughout the entire course of the campaign with AMERICA SPEAKS, in The Washington Post.

1936 Political Scorecard With Saturday's POST

A 1936 political scorecard . . . 10½ inches wide and 17 inches long . . . will be published in Saturday's Washington Post to enable AMERICA SPEAKS readers to chart the progress of the 1936 campaign. Order your copy of Saturday's Post now. Clip out the chart and keep the running record of the two candidates, month by month as reported by AMERICA SPEAKS, between now and November.

Empire's Might In Air Paraded Before Edward

By the Associated Press.

London, July 2.—While King Edward personally inspected Britain's air might today, English taxpayers awaited details of swiftly rising defense estimates.

As Great Britain made further haste to fortify itself in the face of a rearming Europe, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin said supplementary estimates for the navy, air force and army would be announced tomorrow in the House of Commons.

The Baldwin Government, target of stiff attacks recently in and out of Parliament, sailed through to a more than 2 to 1 victory in a Commons ballot tonight.

The vote was on the matter of domestic policy and, in effect, a vote of confidence.

The King's plane trip about the royal air force stations to inspect the fighting efficiency of the British air armada further broke precedent.

Accompanied by the Duke of York, heir-apparent to the throne, he traveled in his own plane to the various airdromes.

Wears Mourning Band.

He wore sun glasses, a light blue uniform, air force overseas cap, and a mourning arm band. It was the soverign's fourth flight since his accession to the throne in Januarv.

"I've never seen such a flying exhibition in my life," he exclaimed after witnessing daredevil demonstrations by pilots of the bombers and fighting squadrons.

Flown by his personal pilot, Flight Lieut. Edward Fielden, the King and Duke started from Windsor, halting first at Northolt.

Edward jumped Nimbly from the plane as it grounded. He was met by Air Chief Marshal Sir Edward Ellington and other officials. The small group was admitted to various departments where the major air defense secrets are housed.

Interested in New Plane.

Both King Edward and the Duke were most interested in the latest so-called submarine spit-fire single-seater fighting plane declared to be the fastest military machine in the world. The King climbed into the cockpit and made a thorough examination of the various gadgets.

Informed sources predicted it would be between £15,000,000 and £25,000,000 ($75,000,000 and $125,000,000).

Reaction Abroad Studied.

Political quarters conjectured to what extent the huge defense budget move was meant to impress other countries, particularly Germany, in view of the unusual reticence in authoritative quarters to discuss Anglo-German relations.

Berlin reports that a German foreign office spokesman had reassured an English Embassy questioner that Germany did not intend to disturb European peace despite the German government's sympathy with Nazis of the Free City of Danzig, were unconfirmed in official quarters here.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was still absent from his duties upon orders of his physician to take a week's rest in the country. Foreign office affairs, meanwhile, were in the hands of Viscount Halifax, lord privy seal.

Britannia Sinks Tonight.

Cowes, England, July 8 (AP).—Wreathed in white daisies and red roses, King George's historic Britannia, once queen of the world's racing yachts, pulled out of her slip tonight, bound for a peaceful and watery grave.

Many members of her old racing crews visited the "Britannia" during the day.

By the terms of King George's will, which specified she was to be destroyed if neither the new King Edward nor his three brothers desired to use her, the famous seagoing Matriarch was to be scuttled not far from the scene of her many triumphs.

Built in 1893.

Originally built for King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, in 1893, "Britannia" became an immediate sensation in the yachting world. In her first season she trimmed the celebrated American yacht "Navahoe," owned by Phelphs Carroll, supposedly the fastest and finest racer afloat, in three starts out of five.

In all, through nearly half a century of racing life, "Britannia" won 231 prizes and 129 others out of a total of 625 starts—a record never even remotely challenged in yachting annals.

Forty-eight hours after notification by police, store owners will have to remove pinball machines or the machines will be confiscated, it was announced yesterday by U. S. Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

Firm Defies Pinball Ban

the majority are placed on a percentage basis.

The attorney for the company contends that the machines are games of skill and that no question of luck or chance is involved.

Decision Delayed.

"At any rate, their illegality should be determined before they are forcibly removed, not after," said Lichtenberg. "I don't believe the district attorney's office and Maj. Brown should make business men lose thousands of dollars until the case has been definitely settled."

Last May upon the order of Garnett the one ball machine was declared a gambling device and police confiscated a large number of them. Later, after the district attorney had failed to hand down a decision, the machines were permitted to be put back in operation.

Lichtenberg criticized the ruling yesterday which exempt pinball machines that do not pay any prizes.

"Those machines induce people to gamble among themselves," he said. "The ones that pay off are operated through skill."

Meanwhile Assistant Corporation Counsel W. H. Thomas, head of a committee named by District Commissioners to study the possibility of obtaining revenue from the thousands of games of skill operated in Washington, prepared to announce in a report that such machines are gambling devices and therefore not subject to licensing or tax.

In cities where the pinball machine is considered a game of skill the license fees range from $3 to $50 a year for each machine and in many cases there is charged also an operator's license fee which ranges from $25 to $200 a year in addition to the license fee for each machine.

Spain Strike Threatens Food Supply Shortage

Madrid, July 8 (AP).—Danger of a food and water shortage spurred efforts by the civil government to end a general transportation strike in Granada tonight.

Trucks usually carrying bread and water were stopped, and guards refused to distribute food and other necessities to various sections of the city. The strikers accepted a government plan for settlement, but the employes were still to be heard from.

A strike of 9,000 sales clerks which closed groceries, markets and other shops also threatened a food shortage in Malaga.

Italy to Avenge 10 Airmen Slain By Ethiopians

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 8.—Italy mourned ten aviators slain in an Ethiopian ambush tonight and, reports from Addis Ababa said, sent a fleet of planes into the hinterland to deal out swift punishment to the attackers.

"Mass reprisals," it was reported, were ordered against the district in Wallega Province, Western Ethiopia, where the aviators were ambushed after they had alighted on a reconnaissance flight June 28.

Addis Ababa heard of the killings only yesterday, from Father Barollo, a passenger, who escaped from the hostile tribesmen.

Three Were Air Leaders.

Three of the victims were among Italy's best known airmen. They were Gen. Vincenzo Magliocco, who during the Ethiopian war was assistant chief of aviation in East Africa; Maj. Antonio Locatelli, member of the Balbo mass flight to Chicago in 1933, and Col. Carlo Calderini.

Maj. Locatelli, who was a member of the Chamber of Deputies and Mayor of Bergamo, was rescued by the American cruiser Richmond near Cape Farewell, Greenland, in 1924, during an attempted transatlantic flight.

"Bandits" are Accused.

Italian newspapers, cautiously printing on an inside page, the official communique announcing the ambush, were careful to point out the "massacre" did not mean that organized and armed opposition existed in Ethiopia, new segment of the reborn Italian empire.

It was emphasized the aviators were ambushed by "bandits."

The official statement said the air mission previously had landed at other points in the district, and had been welcomed cordially by the populace.

Thirty Reported Killed.

London, July 8 (AP).—A Reuter (British) news agency dispatch tonight said it was reported in Rome that a total of 30 Italians had been slain in the Ethiopian ambush.

Grounded Soviet Ship Refloated After 6 Days

Tokyo, July 8 (AP).—The grounded Soviet steamer Sima was refloated today and steamed under its own power for Petropavlovsk, Kamchatka Peninsula, the Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported.

The dispatch from Otaru, Hok Aido, said the majority of the 900 fishermen-passengers aboard the ship had previously been taken aboard rescue vessels.

The 4,000-ton vessel grounded July 2 near Onnekotan Island in the Kirile group north of Japan, while on its way to Kamchatka.

Garbage Scow Fumes Upset British House

London, July 8 (AP).—Fumes from a garbage scow passing up the nearby Thames upset the dignity of members of the House of Commons and interrupted a debate tonight.

The "M. P.'s" coughed and sneezed as the unsavory odor was drawn into the chamber through a powerful ventilator plant.

The speaker and others departed quickly, leaving a mere handful of parliamentarians. They continued addressing the almost empty house over which the deputy speaker presided with a handkerchief over his nose.

2 Doukhobors Jailed For Nude Parading

Nelson, B. C., July 8 (AP).—Two Doukhobors, Paul Metin and Bill Vlosoff, were senteneced to three years in the penitentiary today by Magistrate John Cartmel for parading without benefit of clothing near Brilliant, B. C., eight days ago.

The two refused to plead guilty, stating they were obeying the laws of nature.

The sentencing followed upon a recent epidemic of nude parading and other disorders in the Doukhobor colonies.

Britain Notifies France King Will Visit Riviera

Paris, July 8 (AP).—Great Britain officially notified France tonight of King Edward's plans to spend two weeks on the Riviera, beginning late in July.

Minister of the Interior Rogers Salengro and attaches of the British Embassy agreed to discuss the question of police protection within a few days.

King Edward will stay at the Villa L'Horizon, owned by the noted actress, Maxine Elliott.

Drive on Jews Pledged By 30,000 Rumanians

Bucharest, July 8 (AP).—(Jewish Telegraph Agency)—With the blessings of Greek orthodox priests, 30,000 peasants tonight took an oath under the Swastika flag of the Fascist Party to rid Rumania of Jews. The ceremony was held in the town of Orhei, Bessarabia.

The right wing bloc was formed recently by Prof. Octavius Goga and Prof. Alexander Cuza. George Cuza, son of the professor, declared in a speech that the Swastika was not German but an old Rumanian symbol.

About the Showshops

"LET'S SING AGAIN." Here is one of those infrequent surprise hits that launch their careers in utter modesty and wind up in a blaze of adjectival glory as their unsuspected virtues penetrate to the consciousness of both press and public and, unheralded and unsung, compel respectful attention.

BELL.

When it was released, "Let's Sing Again" was deemed only a fair example of that unfortunate species of film production always damned with the faint praise of being a "good program picture"—meaning a fair candidate for nomination as half of any man's double-feature bill, where two pictures are expected to be no better than one good one.

Then, to everybody's astonishment, it earned an extension of run at the huge Roxy Theater in New York and was reported from other cities to be a screen feature of more than ordinary appeal, if not pretentiousness. Distributors, exhibitors and cash customers alike began to take this thing seriously and wonder where its star, Master Bobby Breen, had been all their lives—or they all of his, as the case might be.

After viewing this simple and unassuming little picture—and it is, literally, a little picture, quite obviously a "quickie" made on Hollywood's "poverty row" and consuming scarcely more than an hour of running time— the reason for its gradual emergence from the ruck of mediocrity to the rank of popular "heart interest comedy-drama" is immediately evident. It is great in its simplicity, its directness, faithful adherence to a well-defined central theme and its natural and effective utilization of three excellent songs and a few discreetly chosen excerpts from grand opera.

Through half of a Tuesday midnight "sneak preview," attended by this column and its solitary distaff contemporary, there was some doubt as to the wisdom of squandering even a brief matutinal hour on anything so patently remote from the high reaches of the cinema's perfected artistry as this story of a truant youngster from an orphanage attaching himself to a wagon show traveling the countryside. Then things began to happen—not so much upon the screen as in the heart and mind of the spectator.

From a time-worn formula for the father-in-search-of-his-missing-son sort of thing there began gradually to form itself a gripping and heart-tugging tale of a valorous small boy, the unwitting object of a bitter clash over control of his extraordinary voice, that somehow got hold of you despite all the tawdriness of its environment and the sketchy quality of its dramatic blue prints and the highlight-and-deep-shadow manner of its character drawing.

There is no subtlety in "Let's Sing Again," no gentle nuances, no circumlocution or lost motion. I doubt if there was a single retake in the whole filming of the picture. There is about it, however, an honest, human and earthy poignance that fully explains why the film has "caught on" with audiences in all parts of the country that went in to see it "cold" and remained to applaud and maybe shed a surreptitious tear or two.

Bobby Breen's is a refreshing and assertive personality that is not quite matched by any of the other screen stars of his years. His singing is his greatest asset, of course, but the lad is a bit of an actor over and above his conspicuous ability as a boy soprano. Perhaps the fact that he has some of Helen Morgan's vocal mannerisms may be construed as a propitious augury for his future—at least until his voice changes.

I suggest that you go to see "Let's Sing Again" when it opens at RKO-Keith's a week from tomorrow. It seems to me to be worth it.

* * * *

You will find it well worth it, too, to catch a peek at "San Francisco" when it opens at Loew's Palace tomorrow. Although it was accorded one preview screening at Loew's Fox on a recent midnight, there still should be a vast audience for the oddly contrasted factors making for the greatness of this colorful and exciting celluloid record of one of the most picturesque eras in American history and all converging upon the staggering spectacle of the earthquake and fire of April 18, 19 and 20, 1906. In Baltimore, "San Francisco," co-starring Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, with Spencer Tracy and Ted Healy in roles of little less than co-stellar importance, is being held for a third consecutive week at the Century Theater, the first time in the history of the house any picture ever has won that distinction. Its first week at the Century shattered the house record established by Robert Haines in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," and a week of personal appearances, established back in 1931. That will give you a rough idea.

* * * *

My personal curiosity was so aroused by the preview of "San Francisco," in Baltimore a fortnight ago, that I dug into the vaults and exhumed the bound volume of The Post containing the first stories of the disaster of 1906, over which I had pored, along with all the rest of the Capital, with such eagerness back in the days of my comparatively early residence in Washington. They are as fascinating in the horror of their relation of the appalling facts of a prodigious catastrophe now as they were then.

They are so eloquent of the period and the event, in fact, that enlargements of them will be displayed on the front of the Palace and in the lobby when "San Francisco" inaugurates its engagement there tomorrow.

Newspaper-making was slightly different 30 years ago from today's highly mechanized art. You will not find any Wirephotos on the first pages of The Post's issues of April 18, 19 and 20, 1906, but you will find some graphic writing that tells the whole story of the quake and consequent holocaust that cost hundreds of lives and hundreds of millions of dollars in property loss.

These first reports of the disaster make the authentic realism of the film seem all the more remarkable. Or so it seems to me.

Crystal-Gazer-Makes-Good Note.

An official bulletin late yesterday afternoon from the executive offices of the Warner Brothers in the Earle Theater Building announces that Maxine Doyle will headline the Earle's stage bill the week of Friday, July 24. Well, well, well!

Notable Films Feature Bills For Next Week

Picture Houses, Parks and Roadside Vie for Top Summer Patronage.

Having already been shown locally at one special, midnight, preview performance in Loew's Fox Theater, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "San Francisco" will be presented as chief feature of the bill at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this variegated and exciting story of the San Francisco of the turn of the century, when the infamous Barbary Coast gave it the reputation of being the "wickedest city in the world," the principal roles are played by Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, supported by Ted Healy, Spencer Tracy, in one of the most effective portrayals of his career; Jack Holt, Jessie Ralph, Shirley Ross, Al Shean and scores of others, including many "old timers," once stars of the screen, but now content to do "bits" before the cameras. The climax of the picture is reached in a remarkably realistic depiction of the destruction of the city by earthquake and fire in 1906. Running a full 1 hour and 55 minutes, "San Francisco" will be augmented by a new issue of the Metrotone News.

Another biographical drama, fashioned after the general form of the eminently successful "Story of Louis Pasteur," will occupy the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, when "The White Angel" will be presented for the first time in the Capital. "The White Angel" visualizes the story of the life and work of Florence Nightingale, who blazed the trail for the profession of trained nursing for women. The title role is played by Kay Francis in one of the finest characterizations she ever has brought to the screen. Supporting roles of prime importance are played by Donald Crisp, Halliwell Hobbes, Donald Wood, Ian Hunter, Nigel Bruce and Henry O'Neill. The stage portion of the bill will be headlined by Harriet Hoctor, who shares with Patricia Bowman the honor of being America's prima ballerina, in "Armour Coquette" and "The Raven." Others on the program include Jean Sargeant, radio songstress; Art Frank and Vivien Peterson and the Five Juggling Jewels. Newsreel and orchestra, with Freddie Clark, will complete the bill.

A week of mirth and music is promised patrons of Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, when "We Went to College" will be the chief screen feature of the bill and a Major Bowes Amateurs on Tour unit will furnish the stage entertainment. In "We Went to College," the principal roles are played by Hugh Herbert, Charles Butterworth, Una Merkel, Walter Abel, Walter Catlett and others skilled in the subtleties of comedy. The Major Bowes unit is comprised of some of the most talented of the amateurs who have won recognition on his Sunday night radio hours and comes to Washington highly commended by other cities in which it has played.

A New Prodigy Comes to Screen

When "Let's Sing Again," one of the surprise pictures of the season, is presented on the screen at RKO-Keith's, following the current engagement of Barbara Stanwyck and Gene Raymond in "The Bride Walks Out," another remarkable child actor will be introduced to Washington audiences in the person of Master Bobby Breen, age 8. Popular on the radio as "Eddie Cantor's adopted son," Bobby is the possessor of a singing voice of extraordinary quality. It is displayed to fine advantage in this film. Bobby is pictured above with Henry Armetta, his benefactor in the play.

The bill will be augmented by Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's overture.

Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland are the pictured costars of "Early to Bed," the screen comedy that will take possession of the Metropolitan Theater screen for the week beginning tomorrow. Supporting the stars are such renowned players as Gail Patrick, George Barbier and Sidney Blackmer. The story is one of comedy, romance and amusing adventure. The program will be supplemented by short sound subjects and full, 15-minute newsreel.

"Little Miss Nobody," with that precocious young actress, Jane Withers, in the title role, is announced as the chief feature of the bill at Loew's Columbia Theater for tomorrow and the ensuing week. The story is one especially adapted to the talents of this gifted child star and enlists also the talents of Jane Darwell, Ralph Morgan, Sara Haden and Harry Carey. "Beware of Blondes," a Technicolor comedy; musical reel, "Alpine Rendezvous" and Metrotone News will complete the program.

Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Young, Gene Raymond and their supporting cast having scored a substantial hit at RKO-Keith's in "The Bride Walks Out," that clever screen comedy will be continued for a second week at the Fifteenth street house, beginning tomorrow. The auxiliary attractions also will be held over.

The Little Theater announces that Paramount's all-star cast in "If I Had a Million" and the grim beauty of "Man of Aran" have scored so pronounced a hit this week that they will be continued as a double-feature bill through a second week, beginning Sunday. The short-reel subsidiaries also are being continued.

The Roadside Theater will continue Augustin Daly's "Under the Gaslight" throughout the remainder of the current week. Capacity attendance has been the rule since opening night, a week ago last Monday. Beginning next Monday and continuing for a fortnight, a revival of Augustus Thomas' "Arizona" will be the bill at the Roadside, with Lansing Hall, Richard Kreuzberg, Virginia True, Elinor Cox Carsten, J. Edmund Veitch and Betty Grey in the principal roles.

Glen Echo Park will celebrate an aquatic jubilee on Monday and Tuesday of next week, when the 1936 A. A. U. swim meet will be held. Competition will be staged at 3 and 8:30 p. m. in the Crystal Pool. The events will be open to registered athletes and medals will be awarded the winners in the various classes. After a whirl at the 50-odd amusements at Glen Echo, it is getting to be the smart thing to top off the afternoon or evening with a visit to Georges Boria, the "scissorette man," and getting one of his clever silhouettes.

Extra Players Profit by Big Studio Demand

Hundreds of 'Atmosphere' Players Total 100,000 Hours in June.

By the end of June extras of all types and chorus girls had worked more than 100,000 days on the Warner Brothers-First National lot during the preceding 60 days.

Production is now at its peak on the studio's three Hollywood lots and 11 pictures were before the cameras during the month of June.

Approximately 17,000 persons worked in "The Charge of the Light Brigade," the Errol Flynn starring picture, before it was completed, according to Director Michael Curtiz. Among the types of extras employed in the film were English, Russian, East Indian and Arabinan. Most of the extras worked all through the production.

In "Cain and Mabel," costarring Marion Davies and Clark Gable, approximately 1,500 persons, including the 150 Bobby Connolly chorines, were given work. The types varied from theatrical to pugilistic.

All Types Employed.

Another picture which found use for extras of the so-called theatrical class, is "Let's Pretend," a James Melton-Ruby Keeler starring production which went before cameras week before last. Approximately 750 extras are employed.

Two hundred men and women of the small town New England type were employed in "Way for a Pirate," a film starring Sybil Jason and Guy Kibbee and featuring May Robson.

More than 150 cowboys faced cameras in support of Dick Foran and Anne Nagel in "Lone Star Ranger," a musical Western.

Chorus Girls in Demand.

Two choruses of 100 girls each and several hundred dress and character extras worked under Busby Berkeley's direction in "Stage Struck," a filmusical starring Dick Powell, Joan Blondell and Warren William.

Approximately 1,500 extras of the rugged and athletic types were necessary for background in "God's Country and the Woman," a Bette Davis-George Brent Technicolor picture which is being filmed in the State of Washington; "Polo Joe," Joe E. Brown's last picture under the Warner banner, and "Shrinking Violet," an ice hockey film featuring Ross Alexander, Sybil Jason and June Travis.

With the 350 chorus girls scheduled to work from four to six weeks on their numbers and with most of the extras assured several days, the work days totaled far above the 100,000 mark for the month of June.

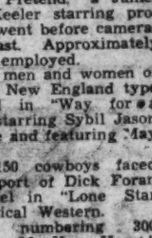
Terrific Letdowns.

Joe Louis, I suppose, is the timeliest instance of a person who Built Up to a Terrific Letdown . . . In two years, the Dark Bomber swept from nowhere to somewhere . . . Yet, in 46 minutes, it was all swept away from him—fame, invincibility, self-confidence, ego and a million-dollar gate . . . It must have been a Terrific Letdown, but it's better to taste the bitter dregs when you're young.



LUPE VELEZ

Katharine Hepburn, a comparative unknown, swept into spectacular prominence in her first Hollywood picture, "Bill of Divorcement" . . . Her next flicker established her even more solidly . . . Then she came East to do "The Lake" for Jed Harris . . . The next day she read the verdict in the drama columns, and the verdict was thumbs down . . . The Hartford, Conn., girl knew then how well it felt to Build Up to a Terrific Letdown.

James J. Walker, Herbert Hoover, Anna Sten, Discovery, Brevity, Andy Cohen, Max Baer—all members in good standing in the Terrific Letdown Club.

• • • •

Bad publicity is a short cut to letdowns . . . Ann Harding, Lupe Velez, Helen Kane, Herbert Marshall, Gloria Swanson, Arthur Tracy, Doug Fairbanks, Lee Tracy—all of these have been hurt by bad publicity—though some dopes insist that they don't care what is written about 'em so long as their names are spelled correctly . . . Jean Harlow has been hurt repeatedly by bad publicity, and it is a tribute to her own ability that she has weathered it . . . Rudy Vallee has had some narrow escapes from damaging episodes, but in each case, astute Hymie Bushel, his lawyer, has established clearly the fact that Vallee was the victim, rather than the aggressor . . . Helen Hayes and Gene Tunney, with rare courage, instead of settling cases out of court to protect their names, battled through to legal vindication . . . Great lawyers can avoid Terrific Letdowns.

A few years back, Herman Shumlin produced on a Broadway stage "Grand Hotel" . . . In the part of Kringlein, he cast Sam Jaffee, and Jaffee's brilliantly sensitive performance was the talk of the town . . . The movies seized Jaffee, cast him as the half-wit czar of the Russians in "The Scarlet Empress," costumed him like Harpo Marx . . . Thus was Jaffee, a fine actor, Built Up to a Terrific Letdown, through no fault of his own . . . He'll be back, for talent can't be strangled.

• • • •

James J. Braddock switched the formula by building up from a Terrific Letdown . . . His family was on relief, he worked at whatever job offered itself . . . But Braddock came back to win the world's heavyweight championship . . . His first gesture was typical of the fellow's character . . . Out of his first big purse, he paid back every penny the relief agencies of his State had given him.

• • • •

Benny Fields Built Up FROM a Terrific Letdown . . . He was broke, discouraged . . . He landed a job in Chicago . . . Two nights later, the club which had employed him was raided by police on gambling charges . . . The ordinary fellow would have taken a gas-pipe exit . . . But Benny had a grand wife in his corner, Blossom Seeley . . . She persuaded Mike Fritzel to give Fields a chance at famous Chez Paree . . . Just as Braddock fought his greatest fight against Max Baer, Fields turned in his greatest performance when he was faced with his greatest opportunity . . . You are familiar with the rest of it.

Perhaps It Was a Barbers' College!

The services of many deft funmakers are utilized in "We Went to College," the screen comedy coming to Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning Friday. Among them are Hugh Herbert, Charles Butterworth, Walter Catlett and Una Merkel. In the bit of intimacy picture above, the principals are Miss Merkel and Walter Abel, the one who is slightly lathered and ordinarily a little more serious than the others. One customarily does not associate Mr. Abel's finished thespianism with nonsense, but in his present surroundings it is difficult to imagine how even a Booth or a Mansfield could be very noticeably austere.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office

By Betty Read.

The telephone and telegraph wires are busy these days between Washington and the drought area in the Middle West and a number of Uncle Sam's experts have been moved there on short notice to take charge of Government activities in behalf of the sufferers.

Today a clearing house to supply information and guidance between farmers whose cattle must be moved immediately to pasture lands and those who can offer that facility will open in Kansas City. E. O. Pollock, in charge of the hay improvement program of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, is the first of those from the bureau to reach the area, but a staff of seven or eight will leave shortly to take up this work which was also a feature of the Government's program during the drought of 1934. Pollock is heading the emergency office.

Pollock also will list for the information of the farmers where they can obtain feed for their livestock at the most reasonable prices and aid in any way in supplying food for them, either on their own farms or on places where they can be shipped or driven at the least expense.

Co-ordination of weather reports from the area mean many hours of extra work in the U. S. Weather Bureau. Fifteen weather observatories in the district report frequently during the day to their State offices and these reports are sent to Washington each morning to give the full picture of the situation.

Donald D. Cooke, an air enthusiast and the owner and pilot of seaplanes in New York, has joined the Bureau of Air Commerce in the Commerce Department. He began his job yesterday as a marine air terminal adviser. This technical-sounding title means that he has the responsibility of approving seaplane base projects undertaken with WPA funds and of assisting cities and communities in preparing these projects.

By profession he is a mechanical engineer, and came to Washington from the docks department of New York City, where he had charge of establishing seaplane bases around the metropolis.

'Tis said that Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper is off for a couple of months' holiday in Europe, but it's going to be such a quiet little trip that official sources seem to know nothing of it.

The Department of Agriculture Benefit and Relief Association recently insured 1,400 employes of the Resettlement Administration, the largest single group of life insurance policies written by any Government association within many months. The policies total $2,000,000.

The story behind the picture on the new Oregon Territory Centennial postage stamp is that it is celebrating the 100th anniversary of the arrival of the first white families in the picturesque old Oregon Territory. But it would almost take a mathematician to keep a tally of all the celebrations going on over the country this year—and all the postage stamps that have been issued in their honor.

The new stamps, the size of special delivery ones, go on sale first July 14, at Daniel, Wyo.; Missoula, Mont.; Lewiston, Idaho; Astoria, Oreg., and Walla Walla, Wash., because these points have special historic significance. And this is Jim Farley's way of recognizing that fact. Stamp collectors take note!

K. E. Salisbury, assistant administrative officer of Immigration and Naturalization, has a new honorary job as vice president of the Department of Labor Athletic Association. Salisbury is an active member of that live organization and is chairman of the golf club within its ranks.

Maybe so! Anyway the Resettlement Press prints a little squib in its bulletin for the employes of Resettlement Administration saying, "among the inventions withheld from the public are shoe leather that lasts a lifetime, an automobile which runs 350,000 miles without overhauling, razor blades with a perpetual edge." Again we say, mebbe so.

The Social Security Board is on the lookout for some additional quarters. It seems the work has increased so much of late that a space reorganization is needed and the Old-Age Benefit Bureau is one of those which might find itself in a new home one of these days.

Over in the National Labor Relations Board is one Irving Hebling, classed by the Recreationist, the publication of the employes, as "Dashing Don Juan Zioncheck," who sometimes lands in the traffic courts for speeding. Last year he contributed a total of $80 in fines to the Police Department, but his record for this year is better. The paper dedicates the following joke to Irv. It may be the heat that makes us appreciate it.

A Change Tomorrow, Irv.

Judge (Traffic Court): I'll let you off with a fine this time, but another day I'll send you to jail.

Driver: Sort of a weather-forecast sentence, eh, Judge?

Judge: What do you mean by that?

Driver: Fine today—cooler tomorrow.

Six Marine Planes Set for Hop Today

A squadron of six marine airplanes, one an amphibian, are to take off today from the flying field at the Quantico barracks for a "ferry" flight to the Marine quarters at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

The planes, al loverhauled, will be left at the Islands, members of the "ferry" squad returning by boat and by a Douglas Amphibian that is to be flown back to this country.

Polish Official Slain.

Warsaw, Poland, July 8 (AP).—Viktor Gosiecki, vice manager of the government insurance office, was shot and killed on the street today by a discharged employe. Recently the director of the Lodz branch was slain in a similar manner.

Short Trump Suits.

The management of short trump suits probably gives average players more gray hairs than all their other difficulties put together. Undoubtedly their dilemma is as much psychological as technical. The fear that, once the trumps are gone, the opponents will go snake-dancing with their established suits is so shattering to their morale that orderly reasoning becomes impossible.

In today's hand success depended on what would appear, to many players, as a virtual squandering of trumps.

The bidding:

West	North	Pass	South
1 spade	Double	2 spades	3 hearts
Pass	4 hearts	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's take-out double was rather skimpy. Although he did have three and a half honor tricks, his 4-3-3-3 distribution was far from attractive. South was correct in refusing to allow East's two spade bid to shut him out. He had a fair heart suit, which his partner's take-out double had invited, and a reasonably good diamond suit, as well as favorable distribution. North was "on the spot" after the three heart bid. He realized that his double had been none too robust, but figured that almost anything was better than hanging one short of game. West's penalty double was close, but justifiable.

The opening lead was the spade king, followed by the queen. Declarer ruffed the latter and led his nine of hearts. West, of course, ducked, and dummy's ten was played. The queen of diamonds followed. East not covering, the jack was continued. Again East ducked and this time West ruffed with the three of hearts. A third round of spades was ruffed by the declarer, who thus was reduced to one trump, to West's and dummy's two. Declarer then played his last trump, and it did not matter whether West covered or not. As a matter of fact, he ducked, and dummy, of course, did likewise. Dummy was not entered with a club and the ace of hearts was laid down, dropping West's king while declarer discarded a club. Another diamond finesse gave declarer two more tricks in that suit, and the other club trick in dummy accounted for the tenth trick.

Woman Who Drowned Son to Get New Trial

Albany, N. Y., July 8 (AP).—The Court of Appeals ordered a new trial today for Mrs. Dorothy Sherwood, 28, of Newburgh, former burlesque dancer and Salvation Army lassie, who is under sentence of death after conviction of the murder of her son, Jimmie, 2.

At the trial, the defense contended Mrs. Sherwood, blonde widow, was temporarily insane when she drowned her son in Moodna Creek near Newburgh on August 20, 1935. A signed confession, in which she said she drowned the boy because she no longer could support him and wanted to "save him from starvation," was admitted in evidence.

Ice Put in Bathing Pool As Heat Registers 100

Aurora, Ill., July 8 (AP).—Bathers climbed around on the ice today in the community swimming pool, while the temperature hovered around 100 degrees.

Frank Thielen, manager of the pool, claimed to be th esecond largest of its kind in the Nation, ordered huge cakes put into the pool for the "pyschological" effect.

It makes the people have cool thoughts," he said as young swimmers played on the bobbing blocks.

Club Stages Initial Show in Garden; Studdiford Sings Composition.

Greek Drama Written by Mrs. Hilton for Slyvan Theater.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Greek gods, the Graces, the Muses and the fates thmeselves gathered last night in the garden of the Arts Club for the initial presentation of "Phaeton, Son of Phobus," which will be given tomorrow evening for the general public in the Sylvan Theater.

Members of the club and their guests had dinner in the garden preceding the play, which was written last year by Mrs. Miriam B. Hilton especially to be given in the garden theater. The musical setting, arranged by Mr. Walter Studdiford, included "The Call of the Sun God," which he composed to fit a dramatic incident in the production, and which he sang last night.

During the dinner, informal preparations for the Greek drama went on. The glittering disk which formed the back of the throne of the sun god was carried from the clubhouse to the low stage at the end of the garden wall. Long golden spears, regal draperies, plates of fruits of all varieties, which had been made of crepe paper during the day, were also added to the properties backstage. The piano had been concealed behind a bank of foliage arranged against one of the trees at the side of the stage. Miss Margaret Tolson and Mr. Lyman McCrary were the pianists.

Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, who directed the production, sat on the little balcony back of the clubhouse auditorium and supervised the arrangements. Mr. Forney Reese, who later appeared in a brilliant costume and with grapes in his hair, in the role of Bacchus, was less impressive, but equally important as he assisted with lights and settings, working about with others in the cast, coat off and sleeves rolled up.

The garden, which was only completed last year, is lighted with old lamps and bordered by rows of flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm D. Corse were host and hostess. With them in the receiving line was Mrs. Annie A. Best. Others at their table for dinner were Mrs. Carl Casey, Mr. John Russell Mason, Mr. McCrary, Miss Marian Chace, Miss Powell, Miss Tolson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Stratton, Mr. and Mrs. St. George Teackle, Miss Mona Gill, Commander Fred Southworth, Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Little and Mr. Francis G. Wells.

Mrs. Charles Fairfax, who entertained a group of guests, presented an artistic picture in a black gown trimmed in ecru lace, with a black, lace-trimmed kerchief on her white hair.

Among others who had guests were Dr. and Mrs. Gerrit Miller, Miss Lydie Addison, the Misses Marie and Clara Saunders, Mrs. Margaret Ashford, Miss Anne Darlington, Mr. and Mrs. William Hepner, Mrs. Margaret Hill and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Steele.

The tables were removed and the chairs pushed back after the dinner to make room for the dancers of the Marian Chace group, whose work contributed much to the success of the drama. The fire dance in the final scene was especially fine.

The role of Clymene, mother of Phaeton, was taken by Mrs. Maud Howell Smith, who was strikingly gowned in a robe of gold. Mr. Maurice Jarvis, who was Jupiter, was not recognized by his fellow club members until he spoke and his voice proclaimed his identity.

The large cast included members of the club and singers, dancers and actors from outside who are giving their time and interest as a contribution to the Community Center project at the Sylvan Theater. The Marine Band is to accompany the production there tomorrow night.

By the Poe Sisters.

United States Minister to Denmark Ruth Bryan Owen, news of whose approaching marriage to Capt. Boerge Rohde, one of King Christian's bodyguard, came as a surprise Tuesday, will not be a stranger to the language and customs of her husband's country.

Mrs. Owen had lived in Scandinavian countries even before she was appointed to the Danish capital as the American representative, and was able to sing many Nordic folk songs, recite the old folk tales of Norway, Sweden and Denmark and relate the old sagas of Denmark.

Former Representative.

Washington society has a warm spot in its heart for Mrs. Owen, whose marriage will be at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Lehmann, in Long Island, Friday. She has been an integral part of life here for many years, first as the daughter of William Jennings Bryan, perennial Presidential candidate and Secretary of State, and then in her own right as Representative from Florida. Her appointment to the diplomatic post as the first woman to hold rank as a minister, was hailed with delight by women generally.

Mrs. Owen's first husband was Maj. Reginald Owen of the British Royal Engineers. After his death his widow returned to her own country and was elected to Congress. Tall stately and unusually handsome, Mrs. Owen inherits her father's magnetism, gifts of oratory and became a power in the House of Representatives. She held her seat there although her right to it as the widow of an Englishman in days before the present citizenship laws was challenged.

Mrs. Owen, in her congressional campaigns, took her entire family with her in a trailer and covered her district, knowing nearly every constituent by sight.

Last winter Mrs. Owen was in Washington and was a guest of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House. She sailed for Denmark on the Christmas ship, arriving in Copenhagen in time for the Yuletide celebration there. As usual the Christmas ship was distinguished by a Christmas tree fully lighted carried at the prow as it entered the harbor of Copenhagen.

Miss Anne Turnbull Selects Attendant

Miss Anne Graeme Turnbull, who will be married July 18 to Mr. Marshall Duer McDorman, of Washington, son of Mrs. Fredrick Stanley Groves, of Baltimore, and the late Mr. Alfred McDorman, will have her sister, Miss Helen Brogden Turnbull, as her only attendant. Miss Turnbull is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Clayland Turnbull, of Baltimore.

Mr. Francis McDorman will be his brother's best man.

J. L. England, Jean Slaymaker Wed in Virginia

Miss Jean McIlwaine Slaymaker, daughter of Mr. Archie C. Slaymaker, of Lynchburg, Va., became the bride of Mr. Joseph Loveday England, son of Mrs. Margaret A. England, of Washington, in a ceremony yesterday at noon in the home of her aunt, Miss Elizabeth Slaymaker, in Alexandria. The Rev. Dr. W. B. McIlwaine, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Miss Peggy Monroe was her maid of honor and only attendant, and Mr. Addison Slaymaker was best man.

Miss Thompson To Wed July 15

Miss Evelyn Hastings Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice de Day Thompson, will become the bride of Mr. David Riesman, jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. David Riesman, of Philadelphia, in Brookline, Mass., at 6:30 o'clock on July 15. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Abbot Peterson and will take place in the Leslie Lindsay Memorial Chapel of Emanuel Church. The bride will be given in marriage by her father. Miss Janice Thompson will be her sister's maid of honor. The best man will be Mr. Carl J. Friedrich, of Cambridge.

A small reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents. The couple will reside in Brattleboro, Vt. Mr. Riesman is secretary to Mr. Justice Brandeis.

Diplomats Are Feted By Minister of Egypt

The Minister of Egypt, Mr. Mohamed Amine Youssef, entertained at dinner Tuesday in honor of the First Secretary, Mr. Khail Bey, who is sailing July 15 on the Normandie for his new post as charge d'affaires at th Hague, and of Dr. Hussein Chawky, who left yesterday for his new post as consul general at Kobe, Japan.

Among the guests were the Minister of Albania, Mr. Faik Konitza; the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alling, the former of the Near East Division of the State Department.

Dr. Wang will sail on July 15 on the Manhattan with Mrs. Wang for Germany to attend the Olympics. The American Olympic team will sail on the same boat.

Dr. Wang is a member of the International Olympic Committee and is in charge of sending 70 athletes from China to the Olympics.

He came to the United States ten days ago and attended the Rotary convention in Atlantic City. He is governor of the Eighty-first District Rotary International.

Hansons Return From Pelham

Attend Wedding of Son, William, to Miss Helen Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Hanson, of Bethesda, Md., with their sons, Mr. William Hanson and Mr. Arthur Hanson, have returned home from Pelham, N. Y., where they attended the wedding of another son, Mr. Kurtz McRobert Hanson, and Miss Helen Louise Davis. The marriage was at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Davis, in Pelham, with the Rev. George H. Smythe, of Scarsdale, officiating. Only members of the immediate families of the bridal couple were present for the ceremony.

The bride attended Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., and was graduated from Vassar College in 1935. Her father, who is business manager of the New York Herald-Tribune and a director of its Paris edition, was until last year president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Mr. Hanson, who is on the staff of the National Geographic Society of Washington, attended the Episcopal High School, in Virginia, and Cornell University, and is a member of Chi Psi Fraternity and of the Chevy Chase Club. His father is a leading Washington attorney and general counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. He and his bride now are on their wedding trip and will reside in Washington on their return.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude White and their son, Mr. Ennis White, are spending their vacation at Owesso, Mich.

Washington Society Notes

Mr. Justice James Clark McReynolds has sailed aboard the Europa for Europe. He will return to Washington at the end of August.

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom will be the ranking guests at a dinner to be given Sunday evening at the Bar Harbor Club by Mr. and Mrs. Skillman Foster, of Cincinnati. The dinner is being given in honor of Mme. J. J. A. van Kaathoven, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bel Sweeney at Petunia Cottage, their summer home in Bar Harbor.

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, will return today from New York City.

The Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring will return today from a stay of several days in New York.

The chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, Mr. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, sailed on the Queen Mary yesterday for a trip to Germany, Hungary and England. He will be joined later in the summer by Mrs. O'Brien, who has left for New England.

Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President, is vacationing at the Samoset Hotel at Breakwater, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. David Bruce, of Syosset, Long Island, have leased the Southampton villa of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Finckle and will occupy it around July 17. Mrs. Bruce was, before her marriage, Miss Ailsa Mellon.

Col. Edwin M. Watson, aide to President Roosevelt, and Mrs. Watson have sailed for Europe.

Lieut. and Mrs. N. Minter Dial, who are at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, will return to Washington the end of the week to rejoin Mr. Dial's parents, former Senator and Mrs. Nathaniel Dial.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mondell will return the end of the week from New York, where they went for a short stay several days ago.

Mrs. Horace Shares, of Washington, has gone to Heaton Hall, Stockbridge, for the summer. She is a sister of Representative Allen Treadway, of Massachusetts.

Mr. and Mrs. William Christy have left for California, where they will join the latter's sister, Mrs. Ramsdell Cummings, and Mr. Cummings. Mrs. Christy was before her marriage last month Miss Diane Maitland, and Mrs. Cummings was Miss Jane Maitland.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., will return the end of the week from New York City, where they are at the Waldorf Astoria.

Col. and Mrs. Edward Goring Bliss and their daughter, Betty, have returned from an extended motor trip. They went first to West Point, where Col. Bliss attended the reunion of his class, and from there to Montreal and Quebec.

While in Quebec, they were among the guests at the garden party given at Spencerwood by Lieut. Gov. and Mrs. Patenaude in celebration of the birthday of His Majesty King Edward VIII, at which the Governor General and Lady Tweedsmuir were guests of honor.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Devoted Husband of Lonely European Girl Asks What Clubs or Societies She Might Join.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You have helped many persons solve their problems. I wonder if you, or any of your readers, can solve mine. A little over four years ago, while on a cruise, I met and married a European girl. After our honeymoon I brought her to Washington, where we have lived ever since. We get along splendidly together, but the trouble is that we cannot be together all the time, as I am away at the office all day.

* * * *

Here is the fly in our ointment: My wife's people are in Europe, some 4,000 miles away. Mine are in the Middle West, about 1,000 miles from Washington. I was never much of a social animal, and therefore, aside from the people in the office and a few families with whom I roomed prior to my marriage, I know no one. The result is that during the daytime my wife has no one to visit or to be visited by, as the few women she knows are either much older than she or else employed.

* * * *

I used to think it would be heaven to set someone up in a cozy little apartment with nothing to do all day, but apparently it gets boresome and monotonous to be alone, with no one to talk to. At first, my wife was very busy learning the language and preparing for citizenship, but now she speaks English very well and is a full-fledged citizen. She plays the piano, listens to the radio when there are any good musical programs (which is rare during the daytime), reads numerous books, sews occasionally, but still time hangs heavily on her hands.

We tried the Y. W. C. A., but while it has numerous facilities for women to get together in the evening, the only thing offered during the day is swimming from 11 to 1. My wife has learned how to swim and goes there occasionally, but still that is not enough. Now what I would like to know is this: Are there any classes, clubs or societies where young women get together in the daytime? I don't mean cocktail parties, as my wife does not drink or smoke. She is interested in music, especially the piano; also vocal music, drawing and painting, sewing, and while she does not play cards, could easily learn.

* * * *

Surely there must be hundreds of young women in a similar predicament—married women whose husbands are away all day; unemployed single women, widows or divorcees; women who work evenings and who have the day off, etc. If there are no such clubs or societies, here is an opportunity for some socially active woman to start some. And meeting facilities should be obtainable from the Y. W. C. A., which furnishes them so liberally in the evening. (Please do not advise joining a church. While we respect all religions, we are not affiliated with any particular denomination.) Thanking you in advance for any advice or information you may furnish, I remain, sincerely yours,

PERPLEXED HUSBAND.

Whom to Contact.

DEAR PERPLEXED HUSBAND: Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, radio chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who knows the women's club set-up in Washington from A to Z, will be glad to talk with your wife and tell her what clubs she is eligible to join, and suggest which might appeal to her most. In seeking the solution of your problem, I was advised to enlist the aid of Mrs. Meritt, who, I was told, was an extraordinarily kind, sympathetic and lovely person. Acting on that advice, I telephoned Mrs. Meritt and learned that reports of her graciousness had not been exaggerated. You will find her listed in the telephone directory. You may either telephone her yourself, have your wife telephone her (using the name of this columnist as introduction), or write her a note, asking for a personal interview for a discussion of your problem. Mrs. Meritt has already suggested several clubs in which your wife might be interested, but I prefer you to receive these suggestions first hand. I trust this information will show the way toward relieving your wife's lonely daytime hours. M. H.

Correspondent Comments.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your column of June 27 I read the letter signed "Alice O. D." For her enlightenment and encouragement, I wish to say there are many places hereabouts where a woman with her training (as teacher and nurse) should be able to fit in. For instance the girls' schools and colleges should, in my opinion, find valuable use for the services of such a woman in looking after the students who attend these schools.

* * * *

I also have a comment to make on the letter from "Honest Adviser," published in the same issue. For many, many years I have been connected with the Protestant Episcopal Church and when a young man was a member of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. It is my opinion that persons may be very lonely in a church if they do not know how to fit in; how to make themselves a valuable part of the organization; how to become active in the right groups, as, for instance, the Girls' Friendly Society, the Daughters of the King, or the Christian Endeavor Society. In Catholic churches, too, you will find organizations that give to the lonely opportunity to forget their loneliness in doing good works for mankind.

* * * *

In view of the great influx of young men and women into Washington it seems to me what we need most here is a Mothering Society. So many of these young persons seem to need mothering!

Yours truly, T. M. R.

DEAR T. M. R.: Thank you for your kindly suggestions. As you say, a Mothering Society might not be out of place in Washington—nor, for that matter, in any large city where thousands of young persons find themselves alone and lonely, cut off from background of family and long-time friends. But who is there to start the ball rolling?

M. H.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY'RE ALWAYS taking on a new hobby. In fact, they're practically reduses already just because they're so busy with photography, carpentry, bookbinding, botany and several other things that fascinate them. And if you don't think things like that clutter up a house, just try a few of them on your own place.

This pair have been talking for years about fixing up the attic into a sort of studio workroom, but till now they've never gotten around to it. Partly because it was such a hot spot that they figured it wouldn't be fit to work in for a good many months in the year, anyway. Then someone said "Insulate." So they did and it worked, so that the attic is a very comfortable place to be in summer and much cheaper to heat in winter.

They've done most of the work themselves . . . didn't we mention that carpentry was among their hobbies? Anyway, they've made it a very pleasant room with wide plank walls stained in a nice woody color . . . doors and window frames, baseboards and moldings painted bright green . . . work tables made of saw horses . . . racks for tools . . . a built-in closet dark room in one corner with running water for their photography . . . hooked scatter-size rugs to make the floors genial and comfortable, but ready to roll up or kick up out of the way when big doings were going on with photography or carpentry . . . curtains of bright green string net, quite coarse and made to sweep back out of the way when all the light possible is needed through the windows. The easy chairs have bright red sail cloth slip covers and there's a studio couch here to be comfortable on, take a nap when the spirit moves, or put up an extra guest in an emergency.

Harm of Tactless Talk

NOBODY LIKES to talk to Olga! And no wonder! Listen to her appalling, tactless remarks.

"Why did you buy such a broad-brimmed hat?" she blurts out to Mrs. Hall, meeting the Halls walking in the parks. "Makes your face look so heavy."

Young Sally Gates bakes a soggy cake for her party, and Olga says: "What makes this cake taste so funny?"

Malicious? Not at all. Olga is just one of those child-minded people who voice right out loud everything that comes up in their minds. She never thinks of the effect on the other fellow.

We're not all such tactless talkers as Olga. But what a boost we'd give our social stock if we could say the winning word, fill awkward pauses.

"The Newton's are having such a pleasant vacation this year," and "Have you seen little Pete learning to walk on stilts?" and "Jane's pink organza was simply lovely at the dance last night"—these are all light, agreeable things to say and hear.

Win your way with good talk. Our 40-page booklet, Improving Your Coversation, tells how to build up vocabulary, sharpen wits, develop tact, poise, assurance, readiness. A treasure for the tongue-tied!

Send 15 cents for our booklet, IMPROVING YOUR CONVERSATION, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th St., New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Mrs. Alvoni Allen Mother Of 'Penny Art Fund' in 46 States

MRS. ALVONI ALLEN.

Movement Started 19 Years Ago by Clubwoman and Artist Expended $38,900 in 1935 for American Works.

NINETEEN YEARS AGO an energetic clubwoman, Mrs. Alvoni Allen (who was also an artist), in her jaunts about the country, decided there was a deplorable dearth of art and art appreciation in the American home, and that something should be done about it. But what? She consulted her husband, who suggested that she ask her fellow club members of Jersey City, N. J., to contribute a penny a year and at the end of each year purchase art with the money accumulated. Mrs. Allen followed this tip and the "Penny Art Fund," which is now a national organization and sponsored by 46 States, was born. In 1935, $38,900 was spent by the "penny art" for American oils, water colors, etchings and sculpture.

For the initial membership drive, circular letters explaining the purpose of the "penny a year plan" were sent to 194 federated clubs in New Jersey. The first contribution received was 17 one-cent stamps. "And, don't you think we weren't glad to get it, too," said Mrs. Allen. "It was a beginning, and proved that women were really interested, and before the end of the first year we had $14; last year $300 was received." Montana was the second State to enter the plan, Kansas second, and each succeeding year other States followed.

Annual Prizes Offered.

To stimulate art activities in the States and increase the Penny Art funds, annual prizes are offered. Mrs. Allen has contributed 51 of these prizes herself.

"Learn to know American artists and sculptors, past and present," Mrs. Allen counsels. "It is imperative to have an appreciation of the old masters, but so many persons are apt to skim over the surface of American art in their endeavor to acquire knowledge in this field.

In buying art with the P. A. F. funds, the State chairman has charge. She buys one of more works of art (according to the State's quota) in her own State only; thus each penny remains in its own habitat. The selections must be the work of artists of reputation who belong to some recognized art society. The standard of the art prizes must also be of the highest ranking. Both purchases and prizes of art are placed in the various clubhouses—in the event that such a place is not available, they are given to schools, other clubs, Y. W. C. A.'s or placed in members' homes. All of this proves, Mrs. Allen avers, that "clubwomen both buy and talk art."

National Chairman Six Years.

Six years ago, Mrs. Allen was made national chairman of the P. A. F.—an honor which she prizes very highly, since she has worked unceasingly ever since she started the plan 19 years ago. The keynote of the federation for 1936, "Education for Living," Mrs. Allen says, explains what she and the P. A. F. members have been trying to foster all these years. "Placing works of art, no matter how inexpensive, if they are beautiful and good art, in the home, enriches one's life and encourages an appreciation of finer things," advises this lifelong patron. In a recent jaunt across the country looking for "all-American" art prizes, Mrs. Allen purchased pictures at Detroit, Denver, Seattle, California, New Orleans and Florida. There is a decided revival of interest in the works of living artists, she discovered, and this, she believes, is an excellent trend toward a general interest in art and higher standards of living.

Extreme Care Should Be Used On Gifted Child

If Not Properly Trained, Talents of Genius Will Be Wasted.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. JONES was convinced that her son Tom was a genius, and said so to everyone who cared to listen. No one, of course, was more eager to listen than Tom himself. She based her statement on the fact that Tom was brilliant when he chose to exert himself, and erratic and difficult to grade. He was "different." Of course, once he discovered that it was a characteristic trait of genius, he grew more different every day.

Someone once made the statement that "genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains." It might be true to say that "genius HAS an infinite capacity for taking pains." What genius is, no one has ever adequately defined. One thing, however, is certain. It needs no allowances made for it and no special recognition. If it is present, nothing will hinder its expression, and it is not necessarily "queer."

Like everyone else, a genius needs tools and health and a normal background. As soon, however, as he is given a special treatment, the chance of his getting these prerequisites is diminished. Only a very rare person will be able to overcome the handicap of such a childhood as Tommy's.

If there is a chance that he is a genius or even rarely gifted, he should be taught the need for careful and thorough work, the value of taking pains. He must be made to realize that his innate talents are not due to his own efforts, but a free gift of a particularly fine set of tools. He can use these tools well and be an asset, or he can misuse and neglect them and be a liability to the world.

Being gifted above others, he has a greater responsibility and must be trained to use his talents to the best advantage.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Posed by Elizabeth Russell.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

AH! . . . HAVE I a surprise for you today! There is a new toilet water on the market that is going to make you run around in circles. They call it an essence de toilette. It is the fragrance of a perfume brought out a few years ago and which became very successful. I don't judge much from the bottles, but this one is lovely with its plain straight lines and its silver screw-top. The label is so thin and delicate that it adds to, rather than detracts from, the container. It is a Paris creation.

In these times anything that you can buy for a small amount of money that will make you feel as if you were rolling in wealth is a perfect buy. I don't always guess right, but I would say that it will not take long to sell out the first shipment of this toilet water. I sent a couple of bottles away for birthday presents as soon as I discovered it.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

CHAPTER 28.

"O, BUT THAT'S DIFFERENT! Still," she smiled, too. She had noticed the alteration in the face to which, though she would have endured torture rather than admit it, she had never become wholly reconciled through her son's 40-odd years of life. She was well aware, deep in her heart, where that homeliness and awkward, ungainly appearance came from. It was from her side of the family; she could remember a great-aunt who might have been, or so she often secretly told herself ruefully, Lord John in petticoats.

"I shall rest all the afternoon," she said slowly. "So I sha'nt want you to go with me to Lilyford today after all, my dear."

A grateful feeling filled his heart, and with a most unwonted gesture of affection he bent his head and brushed her cheek with his lips. "You'll come down for tea, won't you?"

"I'm not sure that I shall even do that. We'll meet at dinner."

After she had gone upstairs, she moved about her overfull sitting room restlessly for a while. Then she went over to the bay window which commanded a view of the winding road toward the castle, and she had not long to wait, for soon she saw her son striding along the avenue toward the road which led to Perranuth castle. And though she was a most worldly old woman there did go up from her heart a prayer, simple and sincere, that John might have the wish of his heart, and so enjoy what she knew had so far completely eluded him, that is, a measure of real happiness. For a moment she even forgot that Ruth Starling was very rich, and that her money would come in very usefully when it came to paying the huge death duties that would have to be paid on the death of John's elder brother.

It was true that Ruth had told the two girls who came up early each morning, and stayed till late, that they could have the day off. They both feared and disliked their employer, but they had become very fond of the American young lady. She was so kind, so generous, too, as regarded little thoughtful acts of kindness. She had given Rose, the parlor maid, a lovely dress which Rose had admired with no touch of envy. So when Ruth had told them both that if they would leave out something cold for her lunch, she would make her own tea, they both protested they would like to stay. But still it was such a chance to get off for the day, and the sort of chance they had never expected, for when she had engaged them Mrs. Trefane had made it clear that there were to be no holidays at all, excepting the traditional Sunday afternoon "off."

This was why Ruth now had the great castle alone to herself, and in a sense she enjoyed the silence and quietude.

Before starting, Philip Trefane had handed her a copy of a new play by a famous dramatist. He had explained, with more eagerness than he generally showed, that to produce any work by this man would put her on the theatrical map in London in a way she could not hope to be for some time. This had naturally interested her very much. But having read the play, she felt doubtful. The part which would be hers was an unpleasant part. Willing as she was to take Philip Trefane's advice, she yet had a mind of her own when it came to a matter of acting, and she made up her mind to consult Lord John.

The two maids had suggested that Miss Starling should leave everything for them to clear up in the morning. But that was not Ruth's way, and after having read the play for a second time, she had gone to the kitchen and was actually engaged in washing up the two plates and the two dishes which were used for her late lunch, when she heard the front door bell.

Quickly she dried her hands, pulled down the sleeves she had rolled up, and hurried off to the door, expecting a note from Lady Cicester, or even from Lord John.

She opened the door, and then her face became full of welcome. "Do come in—" and rather shyly she added —"John."

"I thought you had gone up to London. I understood Iris to say you were going there today."

He paused and saw her face registered surprise.

"There was never any thought of my going to London."

"Perhaps I misunderstood Iris," but well he knew that his cousin's wife had lied to him.

As he followed her into the hall: "Do you mind waiting here for a few moments? I've given the maids a holiday and I'm just washing up my lunch things. I won't be more than five minutes more, but I don't like to leave it all in a muddle."

"Mayn't I come and help you?" he asked eagerly.

She laughed gayly. "Why, of course you can if you like!"

When they reached the kitchen she rolled up her sleeves again, and merrily they ended the washing up, he drying the plates and dishes after she had washed and rinsed them.

"In the old days I never did this kind of chore without feeling I'd like to be a vegetarian," she exclaimed. "And today I have been a vegetarian, for I've only had some salad and fruit."

Doing that little task together seemed to bring them very near to one another, at least so the man felt, and he was full of inward delight at finding himself with her alone within four walls. The big old kitchen, which had been left scrupulously clean and tidy by the young cook, made as good a background for a love idyll as would have done in Lord John's present mood the most romantic of surroundings.

"Iris spends quite a lot of time in here, but she will never allow me to help her, and it's too bad, for I should enjoy it."

"My sister goes out and camps alone in Scotland sometimes with my brother-in-law," he observed. "He kills the birds, she plucks them and cooks them, and then I hope they wash up together. But she told me once she never thought much of love in a cottage after she had been out doing that kind of thing even for only a very few days."

"Iris makes a very good thing of 'love in a castle.' She is so absolutely devoted to Philip. The first thing she told me after I arrived was that they had spent their honeymoon here."

And then, as they made their way along the stone passages, which separated this part of the building from the great hall, Lord John said in a musing tone: "I used to adore the castle, and felt sorry we didn't live here instead of in the manor house. But somehow I've taken a kind of dislike to this place."

"Why that?" she asked.

"I can't say exactly, but I now feel that there's something sinister about the atmosphere. I suppose you've never felt that?"

"On the contrary—I feel very happy here."

"And yet, even in the short time you've been within these walls you've twice faced a terrible death," and he spoke with restrained emotion.

"But neither time was it in the castle," she said quickly. "Once it was in the sea, and as for the fire—well! You couldn't call the annex —the castle."

"Still, both times it happened here."

And then she rather surprised him by saying: "Why shouldn't we go and sit on the terrace for a while? It's perfect out there, and I've been sitting out of doors reading a play which I want you to read. Philip would like us to buy it, so as to have it in reserve for our second production. But I'm not sure that I altogether like it."

"Let's sit out there now, but let me take it away to read. I like talking when we're together."

His voice sounded strange to himself, for he had suddenly made up his mind that he would tell Ruth he loved her.

She opened the narrow door which led from the hall into the sitting room. "This is the nearest way to get out of doors."

It was pleasantly cool on the terrace, and Lord John saw that to their left, just under the farther wide bay window, was an oak bench. On it lay a much thumbed manuscript play.

They both sat down, and all at once he put out his hand and took hers. She was surprised, indeed very much surprised, but she allowed her hand to rest confidingly in his. He pressed it with a murmured "Ruth?" and looking straight before him, he said in a low voice: "Surely you know that I love you, that I have loved you from the first moment that I saw you?"

She said nothing, only looked at his now rigid side face. That profile which most of the people who knew him would have said made a grotesque outline. But there was nothing grotesque in John Pendervil's countenance to Ruth Starling. She had come to care enough for the man's soul to accept his painfully plain visage.

As if he could not help himself, he slowly turned his head, and she saw that his face was working with emotion.

"I shall never care for any one—I never have cared for any one—as I care for you." The words came in gasps. "And yet, Ruth, I know I should be doing a selfish thing if I asked you to marry me."

She whispered: "No, no," and he cried out: "Then I do ask you to marry me. Oh, Ruth, do you think you could ever care enough for me to marry me?"

She made no answer to that plea, but she allowed her hand to go on resting in his.

"I don't want you to answer at once," he said eagerly. "I know you ought to have time to think over your answer. If you feel you must say 'no,' don't let it be an eternal no. Remember that I shall always be there, and always longing to hear that you have changed your mind. But if—I can hardly say it, Ruth—but if you do consent to become my wife I want you to know that I shall be quite content for you to go on with the life and career that I know you have planned out for yourself. I shouldn't want you to be with me for more time than you felt you could spare, and I believe, though I know how presumptuous I am, that I could make you happy when we were together."

His fingers closed on her hand with a strong grasp, and again, to his trembling delight, she did not withdraw her hand.

"I was utterly miserable during those days you spent at the manor house. I felt as if you were drifting far away from me, Ruth, and I had made up my mind that I would never ask you to be my wife. I was afraid that to do so would only spoil our friendship. But I wasn't able to help myself just now."

Again he stared out at the sea. Then he said slowly: "Even in these days it's a good thing for a woman to have a man look after her. And in this case, it's a man who would let himself be cut to pieces for her. No one will ever love you as I love you, and as I shall always love you till I die."

He took his hand off hers as he added, "but again I say, do not decide now. I simply want you to think over what I've said. What's more, I want you to have as much time for thought as you feel will help you to make up your mind. Of course I know you will be making a much bigger decision about this matter than an offer of marriage means to most women."

Tears welled up into Ruth's eyes. This man who was offering her everything he had, and everything he ever would possess, might have been a beggar asking a favor from a queen.

'Fruits In Season' Form Motif For Gay Dish Towel Designs

Pattern 5641.

By Alice Brooks.

"YES, WE HAVE no bananas!"—but grapes, peaches and cherries, among these "fruits in season." What matter which you do first, the applique or cross stitch, for both are fun! Here's a particularly delightful way to adorn your breakfast or refreshment linens, or a set of dish towels, using gay scraps for the applique. The leaves, done in 8-to-the-inch cross stitch, are effective in shades of green.

In pattern 5641 you will find a transfer pattern of seven motifs averaging 4½x6½ inches and applique pattern pieces; color suggestions; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Are Piles Serious?

There is much in the power of suggestion, and it is common practice on the part of a few patent medicine vendors to enumerate every symptom that it is possible for the body to exhibit—all relieved by the exploited remedy. This is particularly true of certain pile "cures." It is not too much to say that a great many people who think they have piles are really not so afflicted.

Constipation can cause all sorts of rectal symptoms, and it is not unusual for spasms or even strictures of the lower bowel to be mistaken for hemorrhoids. Bleeding from the rectum, however, should be regarded with concern inasmuch as blood will not appear unless there is ulceration or destruction of tissues. Pain is the symptom that frequently forces the patient to consult his physician, who, by examination, may discover what is known as a fissure. This is an ulcerated crack in the mucous membrane, which, during a bowel movement, becomes the site of considerable discomfort.

Small Veins.

What are hemorrhoids?

There are two sets of small veins in the rectum called plexuses (networks), each of which, when dilated, gives rise to a particular type of hemorrhoid, one called internal and the other external. The internal hemorrhoidal veins lie beneath the mucous membrane of the lowest inch of the rectum and extend upward; the external are found beneath the skin at the bowel outlet. Whenever these veins become stretched blood may clot within them. If a few of the internal veins become enlarged so that they appear outside the rectum, we recognize protruding piles.

External hemorrhoids are relatively unimportant, although they may be exceedingly painful. There may be a definite swelling of the skin in the area of the rectum, or tiny tags may be felt. While these fibrous affairs rarely give concern, they occasionally become infected and result in local abscesses. Contributing causes, in addition to constipation, are standing for long periods of time, horseback riding, straining, or the habitual use of cathartics.

Every family physician should be thoroughly competent to make a rectal examination and determine the exact state of the patient. Frequently the employment of an instrument called a proctoscope is required.

If piles are found there are two accepted plans of treatment.

When small vein sacs (protuberances) are present the injection of a solution which will obliterate the vessel cavity is effective in the hands of a very careful operator—one who is familiar with the anatomy of the parts and knows the landmarks. If the hemorrhoid has become filled with a firm, thick, clot, or is ulcerated or infected, the injection plan is not advised—in fact, the procedure may aggravate the condition. In suitable cases this treatment is rarely painful, as the tissues are but slightly sensitive.

If the enlarged veins have become prolapsed (protrude), surgical attack by a skilled operator is the method of choice. When the work is expertly done the patient is generally free from symptoms for many years thereafter.

Not Pleasant.

Diseases of the rectum are not pleasant to contemplate. Nevertheless, adequate attention to the lower portion of the digestive tube is most important, as that region is a favorite location for the development of cancerous growths. It is, however, only when some obvious irritation has been allowed to continue for months, or even years, that this unfortunate situation presents itself.

All of which means that symptoms of pain, bleeding and the known presence of dilated, polyp-like enlargements, or hemorrhoids, should become the subject of investigation. It is the height of folly to temporize with salves, ointments, or so-called pile cures—no matter how highly lauded they may be.

Bremer Figure Seized by U. S. In Omaha Hotel

Accused Captured Without Struggle After Federal Hunt of Year.

Department of Justice agents yesterday arrested William Elmer Mead as he loitered in the swanky Fontenelle Hotel, in Omaha, Nebr., in connection with the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward H. Bremer, wealthy brewer, of St. Paul, Minn.

Described as a "confidence man," Mead was taken to the Omaha offices of the Bureau of Investigation late yesterday and the announcement was made later that he probably would be turned over to postal authorities.

Mead, who has a long criminal record, including a charge of violating postal laws, is wanted in Jacksonville, it was said by J. L. Flood, special agent at the Omaha office of the Bureau of Investigation.

The arrest was made by Flood and another agent. Officials reported last night that Mead did not resist arrest.

Wanted for Questioning.

Although Mead was not sought as an actual participant in the Bremer abduction, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, said last night that "efforts have been made to locate him for the purposes of questioning in connection with the Bremer matter."

Agents at Omaha did not disclose the result of their interrogation of the suspect.

Hoover said Mead's arrest was ordered a year ago after the bureau had checked his fingerprints.

Federal men described the prisoner as an international confidence man who has made thousands of dollars in his operations.

Hoover said Mead had been arrested in Northampton, Mass., on an auto charge about a year ago, but had jumped bond before Federal men could arrive and hold him for the Government.

Hoover said Mead's fingertips had been mutilated by the same physician who performed the face lifting and fingerprint alterations on the late John Dillinger and his lieutenant, Homer Van Meter.

Names 2 in Chicago.

On the basis of evidence accumulated, the director said he presumed the physicians were Wilhelm Loeser and Harold Cassidy, of Chicago, both of whom pleaded guilty to aiding Dillinger.

According to Hoover, Mead was a confident of Louis Piquett, Chicago lawyer, convicted of harboring a Dillinger gangster, who is serving two years in Leavenworth for the crime.

Mead was arrested in Jacksonville on a charge of swindling a man of $13,000.

He jumped a $10,000 bond there, and later, when he was arrested in Atlanta, jumped bond in the same amount.

Proctor, Expert On Trachoma, Dies

Chicago, July 8.—Dr. Francis I. Proctor, 72, world-famous oculist and internationally known for his research in trachoma, died in the University of Chicago's Billings Memorial Hospital today.

Former head of the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary and of the Perkins Institute for the Blind, he retired several years ago and became a resident of Santa Fe, N. Mex.

He was stricken June 19 while en route to Nova Scotia for the summer and was taken to the hospital where two delicate brain operations were performed on June 30. Surgeons removed two blood clots and Dr. Proctor gained strength temporarily. His condition, however, became critical yesterday.

Sixth British Soldier Slain in Holy Land

Jerusalem, July 8 (AP).—A British private succumbed to wounds today as Arabs, after a brief respite, resumed a campaign of sniping and firing on convoys from the hills. The private, a member of the Seaforth Highlanders, was the sixth British soldier to die in the newest Holy Land troubles. He was wounded when a detachment of troops were fired upon while returning to Nablus after mopping-up maneuvers in the desert.

Even the military camp at Nablus was fired upon today. Military patrols were thrown about Jewish settlements which were also the object of snipers. There were indications Arab leaders were redoubling thir efforts to continue the general strike against Jewish immigration in sections where it appeared to be weakening.

Always Smile Back at Sun Is Advice of Retired Skipper

CAPT. PATRICK TAYLEUR.

Any official census would list Capt. Patrick Tayleur as a retired seaman, and that's the way he likes to think of himself. But a half hour's conversation with the old salt is enough to convince the most casual listener that Capt. Tayleur is something of a philosopher and fairly expert in the art of living.

Since he left the sea in 1921 at the age of 65—"retired because they said I was too old," he explained yesterday—he has continued his carefree travels throughout the world, earning his own way by making ship models, telling sea stories over the radio, mending awnings and sails.

Yesterday the captain, now 80, arrived in Washington and while prospects here don't seem particularly bright "owing to a little difficulty five weeks ago in Philadelphia," the old seaman's courage was as high as ever and he is still convinced that this is a beautiful world with a lot of grand, fine people in it.

The "little difficulty in Philadelphia" was the loss of all his tools. Tayleur befriended a young man there who later walked off with his ship modeling and awning mending impements. The captain had only a few dollars at the time. With that small amount he bought a couple of tools.

Misses His Glue.

"The hardest part is being without glue," he said, while keen blue eyes crinkled with great good humor beneath white shaggy brows. "I need it to put between the two pieces of art paper I use for sails and for other parts. But soon, I hope, some fine lady will want me to build a ship for her and then she'll advance me a bit of money so I can get some more glue."

Tayleur has weathered similar storms before. Two years ago in Indianapolis another youth he considered his friend walked off with his tools and $68 he had saved.

"The nicest part of it," said the captain, "is that there always are more than enough good people in the world to counterbalance the bad. And maybe the ones who took my tools needed them more than I did."

Probably the hardest job, Tayleur confessed, is to keep well-meaning persons from shipping him off to Snug Harbor, home for aged seamen in New York.

"I'm not going there 'till I'm 90 and maybe not then," he declared.

Pension Goes to Daughter.

He could get along pretty well on his pension, he said, but ever since he started drawing it he has turned it over to Maude, the youngest of his seven children, so she could study music in Paris. She's coming to the United States this fall to visit a sister in Brockton, Mass.

"Guess I'll stay ashore until she comes," said her father. "We haven't seen each other since 1921, the year after her mother died."

Part of his incessant roving since that time, he admitted, has been inspired by loneliness and longing for "the old lady." But long before Mrs. Tayleur's death in London, he had sailed the seven seas and traveled through every continent.

At the age of 14, he left his home in Eastport, Me., to follow the sea as his father and grandfather had done, and shipped as a deck boy on the El Capitan, a three-masted skysail yarder, carrying jute from Calcutta to New York and tea from Hankow to London.

Later he became master of the Luzon, a sister ship to the El Capitan, and won the tea race from China to England. The trip took 82 days.

Ships Were Ships Then.

"That's when ships were ships and men were men," smiled Tayleur. He sometimes worries because people today seem so unhappy.

"This morning," he said, "I sat in Lafayette Park and 900 people passed me but not more than three of them were smiling. Why, what's the good of the sun smiling down on folks if they don't smile back. They expect too much nowadays. They're not as happy as they used to be when I was a boy."

Czechs Will Try Bomb Suspect In Local Blast

By the Associated Press.

Kosice, Czechslovakia, July 8.—Johan Drotar, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., will be tried for attempted murder here this month in connection with the mailing of a package containing a bomb which exploded in Washington, injuring two persons.

Drotar was arrested here last August. He was accused of mailing the bomb in Pittsburgh, addressed to Mrs. John Lukasc in Kosice. The package was sent to Washington for investigation. Upon opening it exploded, mangling the hand of Myrton L. Genung, dead letter office clerk, and injuring another employe slightly.

The trial date was not specified.

Johann Lukasc, or Lucas, also of Pittsburgh, is serving a 12-year sentence in the same case. It was understood here Czech police had requested American authorities to release Lukasc, declaring him to be innocent.

Postoffice Department officials yesterday indicated their willingness to allow Czechoslovakian justice take its course in the handling of the Drotar case.

"In August, 1935," said a spokesman, "we were notified of Drotar's arrest in Czechslovakia. That government asked us to forward all information available on the man. This was done through the State Department. Since then we have heard nothing about the case."

Woman, 68, Found Dead of Gun Shot

Lynchburg, Va., July 8 (AP).—The body of Mrs. Mary Belle Pierce, 68, was found in a garage back of her home this morning.

Apparently she had taken her life by firing a bullet into her mouth. Dr. J. Burton Nowlin ordered the body moved to a mortuary.

Near the body was a small revolver with the price tag still attached to the trigger guard.

Mrs. Pierce is survived by a daughter, Mrs. A. R. Poole, of Washington.

District Rates High as Center Of Recreation

Play Program Popularity Attributed in Part to Park System.

Washington, with its 33 municipal recreation centers and 53 school playgrounds, makes an excellent showing in comparison with 2,204 other communities studied by the National Recreation Association, the year book of the association shows.

The survey disclosed that one-sixteenth of all picnickers served by playground departments was in Washington, where a total of 25,000 persons last year obtained picnic kits and game leaders from the recreation department.

Sibyl Baker, supervisor of playgrounds for the District, said yesterday that one reason the public recreation program is so popular here is the fact that Washington has "one of the most magnificent park systems in the United States." She also cited the "close co-operation with the National Capital Parks office and the Community Center Department of the public schools."

The 1935 study of the National Recreation Association showed that in Washington alone 8,500 participated in soft ball, 8,000 in tennis, 5,800 in horseshoe pitching and 10,000 in baseball.

Miss Baker pointed out that the number of wading pools here has increased from 5 to 14 in the last ten years, that the municipal playgrounds have grown from 26 to 33 and that the school playgrounds have increased from 33 to 53.

Growth in public recreation centers has been a Nation-wide trend, the yearbook reveals. Children's playgrounds and wading pools have doubled in the last decade and 1,790 new recreation areas were opened in 1935. The total number of men and women engaged professionally in recreation work has increased in the last ten years from 17,177 to 43,976. The United States has provided 25,480 of those workers through emergency relief funds.

Waynesboro, Va., July 8.—An increase of $232,888.09 in the assets of the First National Bank and main office and branch of the Citizens-Waynesboro Bank & Trust Co. here during the past year resulted in total assets of $2,150,766.47 at the close of business June 30, according to reports of conditions made today.

Fireboat Battles Blaze on Launch

The District fireboat was called out late yesterday to extinguish flames which broke out aboard an Army launch tied to a dredge off Gravelly Point. The 35-foot craft, Anna III, was badly damaged. No one was aboard.

J. B. Stoufer, manager of the Hains Point tea house, telephoned Harbor Precinct police when he heard the three-blast distress signal of the dredge, which is engaged in deepening Washington channel. When the fireboat responded, it was found that the waters in which the launch was anchored were too shallow for a close approach.

Wheat Yield Good.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., July 8.—Howard W. Gill, former chairman of the board of supervisors of Northumberland County, farmer and business man, of Avalon, Northumberland County, reports the banner wheat yield in Northumberland County for the season. From six acres he received a yield of 47 bushels per acre.

Bus Hearing Ends in Row Over Survey

Citizens Seek Rerouting of Line, Cite Congested Traffic.

A row over an informal card questionnaire conducted by the Capital Transit Co. among patrons on the Rhode Island avenue bus line late yesterday marked the close of an all-day hearing on a petition of Monroe street residents to remove one of the two-way runs on Monroe street between Twelfth and Twenty-second streets northeast.

William R. Bennett, assistant to the president of the company, presented the figures from the survey during his testimony and drew a double-barreled attack from Peoples Counsel William A. Roberts and E. G. Sievert, 2121 Monroe street, who spoke for the Monroe street residents.

The survey showed, according to Bennett, that out of 312 questionnaire cards returned to drivers on Tuesday, 189 favored retention of the two-way bus route on Monroe street, 117 opposed it, while 6 expressed no preference.

Prefer Newton Line.

The cards also showed that, if a change must be made, 115 favored Lawrence street for the return trip and 122 Newton street.

Roberts and Sievert assailed the survey on the ground that it included answers from many patrons who do not live in the area affected.

At the conclusion of the hearing all sides agreed that the Public Utilities Commission had a very difficult problem to decide. The testimony showed:

1. Monroe street residents are in favor of taking one of the routes off Monroe street; so were the Rhode Island, Burroughs and Brookland Citizens Association.

2. Newton street residents are opposed to rerouting the bus line on their thoroughfare; they presented a petition with about 75 signatures to this effect.

3. Lawrence street residents failed to have representation at the hearing; Roberts and several of the witnesses suggested that it would be the logical selection for the commission.

4. Conrad H. Blanz, of 2018 Monroe street northeast, offered the suggestion of a new route that would take the bus line off all of the controversial streets. It would divert the buses at Twelfth street east on Kearny to Seventeenth, thence north to Lawrence, east on Lawrence to Twenty-second street, and then north to the end of the line. The return trip would be over the same route.

5. The Capital Transit Co. recommended retention of the present two-way route on Monroe street, but George Dunlop, general counsel, stated that if a change must be made the company would prefer the Kearny street route.

Roberts Cites Congestion.

Richmond B. Keech, acting chairman of the commission, which last March rejected a plea for a re-routing of the bus line, said he did not know how soon a decision may be reached.

The Capital Transit Co. drew up a statement listing nine points in favor of retention of the two-way routing on Monroe street and three reasons against such operation. Dunlop also suggested that a re-routing of much of the other private and commercial motor vehicle traffic off of Monroe street would solve the problem without re-routing the bus line.

People's Counsel Roberts, in summing up his case for the Monroe street residents, called attention to the congested traffic in comparison with Newton and Lawrence streets, the impairment of value to private property, and the superiority of the surfacing on Lawrence street.

He submitted a schedule of bus operation and stated that during the peak rush hour 72 buses go both ways on Monroe street. Street car officials immediately challenged this count because of short routing and declared the maximum to be 55.

Report Accuses Nolan Concern In Labor Fight

In an intermediate report made public yesterday, Trial Examiner Daniel M. Lyons of the National Labor Relations Board, found that the Nolan Motor Co. had interfered with its employes' right to organize and bargain collectively, had dominated an employes' organization and had discriminated against two employes for union activity, all in violation of the National Labor Relations act.

B. F. Schauffler, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, who issued the complaint against the company, said as the report was issued that most of the recommendations made in the report had already been complied with. The two employes involved have been reinstated in their positions, he said.

The employes against whom the report alleges the company discriminated were Bruce Luttrell and Joseph Acevez. The discrimination came, the report said, when the two men refused to sign a paper proclaiming that they had "voluntarily sought the protection of the Nolan Motor Co. Beneficial Association" to protect their interests as employes "with reference to working conditions, hours of labor and wages."

Lyons decided that by asking its employes to sign the paper mentioned above, the Nolan Motor Co. had interfered with its employes exercise of rights guaranteed by the national labor relations act.

It further decided that the company had dominated and interfered with the administration of the Employes Beneficial Association, a mechanics' labor organization.

Schauffler said yesterday that the case was "unusual" in that the company had already complied with most of the recommendations made by the board. Both Acevez and Luttrell have been reinstated in their positions and it only remains for the company to give the men back pay from the date of their leaving until their return.

Funds Allotted By PWA to City Relatively Low

Despite the fact that most of the WPA public building funds allocated to the District through last April 15 were for Federal Government projects, the Capital had received but $781,252 for 25 jobs, Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams announced yesterday.

The total public building construction and improvement under the WPA, he said, amounts to more than $167,000,000.

Maryland received $1,513,015 for 63 projects, while Virginia got $1,134,019 for 210 jobs.

William C. Cleary, local deputy WPA administrator, pointed out that the majority of the 25 projects credited to the District actually are Federal jobs, such as those under way at Bolling Field and in the Navy Yard.

The tuberculosis camp at Bald Eagle Hill, he said, is the largest local WPA project. Its total estimated cost is $70,000.

Other purely local WPA building jobs include a small building at Gallinger Hospital and various small structures on municipal playgrounds.

Fatal Plunge of Boy, 9, Is Called Accidental

The death of William (Buddy) Jones, 9, of 1489 Newton street northwest, who fell to his death from a fire escape last Saturday was accidental.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued the accidental certificate yesterday when a report from Col. John W. Oehman, District building inspector, said the fire escape conformed with regulations.

Youths Start Army Course At Ft. Myer

182 in C.M.T.C. Group to Be Trained in Tactics for Cavalry.

One hundred and eighty-two perspiring youths from three States and the District trudged through the gates of Fort Myer yesterday to start their first day as Uncle Sam's guest soldiers in a C. M. T. C. camp.

But Army life was not entirely new to them. Last year, as basic students in infantry tactics, they started a four-year military training course in another civilian instruction camp. Now they are ready for the next step—cavalry.

As the youthful recruits went through routine first-day procedure yesterday—registering, physical examinations, uniform fitting, unpacking and tent assignments—Fort Myer Army officers prepared for 30 days of instruction duties.

Maj. George H. Millholland adjutant of the camp, will be in direct charge. His task is to build future useful citizens from this batch of "raw material." Citizenship instruction, Maj. Millholland said, will come first. Military and national defense subjects will be secondary.

Work Begins Today.

Youths at the Fort Myer camp range in age from 17 to 20.

With 15 officers of the 307th Cavalry Reserve assisting Maj. Millholland, the real work will begin today. Each civilian student will be assigned a horse. During the course, instructors must mold expert horsemen from youngsters who, in many cases, have never ridden before.

Enlisting youths come from all walks of life. Some are farmer's sons. Others are sons of wealthy parents. Still others are sons of Army and Navy officers.

But they are all there for the same purpose—to learn what it takes to obey orders, observe strict discipline and become respected citizens.

Camp life is not all hard work, however. Maj. Millholland said there would be organized athletics—baseball, swimming, boxing, tennis—each under competent instructors. The day begins at 5:30 a. m. and ends with taps at 9 p. m. During each day lecture courses will be given by professors from recognized military schools.

In spite of the steady grind and hardfast rules governing camp life, Maj. Millholland said he never heard of a youth dropping out of his own accord.

Three Troops.

"There is nothing binding about this training course," the Major said. "If a student wants to return home, he may do so. He is not required to remain if he doesn't want to."

Today, the boys will be divided into three troops commanded by Maj. Grover Cleveland Davis. Training will begin by easy stages, culminating in examinations at the end of 30 days.

Mrs. Biddle to Speak.

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, will be the speaker on the federation's last radio program of the season tomorrow at 11 a. m. over Station WRC.

She will discuss juvenile delinquency, the value of the Police Boys Clubs and other crime problems confronting the District.

Test Lights With New Device

Police Launch Surprise Drive Against Defective Auto Lights

Motorists Stopped, Equipment Tested on the Spot With New Device; Blinding Headlights Frequent Offense.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

In a surprise move to rid Washington streets of night driving hazards, police and traffic officials last night launched a determined campaign against defective automobile headlights.

A police car, equipped with a new testing device, cruised through outlying sections of the city in search of offending headlights. Motorists were stopped, lights were tested and violators were ordered to report to the Traffic Department testing station on downtown C street.

Policeman F. J. Behnke, of the Traffic Division, was in charge of the "bad light" search. He was accompanied by a Post reporter and a representative of an Illinois manufacturing company which constructs the new testing device as part of a "safety lane" now being demonstrated to local officials.

Convinced that a large percentage of night accidents are caused by defective lighting equipment on automobiles, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown joined to open the enforcement campaign and warn District motorists to comply with light regulations.

At one spot near Sixteenth street and Spring road northwest, 17 cars were stopped within half an hour. In each case, after an analysis of the trouble, the driver was ordered to take immediate correction steps.

Blinding and glaring headlights led the list of offenses. In one instance, a headlight was found to be more than 6 inches off center, shining directly into the windshields of approaching cars.

On several occasions, motorists were stopped for driving with only one headlight. In other cases lights were out of focus, sending rays but a few feet ahead of the car.

In the majority of instances, motorists were totally ignorant of the condition of their lights. A woman driver was stopped for traveling without any lights at all. A test revealed a blown fuse. She was ordered to drive to the nearest garage for repairs.

When one motorist was stopped, a car behind nearly crashed into the rear. It developed that both drivers were at fault—one had no tail light and the other defective headlights.

The campaign will continue tonight. Van Duzer urged all motorists to have their lights tested and make necessary repairs.

"There is no excuse for bad lights," he said. "If motorists will take the time and trouble to make regular tests, we feel certain our night accident toll will decrease."

Dancing in Street Will Start Monday As WPA Project

Dancing in the street will be inaugurated Monday night to the music of the Federal music project dance band unit of the District of Columbia. A space on the Ellipse between Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets will be roped off after the pavement has been treated with resin and wax.

The Federal music project is cooperating with the National Capital Parks in this first outdoor dance, which will be in the nature of an experiment.

Dancing hours will be from 9 to 11 o'clock and space will be provided for approximately 3,000 dancers. The band will use the rambling theater truck as a platform. The musicians have played for approximately 12,000 persons in CCC camps and institutions in the District area during the last five months.

The assignment of the WPA dance unit in the District to this recreational service follows the procedure in other cities. Three of the Federal orchestras are playing in New York City and Brooklyn every week to crowds aggregatnig 40,000 dancers.

Police Begin Curfew Step For Children

Supt. Brown Launches Drive to Prevent Delinquency.

Designates Special Aid to Patrol Streets and Get Names.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, yesterday took steps to keep children off the streets at late hours of the night.

The police chief, whose Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs have already proved their worth in curbing juvenile delinquency, appointed a policeman to act especially on juvenile relations and to maintain a check on children seen on the streets after dark.

Maj. Brown said that seeing a small boy riding a tricycle on M street northwest near midnight several nights ago set him to thinking that here might be an opportunity for the Police Department to do a real preventive service.

The man who will fill the special post is Policeman Andrew W. Kasius, who was closely associated with juvenile cases while a member of the recently dissolved Crime Prevention Bureau of the department. Kasius will be known as the juvenile relations officer.

Orders have been sent to all members of the police department to observe all children seen on the streets without their parents at late hours.

The officers will take the children's names and addresses. These will be turned over to Kasius, who will investigate the home conditions of each and find out from parents why they are permitted out at such times.

Maj. Brown said that he hopes this check will enable the department to increase its efficiency as a body preventing children from getting into bad company and possibly the stigma of arrests and a police record.

Move Now Looms to Take All-Star Line-up Vote From Fans

This Morning . . .
With Shirley Povich.

If it is possible to waste sympathy on a man who cannot accurately estimate his wealth within a couple of million dollars, then a mass of it apparently is being wasted on Thomas Austin Yawkey, who numbers the back-sliding Boston Red Sox among his holdings.

POVICH.

The more tender-hearted folks have been heard to say that it is a pity that Mr. Yawkey has been able to realize only a third place ball club from his $3,000,000 investment in the Boston club. Money was no barrier to the man when he set about to build himself a pennant-winner and he didn't blink an eyelash as he expended sums for certain individual ball players that would buy a whole ball club not so many years ago.

When he saw a ball player he wanted or thought he wanted, the Yawkey checkbook was brandished before the profit-takers who owned rival clubs, and Yawkey took the ball players away. Joe Cronin cost him a cool quarter-million, and he passed $350,000 to the Athletics in the deal for Foxx, Cramer, Marcum and McNair.

He rebuilt the Boston ball park, restored the city's fanatic interest in baseball, thereby benefiting every other club in the league, and put an end to salary squabbles by raising the pay of every performer on his club. He wanted a pennant and a few hundred thousand dollars more or less was not going to stop him.

So, when Yawkey for his efforts and his pains comes up with a third-place ball club that is only two games removed from the second division, the thinking fan is entitled to believe that the man deserves a better break. Yawkey wants a pennant. He is grateful to his well-wishers but with rare philosophy he is laughing off his failures.

At Boston during the All-Star game he told his interviewers that he was satisfied that his manager, Joe Cronin, had done a good job, and that his general manager, Eddie Collins, was equally blameless in the failure of the Red Sox. He pointed out that he never predicted that his team would win the pennant, and excused Joe Cronin's remarks in that direction as a preseason attempt to fire his players with pennant zeal.

The truth of the matter is that the man, Yawkey, can kiss off a couple of million dollars with no more misgivings than this department would drop a penny in a chewing-gum machine, and with no more financial discomfort. He's loaded with dough.

The Yawkey fortune embraces directorates in a dozen Wall Street corporations; it is strongly entrenched in lumber and ore, and its realty holdings comprise a small empire. The 34-year-old lord of all this wealth is, withal, a plain man. He never learned how to put on the dog, and at his Fenway Park you're as likely to see him hobnobbing with the bleacherites in rolled sleeves as in his special box abaft the Red Sox dugout.

But to the folks who would heap their sympathy upon the man who has dealt so generously with the game in his futile efforts to buy the thrill of a pennant-winning team, there is cause for pause.

It is from the profits of Mr. Yawkey's other varied and profitable enterprises that the bills for his ball club are footed. Whatever sums Mr. Yawkey expends on his Red Sox are simply deducted from the excess profits that Mr. Yawkey's other companies ordinarily would turn into the United States Treasury as taxes.

So Mr. Yawkey, in truth, is not out of pocket whenever he hands over a couple of hundred grand to this clubowner or that for a choice bit of baseball flesh. He is simply diverting his tax money toward a sports hobby which is probably the most expensive in the world, with the exception of yacht racing.

In Short——

Mr. Yawkey now is ogling Outfielder Ben Chapman, of the Nats, and doubtless will make an offer for him this winter . . . he tried to buy Chapman from the Yankees but Manager Joe McCarthy refused to strengthen a club that loomed as a serious pennant rival . . . Boston newspapers which ruined the All-Star game attendance at Braves Field by reporting that the park was sold out, now are panning Boston fandom for the poor turnout . . . Washington club officials will attempt to set a new low record for the expenses of the All-Star game which they will conduct here in 1937 . . . the only benefit received by the club playing host to the game is the profit made from the concession stands . . . in Cleveland last year, the Indians realized $10,000 from the concessions . . . Goose Goslin, hearing the All-Star American League team accused of a lack of spirit, hotly declared that there was plenty of fight on the American League bench . . . whereat the accuser agreed with him and added that it was a pity there was no aggressiveness out there on the field.

'Many a Flower Is Born to Blush Unseen . . .' Witness Roy Bell

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 8.—Deeds that earn bouquets—and all-star berths—at the top, pass without notice at the bottom, as Roy "Beau" Bell, St. Louis Browns' outfielder, can well attest today.

Down in the cellar of the American League, Bell has been making most of the noise for Rogers Hornsby's motley crew, but the basement confines apparently deaden the echoes of the outer world.

Scoring or driving in more than one-fourth of the Browns' runs so far, Bell's batting prowess compares like this with Gotham's pride, Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees:

	AB	R	H	HR	RBI	Pct.
DiMaggio	257	57	92	10	60	.358
Bell	264	40	94	4	53	.356

Slathers of publicity accompanied DiMaggio's entrance into "Big Time." Bell drifted in without fanfare last year and was "busted" back to the minors after 76 games in which he compiled a .250 batting average.

Today Hornsby calls him the "most improved ball player in one year's time I have ever seen." Hornsby himself, without knowing it, was one of the reasons for the improvement.

"I worked the thing out in my mind last winter," Bell said. "I came to the conclusion that the thing to do was to change my stance at the plate. So I decided to follow Hornsby's style a little. Not exactly, as Hornsby bats with that quick lunge from far back in the batter's box, but a modification of it."

Back this year, Bell broke into the opening game of the season when injuries disrupted Hornsby's original line-up. He's been in the game every day since and two weeks ago took over the coveted "clean-up" position—fourth in the batting order.

Bell, 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighing 190 pounds, came to the Browns via Texas A. and M. College and Galveston, of the Texas League. He finished the 1934 season with San Antonio. His home is at Belleville, Tex., which his ancestors founded.

Golf Pro, Caddy Killed By Lightning on Course

Indianapolis, July 8 (AP).—Max Schulz, 25, golf professional, and his caddy, Chester Burns, 16, were killed instantly today when they were struck by a bolt of lightning on a fairway of the Willow Brook course.

Schulz and C. C. Robinson were playing the ninth hole when the bolt struck. Robinson was about 50 yards behind Schulz and the Burns boy and his golf club was knocked out of his hand by the shock. Schulz was practicing for the St. Paul (Minn.) Open, to be held later this month.

Bobby Wilson Knocks Out Mays in 7th Round

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westerly, Long Island, N. Y., July 8.—Bobby Wilson, Washington, D. C., welterweight knocked out Eddie Mays, of Hartford, Conn., in the seventh round of a scheduled eight-round battle here tonight. The scrap was furious, Mays going down three times before the final count. Wilson weighed 147, one pound more than Mays.

Olympic Unit Is Still Short $135,000

Los Angeles Club Told to Guarantee Funds for Its Team.

Track Finals May Bring in a Maximum of About $54,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 8.—The most important event on the United States Olympic program today was the race of the Olympic finance committee to raise the $135,000 now necessary to send a full team to Germany next Wednesday.

Obviously worried over the present prospect of making that goal, the committee temporarily stopped looking at the records of its athletes and began looking to their finances.

In desperation the committee today wired the Los Angeles Athletic Club to guarantee part of its water polo team's expenses by Sunday if it wanted the team to go to Germany.

Unless a "substantial part" of the $6,500 is guaranteed by that time, Fred Luehring, chairman of the Olympic swimming committee, said he would name another club which could pay its expenses. Luehring evidently referred to the New York A. C. team, which was beaten in the finals last Sunday, 3-1.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles team is stranded in Chicago, not knowing whether to come East or go back home.

Only through contribution can the committee make up its present deficit. There are three events scheduled this week-end which are expected to boost the fund, the track and field finals at Randalls Island Stadium Saturday and Sunday; the women's swimming finals at Astoria, Long Island, at the same time, and the men's swimming finals at Warwick, R. I., Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

With capacity crowds at all three events each day the committee estimated that the aggregate net receipts would total no more than $54,000. The Randalls Island Stadium seats only 21,400, and will net $38,000 if every ticket is sold Saturday and Sunday.

The track teemed with activity as athletes converged on the stadium for their last practice trials before the meet. While they went through their paces, the last section of concrete was being poured, trees were being planted at the open end of the stadium, and a nurse's home located on the island was being remodeled into a clubhouse for the athletes.

Despite the rapidity with which the stadium was built, athletes seem pleased with the layout. The track is fast, and at present a little rough, but this will be rolled out by Saturday.

Today's receipts amounted to slightly more than $10,000, according to Gustavus T. Kirby, treasurer of the Olympic committee.

Los Angeles Club Official Angered

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 8.—Frank A. Garbutt, president of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, waxed indignant tonight when advised the American Olympic committee was asking the club to raise money to send the L. A. A. C. water polo team to Berlin.

"The committee guaranteed that if we would pay the expenses of our team to final tryouts, where admissions were charged, the winners would then be sent to Berlin for the Olympics," Garbutt said.

Youth Who Fanned 8 Cards Protested

Competing Amateur Team Objects to His Status.

Cleveland, July 8 (AP).—Seventeen-year-old Bob Feller's participation in an exhibition game at League Park Monday in which he fanned eight St. Louis Cardinals, drew a protest today from the manager of a Class A team competing in the same amateur loop in which Feller performs.

A. F. Kaufman, the protestor, said "a player can't compete in amateur baseball if he plays as a professional after July 1 or if he's under contract to a professional club."

In answer, I. S. Rose, manager of the team on which Feller pastimes, denied that the Iowa youth was under contract to the Cleveland Indians. "Anyone who wants to protest can do so as far as we are concerned," he said.

Allison Is Beaten In Dutch Net Play

By the Associated Press.

Noordwijk, Holland, July 8.—Wilmer Allison, American champion, and Gerald Stratford, of San Francisco were eliminated today in the second round of the International Dutch tennis championships.

Allison dropped a five-set decision to Joop Knottenbelt, 6—1, 1—6, 6—0, 4—6, 6—4.

Stratford fell before Tom Hughan, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3.

However, American victories were scored by John Van Ryn and Mrs. Van Ryn, of Philadelphia. Van Ryn vanquished Guy van Zuylen, 8—2, 6—1, 6—0, while his wife conquered Mrs. Marie Joncquiere, 7—5, 6—2.

Tigers Here As Nats Open Home Stay

Buddy Myer May Return to Line-up; Whitehill to Hurl Today.

The Washington Ball Club, yapping at the heels of the second-place Detroit Tigers, today opens a two-week home stand buoyed by the prospect of Capt. Buddy Myer's return to the line-up. The second-place Tigers, in person, will supply the competition.

Hard hit by the absence of Myer, who has been able to participate in only 14 games this season, the Nats expect to regain their second baseman within a week. Myer is rapidly recovering from a stomach ailment that removed him from action early in the season.

Despite the consistently brilliant play of Ossie Bluege, who has been substituting at second base for Myer, Manager Bucky Harris is eager for Myer's return to the line-up. His potent bat, which compiled a .349 average that led all the league's hitters last season, would fit nicely into the Washington line-up.

Myer has recovered sufficiently to be in uniform during the past few days. Washington's regular pitchers were withheld from the exhibition game in Trenton during the recent idle spell and Myer has been taking batting practice each morning.

Bucky Has Problem.

Finding a place for Myer in the batting order may be a problem for Harris, however. All the four top spots are nicely filled by Ben Chapman, Buddy Lewis, Joe Kuhel and Johnny Stone and it is believed that Harris will drop Myer in fifth place ahead of Cecil Travis. Throughout the 1935 season, Myer batted third.

Opening the invasion of Griffith Stadium by the Western clubs are the Detroit Tigers who encounter the Nats today in the first of a three-game series. The Chicago White Sox will follow, to be followed in turn by the Browns and Indians.

In fourth place only a game and a half behind second, and with his team boasting a pace of 11 victories in its last 16 games, Harris envisions a successful home stand that will land the Nats ahead of the second-place Tigers and the third-place Red Sox.

He will send Earl Whitehill to the pitching mound this afternoon. Whitehill, always effective against the Tigers, numbered them among his victims in winning three of his last four starts.

Tommy Bridges, who was withheld from the All-Star game because of a mild illness, has completely recovered and is expected to oppose Whitehill on the mound.

British Open Titlist 50 Years Ago Dies a Pauper

Inveresk, Scotland, July 8 (AP).—David Brown, who won the British Open golf championship 50 years ago at Musselburgh, died today at the age of 75 in a poorhouse 2 miles from the scene of his triumph.

After winning the championship Brown went to the United States where he was one of the first golf professionals. He returned home because of failing health.

Brown won the British crown with an aggregate of 157 in 1886 when the championship was played at 36 holes, half the distance of the modern route.

Wierinck Wins Second Lap of Bicycle Grind

Charleville, France, July 8 (U.P.).—Robert Wierinck, of Belgium, today won the second lap of the annual Bicycle Tour de France. Wierinck covered the 192 kilometers from Lille to this town in 5 hours 32 minutes.

Maurice Archambaud, of France, who was second in yesterday's opening lap from Paris to Lille, moved into the lead in general standings.

Welsh Defeats Guy Cheng in Net Play

Riggs Eliminates Markey in Spring Lake Tournament.

By the Associated Press.

Spring Lake, N. J., July 8.—Fourth-seeded Barney Welsh was the lone Washington representative left in the annual Spring Lake Bathing and Tennis Club Invitation Tournament today as he defeated Guy Cheng, former Chinese Davis Cup player, 6—0, 6—1, while Gardner Mulloy, Eastern Collegiate champion and eighth-seeded, disposed of Hugh J. Lynch, 7—9, 6—1, 6—1, and Robert Riggs eliminated Thomas Markey, 8—6, 8—2.

Frankie Parker, pointing for a return match with Riggs, had the easiest time gaining the round of eight as he defended his three-year possession of the Clifford Hemphill Trophy.

Duquesne Captain.

The top-seeded schoolboy star, who won his first two matches without the loss of a game, turned back George Dunn, of Merion, Pa., captain of the University of Pennsylvania net team, 6—1, 6—4, to enter the quarter-finals.

Sam Gilpin 2d, of Philadelphia, forced to three sets in each of his first two engagements, was extended again this afternoon before he defeated Frank Rericha, of New York City, 0—6, 6—4, 6—4. Wayne Sabin, doubles partner of Riggs, had his share of troubles with Burtz Boulware, of Jacksonville, Fla., winning 6—2, 4—6, 6—4. J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange veteran, who reached the third round Tuesday, rallied to trim Gene Smith, of Berkley, Calif., 6—1, 7—9, 6—1. Hall is seeded No. 3.

Everett-Delaney Bout Is Agreed To Fight Within Ace of Being Called Off Before Parley.

The Buck Everett-Al Delaney heavyweight bout scheduled Monday at Griffith Stadium, came within a long-distance telephone call of being called off last night before rival managers finally agreed on the 10-round route.

While the middle-man, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, tore his wig and moaned in the manner of a hold-up victim, Dave Sonnenberg, Delaney's pilot, suddenly decided 10 rounds was too much fighting for his 20-year-old charge, and demanded that two heats be cut from the bout.

Appraised of this, Jimmy Erwin, Everett's one-man board of strategy, declared that eight rounds would relegate his contender for the world championship to a preliminary boy's status. This went against his grain, and he refused to accept the shorter distance. Thus, Mr. Ahearn was left stewing in the middle. And he was stewing.

Finally Mr. Ahearn long-distanced Sonnenberg, reluctantly offered to tack on 2½ per cent to his fighter's earnings for going 10 rounds—or at least trying to, and saved the day, or the card, for Monday.

No More 'Sell Out' Cries To Precede All-Star Tilt

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 8.—The word sell-out was scratched out of the baseball dictionary today when Ford Frick, happy young National League president, cleaned up the last of the All-Star game details and hustled off to Cincinnati.

Frick, still bubbling over about his team's first All-Star game victory, had little to say about the woeful crowd of 25,534 which left about 18,000 vacant pews in the local National League Park, but other baseball figures predicted that the fans would not be misled, either by press or radio, before next year's game in Washington.

"We'll never yell sell-out again," promised one baseball spokesman. "And we'll have more reserved seats for future All-Star games. It is no wonder the Boston crowd was a flop. For weeks the newspapers and radio have been shouting sell-out and predicting that not even a bleacher ticket would be available at the park on the day of the game.

18,000 Seats.

"And what was the result? Just 18,000 fans, many of whom would have paid any price to get anywhere in the park, were frightened away."

"Just think of the panning we're getting from our 50-cent customers," reminded one of the Boston Bees' office staff. "One of them called up this morning and blasted us for making him get up out of bed at daybreak and rush up here to buy a bleacher seat.

"'I could have done a half day's work, got to the ball park at 1:29 and bought just as good a seat as I got at 9 o'clock,' he complained, and the sad part of it is, he's right."

Frick spent the morning with Bob Quinn, Boston Bees' president and All-Star game host. Both said the conference was devoted to routine matters. Neither would discuss the action taken by the magnates during Monday's joint league meeting. It is understood that a majority in each league opposed the renewal of baseball radio contracts.

Business Brisk.

The checkup on the 25,000 All-Star game rush seats, which were held back until 9 a. m. yesterday, revealed that business was brisk until about 11 a. m.

"Two hours before the game started, we had about 18,000 of them left," explained a ticket seller. "If we were ordered to give them away, we couldn't do it. The only ones that come to the box offices during the last two hours wanted reserved seats and they just laughed when we assured them that they would have no trouble if they purchased a cheaper ticket."

Meanwhile the Boston baseball public was in an ugly mood. Those who attended the All-Star game were indignant over the size of the crowd and were criticizing those who remained away for "blotting" the community's reputation as a top-grade sports center. The absentees refused to accept responsibility and passed it along to the sell-out shouters, who are now slinking about with very red faces.

Detroit Lions Selected for Star Game

Voting for College Stars for Tilt Will Begin on Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 8.—The Detroit Lions, champions of the professional football world, were chosen tonight to battle the Collegiate All-Stars, all-Americans among them, in the third annual charity football game at Soldier Field on the night of September 1.

The game, first of the 1936 gridiron season, will be unique because it will be the first time in connection with any major sports enterprise that the public will be in complete command. The fans of the Nation not only will name the players who will comprise the college squad, but they also will tell the coaches which players they must use as a starting line-up.

Thousands who voted in last year's poll were disappointed to see their choices, Cotton Warburton, of Southern California, and Buzz Borries, of the Navy, left off the starting line-up against the Chicago Bears. For this reason, the rules have been changed and, right or wrong, the public will be right on the starting line-up.

The balloting will start Saturday. The first two weeks will be devoted to the players' poll. As soon as this is completed, the fans will be asked to name a start of four coaches to lead the college squad. Last year the votes reached the staggering total of 8,500,000. Archibald Ward, sports editor of the Tribune and originator of the idea, believes it will exceed the 10,000,000 mark this year. Frank Thomas, of Alabama, won he coaches' poll last fall.

All Managers May Submit Choices

Fans' Choice Assailed as Not Representative of Teams' Strength.

By the United Press.

Boston, July 8.—The American League woke up today to the fact that it had been ganged in the fourth all-star game by the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals. This realization may lead to changes in the rules governing the "dream game," which is fast becoming a nightmare for the baseball officials.

No matter what happens in the game, the squawks are lound and long. The National League lost their first three games, and they complained that the senior loop treated the affair with complete indifference.

Answering these charges, the National League picked the brightest stars from its two top teams—the gashouse gang of St. Louis and those peerless manufacturers of winning streaks, the Chicago Cubs. Led by the Cards and Cubs, the National League ended the American League's supremacy in yesterday's battle, 4 to 3.

Declare Code Violated.

Now the American League is complaining that the National League violated the unwritten rule that the game was supposed to be an all-star contest, in which players from all teams were to see action.

The method of selecting the players of the two teams is likely to be changed next year. The 1936 squads were selected jointly by a fan's vote and the two managers, Charlie Grimm and Joe McCarthy. The fans picked 16 players, and the two managers picked five more at random. The fan's vote wasn't considered representative because five major league cities didn't take part in the balloting.

A move is understood to be on foot to have the eight managers in each league pick the two squads.

Four Cubs, Four Cards.

The players who successfully shared almost all the National League's burden at Braves Field yesterday were the Cubs and Cardinals, bitter ribals in the tense pennant race in their own circuit.

At two stages of the game there was only one player on the field who was not a representative of the Cubs and Cardinals. In contrast, 17 American League players, representing seven clubs, saw action in the game.

Kathlyn Kelley, 16, Here, Won Olympic Berth In 1st Track Meet Outside Her Native County

By Dillon Graham,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Sixteen-year-old Kathlyn Kelley, the baby of the women's Olympic track squad who learned to high jump by hopping over cotton stalks on her dad's farm, won a berth on Uncle Sam's team in her first competition outside her native South Carolina county.

A slender, lanky girl, modest and shy, Kathlyn halted her sight-seeing tour here to talk of her athletic experiences, in the forthcoming Berlin games and the Providence, R. I., trials in which she competed last Saturday.

Pitted against some of the best in the land—after a tiring motor trip from her farm home near Seneca—Kathlyn soared over the bar at 5 feet 1½ inches. Annette Rogers, of Chicago, leaped an inch higher. Kathlyn believes she'll match that hop at Berlin.

A few weeks ago the Olympic games meant nothing to her. She didn't consider herself an athlete, just a girl who could jump and run a little better than the other country kids.

For five years she had run and jumped at her county track meet, winning the high and broad jumps and the 100-yard dash every year. She'd never jumped for height—just enough to win, so she'd have strength left for the dashes.

Curious to see how high she could jup, Julian Davis, superintendent of her Keowee Consolidated Rural School, promised her he would ask the Greenville papers to print her picture if she cleared the bar at 5 feet.

She jumped 5 feet 2 inches.

When Greenville sport writers informed Davis that her jumping revealed outstanding ability, funds were obtained to send her to Providence. Big time competition, hundreds of entrants, was all new to Kathlyn.

She tied with another girl for third place. Her rival wanted to flip a coin for the position and medal. But not Kathlyn. She told officials if she couldn't jump for it she didn't want the medal.

She won it, and was named to the team.

Kathlyn, however, has doubts.

"Annette Rogers is older and has had the benefit of training. She's better than me. I think I can jump as high as she did at Providence, but she'll do better when she's pressed at Berlin," she said. "I feel that maybe I will be able to give them some real competition in a couple of years of training."

The blonde is 5 feet 9½ inches tall and weighs 125 pounds.

Silvery Cloud's Thrilling Stretch Run Wins at Charles Town

Fred Alva 2d, Jakovia Is Third

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 8.—Silvery Cloud, a young gray mare, answered the urge of Eddie Smith, Washington jockey, to gather the necessary momentum that won the Madeline Ensign Purse, feature event of an eight-race program here today. In trouble and apparently beaten as the field went into the clubhouse turn, Silvery Cloud emerged to wear down the leaders and then hold Fred Alva safe in the final drive. Third money in the field of seven went to Jakovia.

Silvery Cloud was winning her second race in a row and her sixth purse of the meeting. She was operating in the colors of young Claud Feltner, of the Berryville Feltners. She was only luke-warm in the betting ring and supplied a $10.20. mutuel.

The big disappointment of the race was the showing of Genie Palatine. The daughter of Genie ran in the role of a favorite and performed like a 100-1 shot. She put on a show going to the post that was worth the price of admission. She stood like a statue, bucked against the fence and staged her own private parade to the post.

The test was over the 7-furlong course and the winner was clocked in 1:25 4-5, two-fifths of a seconds off the track record held by Wise Sister.

The race was roughly run, principally due to the bad judgment of Jockey B. Myres. He was aboard McKell and bumped horses causing a jam in which Silvery Cloud and Fred Alva were the chief sufferers. Myres learned his fate when he returned to weigh out. He was promptly suspended for the remainder of the meeting.

Dulaney Purse.

The Ben Dulaney Purse, also at 7 furlongs, went to Goantell, owned by C. E. George, Washington hotel man. Ridden by Jockey G. Terman. Ridden by Jocked G. Terhune, he came through on the rail to Sea Finn was third. The winner was well played at a $6.60 mutuel.

Ideal racing weather and good programs served to lure some 5,000 customers to the plant. Easter Herald and Jack Low teamed to bring a $60.40 mutuel in the daily double.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL BROOM, $10.60, $8.20, $4.40; ISLE O' JOY, $7.80, $4.80; HEART PLAY, $5.40.

ROYAL BROOM, steadied along while running in tight quarters to the far turn, came between horses to enter contention in the early stretch and wore down ISLE O' JOY in the concluding strides. The latter, first to begin, opened a good lead leaving the backstretch, saved ground along the rail and just failed to last. HEART PLAY raced greenly and came with a belated rush in the closing sixteenth after being forwardly placed. SKEABOY forced the early pace and held on gamely. WORTHFUL saved ground entering the stretch and closed full of run. IUKA had early speed.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:14. Winner, Mrs. C. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EASTER HERALD, $13.60, $6.40, $6.20; VANVOLA, $6.00, $4.40; LADY BUCK, $8.00.

EASTER HERALD, first to break, was eased back off the pace, moved up on the outside to take command at the swing for the stretch and held VANVOLA safe in the late stages. VANVOLA, rushed to the top at once, continued gamely when displaced. LADY BUCK, sprinted into contention on the inside, came willingly at the end. SCOUT BRIGADE went evenly.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:45. Winner, Mrs. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK LOW, $10.40, $5.00, $3.80; PETEE LAD, $3.40, $3.00; MISS TRYCOM, $6.20.

JACK LOW, closest in pursuit of MISS TRYCOM'S pace from the start, came through on the inside entering the stretch and under hard riding held away thereafter. PETEE LAD gained sharply along the rail when put to a drive and was going gamely at the end. MISS TRYCOM set the pace and tired. CANYONE was slightly bothered by THE BARD at the first turn and gained with a rush in the late stretch.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $60.40.

FLAGEOLET	(J. Hernandez)	106	4	8	8	8	8	8	15.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG TONEY, $18.20, $7.40, $4.00; BROWN HAT, $5.40, $4.00; WILD ROSEBUD, $3.00.

BIG TONEY sprinted to the front at once, was rated along until challenged by BROWN HAT entering the stretch, then drew out under strong handling. BROWN HAT, shuffled back at the first turn, gained sharply leaving the backstretch, but hung in the final furlong. WILD ROSEBUD faltered after chasing BIG TONEY. OUR ROSE went well for a half. The others were outrun.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Ben Dulaney. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:41. Winner, C. E. George's b. m. (5), by Runantell—Miss Vaal. Trained by A. Gibson. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:25 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOANTELL, $6.60, $3.80, $3.00; SKY RIDE, $4.00, $2.80; SEA FINN, $3.20.

GOANTELL, guided along the rail after being shuffled back at the break, gained sharply on the inside entering the stretch and wore down SKY RIDE. The latter, sent to the front under hustling tactics after swerving at the break, shook off SEA FINN in the early stretch, but could not resist the winner. SEA FINN gained sharply along the backstretch, took command briefly entering the stretch, but faltered.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:10. Off at 5:14. Winner, Claud Feltner's gr. f. (4), by Nedlac—Sunny Cloud. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:25 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVERY CLOUD, $10.20, $4.20, $3.00; FRED ALVA, $17.40, $7.60; JAKOVIA, $4.20.

SILVER CLOUD, steadied along while running in close quarters to the backstretch, went to the outside for racing room, shook off MCKELL at the far turn and held FRED ALVA safe in the final drive. FRED ALVA, forced to pull up going to the first turn when caught in a jam, reached contention with a rush along the backstretch and finished willingly under a whipping drive. POSTPONEMENT went evenly. GENIE PALATINE, fractious going to the post, showed a dull effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:43. Off at 5:45. Winner, L. L. Westmoreland's b. g. (6), by Balgneur—Centime. Trained by W. C. Westmoreland. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NO MISTAKE, $4.60, $3.40, $3.00; LUCULENT, $10.60, $5.80; NEVER IDOL, $6.20.

NO MISTAKE overcame trouble in the first half to swing to the outside, circle the leaders and easily dispose of LUCULENT. The latter was rushed to the front at once, shook off SKIMALONG and continued gamely, but was unable to resist the winner. NEVER IDOL, lacking early speed, came with a rush at the end. PENANG lugged in throughout the running.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:13. Off at 6:14. Winner, A. S. Hewitt's b. g. (5), by Lucullite—Delia. Trained by P. C. Randolph. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:47 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUCID, $14.00, $6.20, $4.00; DR. JILLSON, $9.20, $7.00; GOLD STREAK, $3.40.

LUCID, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, challenged DR. JILLSON leaving the backstretch and gradually wore him down. DR. JILLSON, closest to the early pace of WISE CARMEN, forged to the front entering the backstretch, but fought it out willingly. GOLD STREAK came from far back. BENDROMEL was squeezed back at the break.

At the Post . . .

Charles Town Race Track, July 8.

Dear Al:

Egeon was scratched out of the seventh race today because she broke away from her handlers this morning and ran 3 miles before deciding to trot off to the stable. This was considered enough action for one day. The horse Tuleyries Wand has been barred until the track vet says she is ready to race. Jockey Eddie Smith, who rode four winners last Saturday when his mother visited the track, failed to get home in front yesterday when Mrs. Smith again came to the course. Jockey L. Machado was fined $50, almost the equivalent of a life sentence here, for rough riding in the second race. He was warned that his license would be revoked if he repeated the offense. J. Hernandez got the same medicine for cutting across the field at the start of the Ben Dulaney Purse. The concessionaire sent up two cases of coke today. Bob Davis, popular dining car steward on the B. & O. special, entertained his family at the track today. He didn't have the daily-double—for a change.

BILL.

First Race—The Waugh entry seems to have a strong grip on this purse. Both Justa Gal and Justa Town will be at home in this company. Max B raced greenly last out but showed a good effort. Rocky Mount is speedy and dangerous.

Second Race—Adriatic appears best in this field. Was forced to race along the rail in the heaviest going last out. Likes this route. Sea Saga and Slieve's Pride figure to get into the money.

Third Race—Dressmaker. has worked well and meets a mediocre field here. Gets in light and I see no reason for mistakes. Black Sweep probably needs mud but is fit and may upset the dope here. Cantide probably would take it all if sent postward.

Fourth Race—May Wales, a tip last out, ran a fair race. May have needed that race and I'm going to string along. Holland is as sharp as that last. Pretty Lass for the show.

Fifth Race—Nay Nay will take this if in action. Lady Windsor worked well between races today and will be hard to beat. Red Label and Bromide to take care of the others.

Sixth Race—Coventry Queen, with Palumbo up, probably will do a lot of running in this company. Porphyry ran a neat second last out. Scotty's Bride could take it all.

Seventh Race—Vennie H., gets the call here. Won at a shorter route and is fit. Landsman would be dangerous if he gets in. Aufoin and Huppy hold some chance.

Best bet—Adriatic.

2—Canteret, Adriatic, Nature's Dream.
3—Black Sweep, Cantide, Dressmaker.
4—Mary Wales, Holland, Beau Bay.
5—Lady Windsor, Nay Nay, Bromide.
6—Coventry Queen, Porphyry, Helen Bab.
7—Thunderlee, Vennie H., Mount Daisy.
Best bet—Lady Windsor.

—Clocker Mike.

Farrell and Miss Bonthron Win Maryland Mixed Links Title

Baltimoreans Shoot a Net 66 Score

Billy Dettweiler Has Ace; Mrs. Keefer, Greene Second With 68.

By Dave Herman.

Johnny Farrell, the 17-year-old freckle-faced golfer from Friends High School, Baltimore, and Miss Elizabeth Bonthron, a 25-year-old dietician at a high school in the same city, came in with the gathering dusk yesterday at Manor's course to win the Maryland State mixed two-ball championship with a brilliant net of 66.

During a day which offered a record field of 160 participants many thrills, chief of which was a hole-in-one by young Billy Dettweiler, of Congressional; Farrell, namesake of the former National Open king, and Miss Bothron, who never has won a tournament of importance before, came through with a fine gross of 38-43—81, despite a weird 8 on the par 4 tenth.

Beat Out Capital Pair.

Representing the Hillendale Country Club, they snatched the big prize from Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer, of Chevy Chase, and Hickman Greene, of Manor, just when Association Secretary Emmet Gary was about to declare the Washington pair the winners.

Mrs. Keefer and Greene, finishing four hours ahead of the Baltimore team, racked up a 76-8—68, which looked good enough to stand up until Master Farrell, and Miss Bonthron made their remarkable finish.

The Baltimoreans had a handicap allowance of 15, made possible by Farrell's nine rating and Miss Bonthron's 20. One half of their total handicap was deducted.

Dettweiler, playing with pretty Mary Jane Lightbrown, of Congressional, holed out a seven iron shot on the 125-yard eleventh, the ball dropping five feet from the hole and trickling in. It was his first ace. It enabled Billy and his partner to win third low net prize with an 82-13—69.

Card Wins Low Gross.

Low gross honors went to the team of Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, Md., District and Middle Atlantic golf queen, and Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood who registered a great 36-39—75.

Second low gross resulted in a tie between the teams of Mrs. C. B. Hill and Russ Hollebaugh, of Kenwood, and Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, of Congressional, and Bill Harvey, of Manor. Each pair had a 77.

Other low net prize winners were Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Trezise, of Beaver Dam, 89-19—70; Dr. and Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Manor, 80-10—70; Mrs. J. D. Hospilhorn and J. E. Totman, of Baltimore, 96-26—70.

High Dive Title Captured by Ruth Jump

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 8.—Ruth Jump, 16-year-old Los Angeles girl, succeeded Mrs. Dorothy Poynton Hill as national high platform diving champion in competition at the Astoria Park pool today. Mrs. Hill, who is training exclusively for the Olympic tryouts in the same pool this week-end, did not defend.

Competition among the four competitors was exceptionally close, with Miss Jump winning with 82.19 points to 81.11 scored by 13-year-old Ruth Hoerger, of Miami. Cornelia Gilissen, New York, diver from the Women's Swimming Association, was third, and Helen Howard, also of New York, fourth.

Miss Jump, pupil of Mrs. Aileen Allen, Los Angeles A. C. coach and herself a former champion, has been platform diving for only a little over a year, but performed like a veteran to nose out Miss Hoerger, who was runner-up to Mrs. Hill last year.

Plain Back Dive.

The Los Angeles girl trailed Miss Hoerger on the first three compulsory dives but won the lay-out back somersault from the 5-meter board by a large margin. She then executed a spectacular running two and a half somersault from the 8-meter board as the first of her four optionals and scored well in the remainder to finish slightly in the lead.

Miss Hoerger's best effort was a difficult plain back dive from the 8-meter board, which earned her the highest marks of the day from the roster of judges, which included the former Georgia Coleman.

Miss Gilissen, representing the Women's Swimming Association of New York, was close behind with 80.47 points but Mrs. Howard was outclassed, scoring only 66.33.

These four, plus Mrs. Hill, Ruth Nurmi of Los Angeles and several others, will compete in the Olympic tryouts Sunday.

Edith Estabrooks Gains Semifinals

Detroit, July 8 (AP).—Edith Estabrooks, the 15-year-old golfer from Dubuque, Iowa, shot her way into the semifinals of the Girls' Western Junior Open tournament under a blazing sun today with an impressive 7 and 5 victory over Harriet Randall, of Indianapolis.

Miss Estabrooks will meet Eleanor Dudley, defending champion from Chicago, in the semifinal round Thursday. Miss Dudley defeated Billie McIntire, of Topeka, Kans., today, 5 and 3.

Hope Seignious, Detroit's only representative in the meet, played brilliantly today to turn back Hilda Livengood, of Danville, Ill., 7 and 6.

Janet Shock, Dayton City and district women's champion, had a hard fight to defeat Betty Mackemer, of Peoria, Ill., 2 up.

Ivan Managoff To Face Dusek Tonight

With earnest Ernie Dusek, a junior partner in the firm of Dusek, Dusek & Dusek, Inc., wrestlers, occupying the featured spot jointly with Master Ivan Managoff, the lad with the Russian dressing monicker, wrestling will be resumed tonight at Griffith Stadium promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

But, while the above pair occupy starring roles, not a little of the fans' interest will center on the Italian personage of Gino Garbaldi, the fiery veteran who will work in company with Hank Barber, of Newark.

Many moons of varied proportions have looked down on the stadium since Gino last performed here, but he is well remembered by those who witnessed his blood-curdling (if your blood was in that condition) matches with un-gorgeous George Zaharias and Rudy Dusek, senior member of the firm of Dusek, Dusek, Dusek & Dusek, Inc. Gino, indeed, is headed for a warm reception, from the fans, at least, if not from Mr. Barber.

The Managoff mangle-fest has taken on a revenge motif, which should add immeasurably to the evening's entertainment. It seems that Mr. Managoff tossed Emil Dusek, another member of Dusek, Dusek, etc., etc., Inc., in a bout here two weeks ago, and it appears that he'll have to wrestle the whole firm of Dusek, Dusek, etc., etc., Inc., until one throws him and avenges the slur on the family escutcheon.

Other 30-minute attractions packing punch and promise (according to a reliable source) are Jack Donovan vs. Eli Fischer; Ed Worth vs. Cliff Olson, and Jim Coffield vs. Frank Judson.

Prince Georges, Hecht Play 7-Inning, 3 to 3 Tie

Prince Georges A. A. and the Hecht Co. yesterday tangled in a seven-inning, nine-hit, 3-3 tie.

Although Finn for the Prince Georges team allowed only five hits, and his rival, Hoskins, but four, three of the total were homers.

Tony Burruto Finds Nursing a Sandlot Team Full of Headaches and Disappointments

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Tony Burruto, the bald barber of E street, goes about his business of separating perspiring customers from surplus tufts of hair with a resigned air of sadness these days, for fickle Dame Fortune has lost her smile for him and is throwing only strikes at his unsuspecting pate.

Business is good—even brisk, The little shop that appears to have been squeezed into its place with a gigantic shoe horn is seldom empty, and Tony is disposing his triple X strength hair tonic (it's good for everything but the baby) in large quantities at two bits a throw. But Tony is sad, woe-begone, downcast and blue. It's getting so he eats only four meals a day.

Tony's liver is acting up primarily because his champion Blue Flame Valet nine, which won the National City League flag last season, is in grave danger of losing its hard-won crown. The team failed to win the first-half pennant by the margin of one of Tony's de luxe shaves (20 cents on week days). It had tied for second—apparently. We say apparently, for a few days later the league president tossed out the team's last victory, gave the game to the defeated team and sort of blew the Blue Flames out—out of second place.

So Tony's spirits are down, even deeper in the spirits league than his ball club is in the baseball league. But he has only himself to blame.

The buxom barber, who lost a dollar betting Alexandria was the capital of Virginia, is the victim of a queer malady which seems to afflict the vast majority of sandlot baseball magnates. He wants to sign every ball player he meets, if only to keep the opposition from getting them.

At the start of the current campaign the Blue Flames resembled a reincarnation of the 1927 Yankees, or one of the old St. Joseph's A. C. clubs. Tony himself predicted his men would walk in with the flag. They walked in but with the same disastrous results of a cherubic choir boy walking through a tough neighborhood on a dark night.

Tony and his boys resembled the old woman in the shoe with her prolific off-spring, but the ugly head of dissension reared itself within his happy domicile and soon it was all he could do to coax and bribe a full nine into uniform for weekly combat. Then came that unhappy day when only eight reported for work and the ball-playing barber was obliged to hie his 215 pounds out among the daisies of rightfield to complete the team.

He played twice, the second time, alas, without permission of the opposing team. The game was protested and although the Blue Flames won it was awarded to the defeated team, and on a ruling that was penned by fate itself. It seems that Tony overlooked a little matter of affixing his own signature to a player's contract.

But Tony tells one on Bill Flester, a rival manager, which tops any of the barber's experiences. Bill took a certain eccentric pitcher to Front Royal for an important game. There were only nine players in the party. But when the game was called Bill had only eight, for out on the mound pitching for Front Royal was Flester's eccentric hurler.

The opposition had won him over with a $5 bill and new pair of pants.

Middies to Get 6 Trips With Grid Team

Yeates Is Elected Captain of Academy Crew for 1937 Season.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., July 8.—The midshipmen at the Naval Academy will make six trips away from the institution this fall to cheer the Navy football team, under a leave order issued today by Capt. Forde A. Todd, acting superintendent.

Baltimoreans and Philadelphians will see the parade of the blue uniformed regiment twice each during the season. The midshipmen also will visit Princeton, N. J., and Cambridge, Mass.

The first trip to Baltimore will be on October 17 when the Navy team meets Yale in the Baltimore stadium. The regiment will return to the same field on November 7 for the Navy-Notre Dame game.

To Go to Princeton.

On October 24 the midshipmen will attend the Navy-Princeton game at Princeton. The following Saturday they will visit Philadelphia to watch the Navy-Pensylvania game. They will make their second trip to the Quaker City on November 28 for the Army-Navy classic in the municipal stadium.

On November 14 the midshipmen will be in the cheering section at Cambridge for the Navy-Harvard game.

Commander John H. Brown, graduate manager of athletics at the Academy, today announced the election of Midshipman A. B. Yeates, jr., of Norfolk, Va., as captain of the Navy crew for the 1937 season. Midshipman W. J. Tate, jr., of Baltimore, will be the crew manager.

Yeates rows the No. 5 oar in the varsity shell. He was shifted to the seat this spring from the 1935 freshman boat. Both Yeates and Tate are members of the new second (junior) class at the Academy. The usual policy is to name a first class man (senior) captain of the crew. This year after graduation the remaining members of the varsity crew were all members of the second class.

McGowan Hurls No-Hit Ball as Mohawks Win

While his mates were banging hits all over the place to beat Bennings, 17-2, John McGowan, for the Mohawks, hurled a no-hit game to help boost the team into a first place tie in the Columbian league. D. Smith with two homers and two singles, did more than his bit for the winners.

Sutter, Hines Advance In Mid-Dixie Net Play

Spartanburg, S. C. July 8 (U.P.).—Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, Southern and intercollegiate champion, and Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., national ranker No. 9, led the field today into the quarter finals of the mid-Dixie tennis championships.

Cardinals Win, 5-to-4.

Holding the Ossie Bluege Peewees to five measly hits, Lefty Duckett, Cardinal ace, led his team to a 5-to-4 10-inning victory and first place in the East Washington League.

For the Cardinals, it was their third straight peewee league victory.

Orioles 9, Hornets 2.

The Orioles beat the Hornets, 9-2, yesterday for their second straight victory. Green's hurling and hitting featured the game.

DiMaggio

McCarthy Scoffs At Claim Joe's Morale Broken.

By Paul Mickelson,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, July 8.—Down the sports trail:

Roasted Joe . . . Joe McCarthy, carefree from criticism all season as his Yankees make the American League race a one-horse walkover, was roasted today for allowing Rookie Joe DiMaggio to stay in yesterday's all-star game for a full nine-inning flop. Many believe Marse Joe should have pulled his star rookie to save his spirit. Some even have a hunch that the Yankees, held to a batting average of .100 by the National Leaguers, may lose a lot of their drive from now on and have a tough time winning their pennant.

But McCarthy, a man who became one of baseball's most successful figures by acting almost according to the dictates of his heart, today defended his position and merely chuckled over the thoughts of the second-guessers who fear for his Yankees.

"I'd do the same thing all over again," said the Yankee pilot. "Joe just had a bad day, and, anyway, he was the only right fielder I had on my squad. I used every player I had except Rollie Hemsley. Didn't get a chance to use him. DiMaggio discouraged? Don't make me laugh? He just had one of those days. If he let anything like that worry him, why he just wouldn't belong, that's all."

Yet, pitchers from rival leagues do plenty of talking among themselves when they meet on pullman trains, and there is some danger that Joe may tumble in the same spot that another famous Joe—Louis—fell when Max Schmeling kayoed him. Max demonstrated to a startled fight world that Louis was a sucker for a sucker punch—an elementary right. Dizzy Dean, Carl Hubbell and Lazy Lon Warneke made Der Mag look bad with fast, low ones inside.

Give and take . . . Tom Yawkey can give it (ask Connie Mac), but he can take it, too. His Boston Red flops, most of them accused of plain laziness, probably try Yawkey's soul, but he smiles off the jibes and blissfully talks about 1937, '38 and '39.

"I know what you want to talk about," he challenged when we approached him. "You want to hear about the Chinese situation. Nope. I'm not dissatisfied with the team or the management. If I care to spend my money on baseball, that's my business. I'm getting a kick out of it and have no regrets."

Yawkey is getting a high rate of interest for his investment, however. His gold-plated boys, despite their woes, are packing 'em in Fenway and other league parks.

Comeback . . . the greatest comeback of the year is being made, not by Lefty Grove and other veterans, but by Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of organized baseball. The gray-thatched judge, still stern and relentless in his opinions, but a trifle more mellow than his early days at the dictator's helm, is riding on his highest wave of popularity among club owners and players.

The general swing toward the farm system is one important factor in the commissioner's increasing popularity. When only the St. Louis Cardinals and Browns owned farms, the old judge fought them and they battled back, the Browns even going to court over a minor leaguer. Now most of the majors have their farms and they look to the judge to keep order in baseball's house with a firm, guiding hand.

Another Judge . . . Judge W. G. Bramham—also is riding high as the "Judge Landis of the minors." When he took over the job at West Baden, Ind., in the fall of 1933, minor league prospects were so low that only the three Class AA leagues were sure starters for 1934. This year 26 circuits are going strong.

"The reason," explained Judge Bramham, "is that we've installed business methods in minor league baseball. Every club now has to prove it has enough money to operate and pay players' wages. We aren't operating out of the cracker barrel any more."

Game Canceled.

Because the team is in the Capital City League, White Haven A. C. has canceled its Sunday game with the Dickerson, Md., nine. The White Haven team will practice Saturday afternoon on the Monument Grounds, Diamond No. 1.

Acreage Over Last Year But Under 5-Year Level

By the Associated Press.

Reporting an increase in cotton planting for all States except Florida, the Federal crop reporting board yesterday estimated the area in cultivation July 1 at 30,621,000 acres.

This was an increase of 9.8 per cent above the 27,888,000 acres on July 1 last year, but was 26.1 per cent under the average for the five years 1928-32. Acreage in cultivation July 1, 1934, totaled 27,860,000, in 1933 it was 40,248,000, and the average from 1928 to 1932 was 41,424,000.

The greatest increase was reported west of the Mississippi River. An increase of 12 per cent was shown for Texas, largest producing State, and 14 per cent for Arkansas. Increases east of the river ranged from 3 to 9 per cent.

The largest proportional increases were reported for the irrigated areas of the Far West, California showing an expansion of 68 per cent, Arizona, 24 per cent, and New Mexico, 18 per cent above last year.

The Federal board will make its first estimate on production this year on August 8.

Washington Loan Adds To Surplus, Votes 2%

At the regular monthly meeting of the directors of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., yesterday, a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent was declared on stock of the company payable August 1 to stockholders of record July 22. Books remain closed for the transfer of stock from July 23 to August 1, inclusive.

At the same meeting, the directors authorized the transfer to surplus of $100,000, making the earned surplus $1,900,000.

Bethlehem Steel Orders.

Bethlehem, Pa., July 8 (AP).—Bethlehem Steel Corporation has received an order for 4,800 tons of structural steel from New York City for its West Side elevated highway. It also received contracts for 3,200 tons of structural shapes from Sioux City, Iowa, and 3,000 tons from Hawaii.

Salaries Cut 10% By Big Shoe Firm

Endicott, N. Y., July 8 (AP).—The Endicott-Johnson Corporation, employing 19,000 shoe workers, announced today a 10 per cent reduction for salaried employes, effective August 1. An official statement said:

"Due to conditions over which we have no control we are forced to make a horizontal reduction of all salaried workers. The total collapse of NRA has been a hard blow for us to meet and maintain liberal wage scales for medicine and good salaries.

"As usual, beginning with the top of the list, all salaries large or small will suffer first a reduction of 10 per cent. We have avoided this as long as possible. We sincerely regret the necessity.

"We shall maintain free medicine as long as possible. We shall continue present wages as long as possible. We are taking the highest paid and more privileged workers first in our effort to meet competition and secure our share of the business."

Steel Production 33% Over Last Year

New York, July 7 (AP).—Steel ingot production during the first half of the year showed a gain of nearly 33 per cent over output for the first half of 1935, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported today.

At 21,326,335 gross tons, it was the largest half-year output since the first half of 1930, when 23,578,619 gross tons were turned out. For the like period of 1935 the total was 16,042,651 tons.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Gain Moderately; Wheat Declines After Early Advance; Bonds Firm.

Stocks improved a little less in active trading, the turnover falling to less than 900,000 shares. Drought news was uncertain, but on the whole less disturbing. Bonds also did better. Grains ran into some profit taking. September wheat futures at Chicago closed 3/4 of a cent lower at 105 1/8 cents a bushel.

Markets were largely under the influence of crop news. High temperatures and lack of mosture continued in the Northwest and many other parts of the country, with a threat of further serious crop damage, although speculators realize that rains still could make a tremendous difference in the yield of wheat, corn, hay and the minor farm produce. Some grains again went up to the limit of the day's trading, and prices for most agricultural products were strong.

Buying spread wider in cotton, based on a Government estimate of smaller acreage planted than expected by the trade. Futures went to 13 cents for the first time in about two years. Looking beyond the immediate effect on commodity markets of dry weather, the situation is one which is bound to work unfavorable in the general economic recovery. Crop damage this year may not be sufficient to bring on another depression, nor to stop the recovery now under way, but already it has become a hindrance.

On Wrong Kroad.

It will be granted that, had nature been more generous with rain, the position at this time might have been satisfactory enough for those resigned to see large doles pour out of the Treasury to the farmers occupying strategic political positions. However, for years the Government has been trying dangerous experiments, based on unsound economics and involving unwarranted risks. The policy of paying farmers to curtail planting of grain and breeding of livestock and of hiring the cotton planters to reduce their acreage was, at its best, an expensive thing for the taxpayer and consumer.

We may soon see it at its worst, which may mean actual shortage of foodstuffs, or at any rate such high prices and scant supply as to reduce farm income at the same time that the higher prices will increase imports, cut down exports and greatly lift the cost of living and thereby reduce real wages and chip off consumption of all classes of goods. We have been on the wrong road for some time; nature is merely giving us a shove.

Midweek trade news outside the drought area was favorable. The steel trade reviews called attention to the fact that steel production in the first half was a third greater than last year and the highest since 1930. That also is the experience of the motor industry. General Motors, the leading maker, reported today a gain of a third over last year in sales and the highest total in the six months for several years.

Transportation last week made a spurt. Freight car loadings, according to reports of leading carriers, fell about 7 per cent from the level of a week previous because of the holiday but climbed 39 per cent above the corresponding week of a year ago. That big jump probably was the result of more than ordinary improvement in movement of goods. Doubtless a good deal of freight which had been held back in hope of removal of surcharges began to move, and along with it some extra carriage for account of drought relief.

Steels Recover.

In stocks the most favorable development was the recovery at long last in the steel shares. Perhaps the dog-and-cat fight developing among the leaders of the labor unions encouraged the market to think that the movement to precipitate a strike in the steel industry by forcing unionization upon the companies might have less momentum than press accounts have suggested. At any rate, the steel issues moved up from fractions to 2 points. Youngstown was buoyant. Weheling Steel preferred broke 6 points, but the common worked higher.

Rail shares managed to gain a little, including the carriers serving the drought areas. Speculators usually turn now and then on the idea that any movement goes too far. Chesapeake and Norfolk sold at new high prices. Standards led the oils into better price territory. California rose a point. Continental was popular. Texas was a shade easier.

Farm implements sagged in the early trading, but recovered. Motors were mixed, with General Motors hardening. Foods were heavier on the prospect for smaller consumption on higher prices. Little change in price took place among tobaccos, chemicals, rubbers and merchants. Most of the metals advanced. Consolidated Edison continued its rise in a mixed utility market.

Quarterly Reports.

A few investment trusts have published second quarter reports. No statement from a first-class industrial corporation has yet been published. Alaska Juneau today gave estimated figures for net earnings, before depreciation, depletion and taxes, as it usually does shortly after the first of each month. Within the next few days a number of regular reports are expected. Bulls are counting upon them to give the market a little fillip.

Non-Liquid.

In its June 30 statement the First National Bank of Englewood, Chicago, long a holdout against joining the FDIC and captained by J. M. (100 per cent) Nichols, springs something new in the bank statement line. It divides its statement into "liquid assets," "non-liquid assets" and "liabilities." The liquid assets, comprised solely of cash and Government securities, total $6,021,915, exceeding total deposits, which amount to $5,822,016. Among the "non-liquid" assets are the bank's building, valued at $10; its stock in its affiliated safe deposit company, carried at $1, and its stock in the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, listed at 10 cents.

General Motors.

General Motors at noon reported its June sales. They were only slightly below May, although the seasonal downturn is usually marked, and were 20 per cent higher than a year ago. Sales to dealers in this country and overseas shipments for the first six months totaled 1,170,168, an increase over the same period last year of about 34 per cent. The total set up a record for the company. The market is talking an extra dividend at the August meeting, but some usually well-informed people do not look for any action until the autumn.

New York, July 8 (AP).—The Texas Co. today announced it is installing additonal equipment in its Paducha, Tex., refinery which, when completed, will double its capacity from 5,000 to 10,000 barrels a day.

The company also will build a pipe line from the plant to the electric power station of West Texas Utilities Co., near Quanah, to supply the latter with residue for fuel.

Canadian Rain Washes Down Wheat Advance

Final Hour Sales Break Prices After Rise of 2 1/4 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 8.—Conquered for the time being, friends of higher wheat prices beat a hasty retreat late today on news that rainfall areas in Canada were spreading. Tumbles of wheat values near the end of the day, with Canada reporting instances of torrential downpours, went in some cases fully 2 cents a bushel under yesterday's final quotations.

The break followed overnight advances of 2 1/4 cents, based largely on belief by many traders that reactions had put the market in a position where conservative purchases were again in order. Corn jumped up the limit, 4 cents, because of unabated drought in the corn belt, but finally succumbed more or less to wheat weakness.

Wheat closed nervous, 1 1/2 cents lower to 1/8 higher compared with yesterday's finish, July 1.05 3/4, September 1.05 1/8@1.05 1/4, December 1.05 5/8@1.05 3/4; corn at 3/8 decline to 3/4 gain, July 81 1/8@82, September 79 1/4@80, December 73 3/8@73 1/2, oats 5/8 off to 3/8 up, September 37 1/8@37 1/4, and rye showing 5/8@1 1/4 loss. The outcome in provisions ranged from 10 cents setback to 5 cents advance.

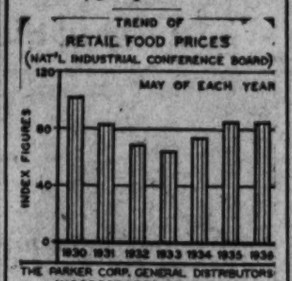
Bell System Gains 28,000 Telephones

New York, July 8 (AP).—In contrast with the trend a year ago, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported today an increase of 28,000 telephones in use in the Bell system in June compared with May. In June, 1935, there was a decrease of 8,300.

At the end of June there were 14,230,000 telephones in service against 13,579,000 a year ago.

Retail Food Prices 32% Up From Low



Boston, Mass., July 8.—Retail food prices are about what they were a year ago. Compared with 1933, however, retail food prices have increased 32 per cent, although they are still 23 per cent lower than in May, 1926, a normal year.

Power Output Sets Another New High

New York, July 8 (AP).—The Associated Press index of electric power production with 1929-30 taken as 100 advanced for the week ended July 4 to 111.7, a new high for all time. In the previous week the index stood at 111.2 and 99.3 a year earlier.

The range for recent years follows:

Low	102.0	94.1	91.9	80.2

Due to the Independence Day holiday falling on Saturday this year, compared with Thursday in 1935, the Edison Electric Institute announced it found it necessary to estimate the weekly output for the week ending July 3, which it placed at 1,940,000,000 kilowatt-hours, which would compare with actual production of 2,029,639,000 kilowatt-hours in the preceding week.

A Rockefeller Forms Banking Firm in 'Street'

Avery, Son of Percy, Joins Schroder in New Investment House.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 8.—A scion of the Rockefeller family moved today into the Wall Street spot light as a co-founder of a new investment banking firm. With the formation of Schroder, Rockefeller & Co., Avery Rockefeller, youthful son of the late Percy A. Rockefeller, connects the famous name with another important sphere of Wall Street finance.

Rockefeller, it was announced, is one of the principal stockholders of the new concern, to act as underwriter of capital issues and to engage in a general securities business. The other important stockholders is the international banking firm of J. Henry Schroder & Co., of London, with which Avery Rockefeller has been identified since 1928, both abroad and in the firm's New York office.

A grandson of William Rockefeller, who was the younger brother of John D., senior, Avery Rockefeller turned to banking several years ago as if moved to carry on the Rockefeller tradition. Early in the century his grandfather rated as the dominant figure in the so-called Rockefeller banks, of which National City was the spearhead.

In recent years the balance of power in banking shifted to John D. Rockefeller, jr., although the son of John D., sr., has carried few titles suggestive of his control of great holdings of Chase National and certain other important institutions which were merged into the Chase.

Rayon Firm Expansion Will Cost $2,800,000

Norfolk, Va., July 8 (AP).—The Tubize Chatillon Corporation will ask stockholders approval for an expansion program calling for the expenditure of "approximately $2,800,000 on its plants here and at Rome, Ga.

The plan, as outlined in an open letter to stockholders by Roland L. Taylor, chairman of the board, calls for the addition of another unit to the viscose plant at Rome and the revamping of equipment in the present mill there.

Roper Reports June Business At 3-Year Peak

National Income for 1935 Put at 53 Billion; Was 81 Billion in '29.

By the Associated Press.

Basing his statement on semi-annual reports from the several branches of the Commerce Department, Secretary Roper said yesterday that June business "reached the highest point since March, 1933."

The Commerce head said that "broad improvement" of the last six months "at this time seems to point to sustained momentum throughout the year."

Roper said that national income for 1935, on which tabulations have just been completed, reached $53,000,000,000. He said it had dropped from $81,000,000,000 to $39,530,000,000 from 1929 to 1932.

Present factors indicate a rise "of perhaps 10 per cent" this year over 1935, Roper said.

The Secretary said 6,000,000 more persons were employed now than at the time of "the depression low of early 1933."

Other factors in the advance, he said, were increased automobile production, a six-year peak during June in steel production, all-time records in power production and consumption and an increase in farm purchasing power.

Roper said the downward trend of wholesale prices from January to mid-May had been checked and prices had been moderately higher recently.

W. H. Lithgow Dies; Gas Light Co. Aid

William H. Lithgow, 66, superintendent for more than 36 years of east station, Washington Gas Light Co., died last night after a long illness at his home, 1408 Ridge street southeast.

Lithgow was the son of the late Florence J. Lithgow, a volunteer nurse during the Civil War. He was a member of the Anacostia Lodge, No. 16, Junior Order of American Mechanics, which will take a part in the short funeral services at his home tomorrow preceding church service at 2 p. m., in Emanuel Episcopal Church. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Keppler Lithgow; three daughters, Mrs. F. Mildred Higgins, wife of Maj. Hugh Higgins, Mrs. Elizabeth Webster and Ruth Lithgow, of Washington; a step-daughter, Mrs. Mary Biggs, of Camp Springs, Md.; a sister, Mrs. Mary M. Michaels; a brother, Arthur A. Lithgow; six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, all of Washington.

Russia Withdraws Parley Bolt Threat

Montreux, Switzerland, July 8 (U.P.).—Soviet Russia hedged tonight on her threat to bolt the Dardanelles conference when Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff assured the British and French delegations that he will not depart for Moscow.

It was believed the Soviets spread reports that they were preparing to quit in order to force Great Britain and other nations into granting concessions for Russia's security in the Black Sea.

French delegates expected the present difficulties to be surmounted, paving the way for conclusion of a new convention early next week, probably granting Turkey's demands to refortify the Dardanelles.

After previously rejecting the British proposal to allow His Majesty's fleet to enter the Black Sea in event of an Anglo-Russian conflict, Litvinoff cordially discussed the suggestion with the British delegation.

Litvinoff presented a counter-proposal to the British plan which would prevent all belligerent ships from traversing the Straits except to execute orders of the League of Nations.
